KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAVED ARMY.—The Saved Army renewed their attack on Keene on Saturday evening last. Lieut. Webb commanded and Mr. Mills gave the Bible reading. On Sunday at 3.30 and 7.30 p.m. services were also held, when Mr. Mills gave the Bible readings. Lieut. Webb was ably assisted by Lieut. Bennett, who shows great ability in singing and working in the army, and she appears to be very much liked by all parties who hope that she will remain with us. The usual services were held each night at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. Tozeland gave the Bible lesson on Tuesday. Since attacking this locality eight or ten have joined the army. Services will be held as usual during Sunday and the week following.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Mr. Mein has the contract for the brick work and is hard at work. He has three or four brick layers at work, but wants more.

THE METHODIST CHURCH.—Services will be held at 10.30 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. each Sunday, commencing next week, July 13th. The Rev. Mr. Sexsmith, late of British Columbia, will preach in the morning and the Rev. Jno. Tozeland in the evening.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.—The Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday Schools will hold a union picnic to Idyl Wild on Tuesday next. The boat leaves the wharf at 8.30 a.m. Come one come all.

ORANGE.—The Keene L.O.L. will meet on Saturday morning at 6.30 a.m. so as to enable all, who wish to do so, to go to Cobourg to celebrate the 12th in that place.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Jas. McNeil, W. M. of Keene lodge 374 G.R.C., A.F. and A.M. left on Tuesday evening last to attend the annual communication of the Grand Lodge in Toronto.

One of the papers wanted to know where a Keene correspondent had gone. Report says that he ran away from here to see his Pa, who lives some-where out north. Perhaps he will be able to write something, that his fastidious paper will publish when he returns ; but we hope that he wont inflict any more of his doggerel on Keene. Mr. P. McGregor left last week to visit the home of his childhood.

HAY CROP.—Farmers are haying and report the crops light. The rain last week has done an immense amount of good.

S. A. OUTPOST.—We understand that the Allendale outpost is not making headway, as the officer there is not popular.

The use of the woods had been kindly granted by Mr. Burnham, and as few districts of country enjoy such a real old-time forest, with so many pleasant nooks and glades, this natural beauty, to-gether with a fine day and a sumptuous repast, being the chief requisites of such a festivity, everything passed of pleasantly. Many thanks are due to our Secretary Treasurer, Mr. H. S. Armstrong, for his efficient assistance.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Young Men ?—Read This.

Fairweather's Column.

Our readers will have observed that the firm of W. Fairweather & Co., now occupy with their advertisements a whole column in the DAILY REVIEW, for which they have contracted by the year. This they have found to be necessary in order to obtain sufficient room for their announcements to the public as to the various branches of their business. On account of their multifarious and varied lines of goods, to which they are constantly adding carefully made selections from the choicest stocks of every kind that their numerous customers require, nothing being omitted to suit the most fastidious tastes. They state that their experience has proved the usefulness of the daily edition of the REVIEW, which they find superior to any other medium for promoting their local trade, and bringing to the notice of the public the novelties which they are continually introducing. This enterprising firm finds that it is amply repaid for its judicious expenditure in purchasing first-class goods, and announcing through a first-class medium.

POLICE COURT.

IMPATIENT JOB.

THURSDAY, July 10.—John Job was charged by Wm. Job, his brother, with assault. John pleaded guilty. His brother had interfered where he thought he had no right to, and John, not being possessed of the patience of his patriarchal namesake, assaulted him. The Magistrate evidently thought it a bad job, and fined John $2 and $3.30 costs.

ALLANDALE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ANNUAL PICNIC.—The Sabbath School held their annual picnic in Mr. J. Dinsdale's woods on Friday, July 4, under the management of Mr. Glover, Superintendent of the school, and Mr. English, teacher of the Bible Class. The rain descended refreshed the earth, but proved unpleasant for "young ducks" of this kind. However, Mr. Bell came to their relief, and through his kindness shelter was provided, refreshments were served, and all went off "merry as a marriage bell."

THE SAVED ARMY.—The meetings of the Saved Army were held during a portion of the week with tokens of success. Expectation had reached "fever heat" when a large congregation assembled on Sabbath evening, July 6th, to see and hear the new Lieutenant, who was appointed to this station, but with observant eye "the situation was taken in by the young army officer, and she left for a more congenial clime (?)" Keene. Thus numbers were disappointed. Services were held under the direction of Sergt. Monroe with a measure of success. "Obedience the first duty of a soldier!" Although the "folks" here may appear unrefined to some æsthetic minds, it is some time since we buried the war hatchet. We will not harm the young officers.

I.O.O.F.—The usual meeting of the Temple on Saturday evening was a pleasant and profitable one. Dr. Massie and others gave addresses, and Mr. Thompson, teacher, sang an excellent song suitable for the occasion. The lodge now numbers 75 members.

Health Insurance.

A thin, cadaverous-looking German, about fifty years of age, entered the office of a health insurance company on the first day in May and enquired, "Ish teman in vot insures de people's helts?" The agent politely answered, "I attend to that buisness, sir." "Vell I vants mine helts insured; vot you charge?" "Different prices," auswered the agent; "from three to ten pounds a year. Pay ten pounds a year, and you'll get ten pounds a week in case of sickness." "Vell," said Mynheer, "I vants ten pounds vort." The agent enquired the state of his health. "Vell, I is sick all de time. Ise shust out to bed two, tree hours a tay, and the doctor says he can do nothing more good for me." "If that's the state of your health," returned the agent, "we can't insure it." At this Mynheer bristled up in great anger. "You must tink me a pig fool vot! you tink I come pay you ten pounds for insuring my helts ven I vas vell?"—English exchange.

THE fire at Lachine which originated in the Salaberry hotel, destroyed about forty houses, principally occupied by poor labourers. About 60 families are rendered homeless. The actual loss is estimated about $50,000, one quarter of of which is covered by insurance. The fire spread to the water's edge, destroying the premises of Daousts & Archambault, boat manufacturers. The homeless people, about three hundred in number, were housed in tents. A subscription list has been started for their relief.

THE farmers of the North-West are beginning to see through the designs of Grit agitators and their attempt to manipulate the Farmer's Union for their own pecuniary advantage and decline to be made tools of by unscrupulous and unpatriotic partisans. The Thornhill Union has already formally severed its connection with the body on account of its degeneracy into a political organization, and other branches will shortly follow the same course.

IT ISN'T Extravagant to claim that Zopesa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

They Learn How to Buy.

They shut up schools, set the children free to go a-shopping with their parents. Let the children come! They can learn how to buy for themselves and for you.

Let them come to our stores. They will find that all prices are marked plainly. They will find and you'll experience it, that from us a child can buy as cheaply as a grown-up person.

Teach your children—the shoppers of the future—to make good selections and save you, and themselves and us the trouble of exchanging. Nevertheless, if you'll trust them to do your errands you known that whatever does not please may be brought to us and we will willingly meet your objections.

On each Saturday night all our hands are on duty and our stores are open late. People, somehow, put off buying certain things until Saturday, and we make that day a long one to serve the people.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features o such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

THE CANOE PARADE.

Numerous Illuminated Boats on the Lake —The Fireworks Display.

The second illuminated canoe parade on the Little Lake, under the auspices of the Peterborough Boating Club, which was held on Thursday evening, July 10th, was a most successful affair. It is doubtful if even those who proposed these weekly canoe meets, expected that they would create such an interest as was manifested on that evening.

Soon after eight o'clock boats, carrying two or more Chinese lanterns, began to move out from the Club boat house, Mr. English's boat house and other places where the canoes are kept, and were paddled down to the lake, which by half past eight o'clock was dotted with canoes and almost a blaze of light—in fact, an imaginative person might compare it to a reflection of the heavens. Even the meteors were not wanting, as their places were supplied by the rockets.

It was nearly nine o'clock before Col. Harry Rogers, who had at the request of the officers of the Boating Club, consented to take command, got the canoes into line. They formed in a line out from Burnham's point, facing the east, and moved down the lake. The sight was a magnificent one, especially when the canoes came opposite the cemetery point and the order to wheel to the left was carried out. There were between fifty and sixty canoes in the line. Several of them carried a number of lanterns arranged in different ways, some presenting the appearance of a pyramid of light. By no means the smallest was a gigantic many coloured lantern carried at the prow of one canoe. The relative dimensions of this enormous headlight and those of the craft that bore it would, one would have thought, seriously displaced the centres of flotation and gravitation; and as to its owner, Shakespeare's would not have been at all irrelevant.

"The man should be put into the lantern"

After wheeling opposite the cemetery point, the boats again moved up the lake, and Roman candles were fired from many of the canoes. The ladies entered authusiastically into the sport, and many of them set off the candles while their partners in the boats handled the paddles. The rockets were sent up from a pier on the lake, and the fireworks added not a little to the brilliancy and success of the affair. When the boats came back to the starting point, they moved around in a circle and the manoeuvres were continued until about ten o'clock.

The parade was witnessed by hundreds of persons, who lined the shore on Burnham's Point and viewed the brilliant scene from other places. There were more canoes on the water than those carrying lanterns, but, as the parade is to be continued weekly, by next week every boat will be supplied with illumination. The City Band, which was on Burnham's Point, played many selections during the evening.

One suggestion might be offered, and that is for those managing the canoes to be more prompt in getting to the rendezvous and falling into line, so that no time may be lost and the manoeuvres may all be gone through by ten o'clock. The Boating Club are to be congratulated on the success of the parade, as it was a grand treat to those who witnessed it.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION,

Conflicting Rumours—Strength of the Candidates—The First Ballot.

CHICAGO, July 10.—John Kelly held secret conclave last night to which delegates from various states were invited. An attempt to put Hendricks in the field if McDonald breaks down is being made. The Chicago Times says that whatever may have been the effect of the day's work upon the Cleveland movement, it did not appear that the supporters of the other candidates had made any progress towards union of their forces. It is rumoured that the Thurman movement will be headed off to-day by placing Hoadly in nomination. The Tribune says that Thurman men are casting about for a Vice-Presidential candidate, and are looking toward New York. Several Flower men were suggesting last night that Thurman and Flower would sweep New York like a cyclone. As a dark horse, Hewitt's name is also mentioned this morning. It is said that a number of Indiana and Western men favoured bringing out Hendricks after the first ballot. Some papers claim that Cleveland's strength is waning and Bayard gaining. The general impression, though, is that the situation is unchanged, and that Cleveland will probably get the nomination.

STRENGTH OF THE CANDIDATES

The Tribune puts Cleveland down at 397 votes on the first ballot, and Baynard at 147. The Times says that Baynard is looming up, and that Butler has witdrawn from the contest and will support Baynard. His estimate is: Cleveland, 350; Baynard, 182; McDonald, 92; Thurman, 94; Carlisle, 26; others scattering.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was attended by an immense gathering of spectators, and the feeling was intense. A series of resolutions regretting the physical infirmity of Tilden, praising his state and municipal administrations in New York, regretting that his health would not permit him to undertake the task of cleansing the augean stables of the national administration, landing his patriotism and denouncing the fraud of 1876 were adopted. The platform committee presented a long report.

THE FIRST BALLOT.

A motion to proceed the ballot was carried. A ballot was taken with the following result, 547 being necessary for a choice:

Cleveland, 392; Bayard, 170; Thurman, 88; Randall, 78; McDonald, 56; Carlisle, 27; Fowler, 4; Hoadley, 3; Hendricks, 1; Tilden, 1.

A motion to adjourn till to-morrow was defeated, but motions similar in effect are being proposed continually for the purpose of preventing a second ballot to-night.

Finally as no business could be transacted, the convention adjourned till 10 a. m. to-morrow.

BELLEVILLE.

CRUELLY DECEIVED.—Miss Wannamaker, a lass of 18 summers, arrived in the city on Tuesday from Madoc in search of protection against a man who married her some months ago. Her story is that last August a man named John Minnecott called at her father's house, seven miles north of Madoc, representing himself a single man she reciprocated the love he bestowed upon her, and after a brief court-ship they were united in wedlock. Her husband was in the employ of the Central Ontario railway putting up telegraph poles and for several months nothing occurred to mar their happiness. But one day recently, John's wife, Miss Wannamaker heard that her husband had another wife and two children living in Cornwall, Eng. Wife No. 2 became very indignant over this discovery, and insistd that her husband should divulge the truth, which he did, admitting that he had a wife living "at home." She at once left him, but John threatened that if she did not return to his domicile he would do her some injury, whereupon she came to the city, found employment in a hotel and applied to the police to protect her.

She had 200 passengers and 800 tons of freight.—Globe.

The Printers' Steake.

Everything is quiet around the outside of the Globe and Mail offices. Both of these papers claim to have recovered from the "inconveniencies" caused by the strike. A dozen of printers from Rochester and vicinity have arrived. They were brought to the city by an agent of the Mail. Wednesday night they were kept in Hamilton. They were not registered by name at the hotel at which they stopped, but were put down by the number stowed in each room. They were then brought to the city early yesterday morning. Three men arrived from Ottawa and will go to work on the Mail office. It is asserted that some of the men who left the Globe office will resume work in that establishment, whether the difficulty is arranged or not. To a World reporter some of the men denied this last night. —World.

VALUABLE IN INDIGESTION.

Mr. Daniel T. Nelson, Chicago, says: "I find it a pleasant and valuable remedy in indigestion, particularly in overworked men."

Bush Fires.

Bush fires are already doing much damage in the lumbering districts of the Ottawa Valley, and yet we are only at the beginning of the heated midsummer period in Canada. These fires are too often caused by criminal carelessness. Millions of dollars damage have resulted from the want of ordinary care on the part of individuals who kindle camp fires or light their pipes in the woods. Too often the railway companies, who do not look after the roadside flames kindled by sparks from their locomotives, are to blame. # Daily Evening Review

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1884.

THE BLAKE-MOWAT TRICK FAILS.

Following the lead of the Reform journals of West Ontario, the Reform electors of that riding are objecting to the recent Reform amendments of our constitution by which Mr. Mowat makes parliamentary vacancies by purchase and Mr. Blake chooses the representatives. The delegates to the Reform convention at Stouffville duly assembled but they refused to submit to this impertment dictation. Mr. Blake did not venture to appear personally, no doubt remembering his narrow escape from defeat when pulling the wire for Sir Richard Cartwright, but he sent a letter which exposed the whole game. He admitted that the vacancy who caused by Mr. Wheler's acceptance of an office of emolument, thus proving the mendacity of the Globe in denying and the accuracy of the REVIEW in asserting that the vacancy had been purchased by Mr. Mowat—at our expense. He also stated his desire that Mr. Edgar should be a candidate, and confessed that he had already interfered in his behalf, thus divulging the impertinent dictation of the titular leader of the Reform party.

The meeting revolted from such tyranny. Objecting to the hurried calling of the meeting and to this outside interference with their constitutional rights, they declined to obey the whip, and adjourned till July 23rd. If Mr. Edgar is then forced upon the constituency, he will find many Reformers voting against him and the insulting dictation that he represents.

MODERN FOREST ECONOMY.

THE approaching International Forestry Exhibition at Edinburgh, among its other benefits, has already called forth from the pen of the Rev. John Croumbie Brown, L. L. D., a most useful work entitled "An Introduction to the Study of Modern Forest Economy." This work is really much more than a mere introduction, for the author who has already published many instructive volumes on the subject of forestry, gives us in this book a fund of information in regard to it. One of his chief objects is to show the urgent necessity for the establishment of a National School of Forestry in Great Britain, where scientific and practical instruction can be given for training up forestry officials. He gives a forcible illustration of the want of such institutions from the experience of the Government of India. That Government, which with those of the Australian and South African colonies, sets an example to the Mother country and to Canada, some time ago adopted a system of forest conservancy with a distinct branch of the service to administer it. Neither trained foresters or the means of training, them could be found. Those who were selected for the service positively had to be sent to Germany and France to study the science in the schools of Forestry in those countries. It certainly is not creditable to the British Empire that such a state of things should exist.

One part of Mr. Brown's work describes the extensive destruction of forests in Europe and other parts of the world, with the disastrous consequences that have followed. In connection with this he shows how replanting has been extensively adopted as a means of putting an end to droughts on the one hand and to floods and inundations on the other, as well as for the fixing of shifting sands, and not alone is this the case in France and Germany, the leading nations in the science of forestry, but even among people supposed to be so backward as the Spaniards and Hungarians.

The most important part of the work, and the most instructive for this country, is the excellent description of modern forest economy as developed and practiced in many European countries with Germany and France at their head. From this we may learn how constant and regular crops can be obtained from forest as from agricultural land, without the forests being destroyed to get a return once for all at the cost of the sacrifice of this valuable property.

As our author describes the system it is: "All being so arranged as to secure simultaneously, and without prejudice to one or other of them, an improved condition of the forest, a sustained supply of products, and a natural reproduction of the forests by self-sown seed."

What has been and is now being done in those countries can also be done in Canada, and we should learn the lesson before it is too late.

WHAT HAS BECOME OF IT?

While so much comment, both favourable and unfavorable, has taken place on the three and a half per cent. loan recently effected by the Finance Minister of the Dominion, people have been losing sight of the fact that the Treasurer of Ontario was at the same time engaged in the endeavour to float a four or a four and a half per cent. loan; and as it is the first loan the Province has ever had to raise it would be interesting to know what has become of it.

We have no doubt there are many faithful followers of the Mowat Government who will be startled to hear that the Province is seeking to raise a loan. They have been putting implicit confidence in the statements made by the Government and repeated with such gusto by the Grit press and politicians, that the Province still had an available surplus of four or five millions, and they naturally want to know what the Treasurer wants to borrow money for, with all these millions in the Treasury? Well, at the last session, the Government at last began to admit that the criticisms of the Opposition were correct—that all these millions they had figured up were not in the treasury as an available surplus—that practically they were going to have difficulty in meeting the payments which the Province was under obligations to make to the railways; and the Treasurer proposed a scheme of borrowing money to meet them as they fell due, and spreading the repayment over forty years. His scheme was in fact to sell forty-year annuities, which he was confident he could do at a rate of interest not more than four and a half per cent., which would necessitate the Province eventually paying over six million dollars for the money to meet our obligations of between two and three millions to railways.

In the beginning of May the Treasurer issued his prospectus for his loan, and by this time he had become so confident that he believed he would have it taken at four per cent. and attached an illustration of the amount that would have to be tendered for a $100 annuity on that basis; while the Globe thus announced the prospect of this first venture of Ontario as a borrower:—

"These annuities are to be paid every half year in sums of not less than $50, and of course are guaranteed by the full credit of the Province. We should think that such an investment will be a highly popular one. When stocks of all kinds are so variable and so much at the mercy of the 'bulls' and 'bears,' many will gladly avail themselves of an investment entirely safe and yielding a fair though not extravagant rate of interest. Ontario ought to be able to get all she wants at 4 per cent. interest at the very outside, and a present payment of $1,987.25, or in round numbers $2,000, will yield an annuity of $100 for 40 years, payable every half year as regularly as the day comes round."

Many people had their doubts about the feasibility of floating such a loan in Canada; but unlike the course of the Grits when a Dominion loan is announced, no Conservative paper or politician had a word to say to mar the success of the loan—whatever their doubts they were too patriotic to stand in the woy of their Province making the best bargain possible by expressing them at that time; and the Globe assured us there was no doubt whatever of the great success which would attend the loan:—

"Tenders for not less than an annuity of $100 will be received up to the 24th of June, and we have little doubt that long before that day tenders for much more than it is proposed to issue will be sent in, and at rates in correspondence with the recognizably good financial standing of the Province."

We naturally looked forward with some interest to see how far these predictions would be verified, and expected several days in advance to see the Globe preparing the public for the final announcement of success by intimating the large number of tenders received. When no such intimation appeared we thought it was reserved to make the final announcement all the more striking; and when the Globe of the 25th came to hand we looked for the headings in large type; "Great Success of the Provincial Loan!" "Tenders Greatly in Excess of the Amount Asked!" But neither in large or small type, on that or any subsequent day, have we seen a word about what has become of the Provincial loan.

What is the matter? Of course the Mail can hardly be expected to get information from the Mowat Government; but there is the World, which claims to be high in the confidence of the party—why don't it get the start of the slow-going Globe by publishing the result of the Provincial Treasurer's venture? Perhaps the first Provincial loan is such an insignificant affair that the papers don't think it worthy of notice—or can it be possible that after all the glowing anticipations, that the scheme has fallen flat, that no body wants the annuities, and that the Treasurer has been unable to float his loan?—but we dismiss the thought, it cannot! Perhaps it might be as well, however, for some one to rise and explain.—Owen Sound Times.

Searching for the Drowned.

DETROIT, July 9.—The almost distracted parents of Emmanuel Davis, Millie Beech and Louis Charbotte were at the Sandwich mineral springs nearly all day yesterday searching in wood and marsh for the bodies of the three persons drowned on Sunday, but could find no trace of them. Emmandel Davis and Louis Charbotte, the boys who are supposed to be drowned, were great chums, and went off for a day's pleasure almost constantly together. On Sunday afternoon young Davis left home, evidently for the purpose of visiting some place of resort, for he gave $40 to his mother, at the same time saying the less money he had with him the less he would spend. Various conjectures were formed by friends of the missing ones, but they finally concluded that they were drowned. It is said that neither of the young men knew much about navigating a boat. Mary Maney, the young girl rescued, has returned to her home in Detroit, having completely recovered.

So we barted,—pledged irrevocably one to the other; and whenever we have met, since that summer, it has been by strategy. My mother from the day when the doom of my love was decreed—has been deaf to my pleadings and my heart-rending cries,—as the golden calf was to the indignant denunciations of Moses. I was hurried prematurely into society thrown into a maelstrom of gaiety that whirled me as though I were a dancing dervish,—and left me apparently no leisure for retrospection or regret; or for the indulgence of the rosy dream that lay like a lovely morning cloud above and behind me. At long intevals I had stolen interviews with Belmont, then he went far south to study for a tropical landscape, and was absent two years. When he returned, beaming with hope, the cloud over our lives seemed silvered at the edges, and he was sanguine that his picture would compel recognition, and bring him fame,—which, in art, means food. But Erle Palma had resolved otherwise. It was our misfortune, that in my haste to see the picture, I neglected my usual precautionary measures to elude suspicion, and your guardian tracked me to the attic, where the finishing touches were being put on. Unluckily Belmont was never a favourite among the artists, and he explained to me that it was because he was proud, reticent,—and held himself aloof from their club life and social haunts. Taking advantage of his personal unpopularity, your magnanimous guardian organized a cabal against him. No sooner was the painting exhibited, than a triad of ridicule and abuse was poured upon it, and the journal most influential in forming and directing artistic taste, contained an overwhelmingly adverse criticism, which was written by a particular friend and chum of Erle Palma,—who, I am convinced, caused its preparation. A more rigid surveillance was exerted over me, and the dancing dervishes crowned me queen of their revels. By day and by night I was surrounded with influences intended to beguile me from the past, to narcotize memory,—to make me in reality the heartless, soulless, scoffing creature that I certainly seem. But Erle Palma has found me stiff tough clay, and, despite his efforts, I have have been true to the one love of my life. Repeatedly I have been urged to accept offers of marriage that revolted every instinct of my nature,—that seemed insulting to a woman who long ago gave away all that was best, in her heart's idolatrous love. Unable to conquer the opposition he encountered here, Belmont went west and finally strayed into the solitudes of Oregon and British America. At one time, for a year, I did not know whether he were living or dead,—and that torture I silently endured! Six months ago he returned, buoyed by the hope of retrieving his past; and one of his pictures was bought by a man in Philadelphia, who has commissioned hin to paint two more landscapes. At last we began to dream of a humble little home somewhere, where at least we should have the blessing of our mutual love and presence. The thought was magnetic,—it showed me that there was some good left in my poor scoffing soul; that I possessed capacity for happiness, for self-sacrificing devotion to my noble Belmont,—that made our future seem a canticle. Oh! how decicious was the release I imagined!"

She groaned aloud, and rocked herself to and fro, with a hopelessness that awed and grieved her pale mute listener.

"The Fates are fond of Erle Palma. They pet him to the end, for he is a man after their own flinty hearts; pitiless as those grim three, whom Michael Angelo must have seen during nightmare. Exposure to the rigour of two winters in the far North-West, has seriously undermined Belmont's health. His physician apprehends consumption, and orders him to hasten to Southern Europe, or South America."

"Feeling as you do, dear Olga, how can you think of marrying Mr. Congreve?"

"Marrying him! I do not,—I am not yet so degraded as that implies. While Belmont lives,—I belong to him,—I love him as I never have loved any one else; but when he is taken from me,—only Heaven sees—what will be my wretched fate. I can bear the life I lead no longer, and ere many days I shall burst my fetters, and snatch freedom—no matter what cost I pay hereafter."

"Olga you cannot mean that you intend——"

"No matter what I intend, I shall not falter when the time comes. Now you know all my sorrow, and no matter what happens you must not betray my movements. From this house my letters to Belmont have been intercepted, and our carrespondence has been long conducted under cover to his mother."

"When did you see him last?"

"In September. Even then his cough rendered me anxious, but he laughed at my apprehensions. Oh God! be merciful to him and to me! I know I am unworthy,—I know I have a bitter wicked tongue, and a world of hate in my heart,—but if God will be pitiful, if He only spares my darling's life,—I will try to be a better woman."

"Perhaps if you appealed frankly to Mr. Palma, and showed him the dreadful suffering of your heart, he would relent."

"You don't know him. Does a lion relent, with his paw upon his prey?"

"His opposition must arise from an erroneous view of what would best promote your happiness. He cannot be actuated by merely vindictive motives, and I am sure he would sympathize with you, if he realized the intensity of your feelings."

"I would as soon expect ancient Cheops to dissolve in tears, at the recital of my woes; or that statue of Washington in Union Square to dismount and wipe my eyes!"

"Tell him so! Try him just once more, and I have an abiding faith that he will generously respond to your appeal."

Olga looked compassionately at her companion for an instant, and the old bitter laugh jarred upon the girl's ears.

"Poor little dove trying your wings in the upper air,—flashing the silver in the sun;—fancying you are free to circle in the heavens so blue above you!

She tossed aside the bedclothes, and sprang out upon the floor, wrapping herself in her cherry colored shawl.

"Five o'clock, I daresay. Out of doors it is gray daylight, and I must go back to my own room unobserved. What a world of sorrowful pity shines in your wonderful eyes? Do you know why Cleopatra is coming here?"

"Olga, I do not in the least understand half you are saying."

Olga's large white hand smoothed back the hair that clouded the girl's forehead, and she asked, almost incredulously:

"Don't you really know that the Sorceress of the Nile drifts hither in her gilded barge? You have heard of Brunella Carew, the richest woman in the Antilles? She is the most dangerous of smooth-skinned witches—as fascinating as Phryne, but more wisely discreet. When you see her you will be at once reminded of Owen Meredith s 'Fatality:'

'Live hair afloat with snakes of gold,
And a throat as white as snow,
And a stately figure and foot,
And that faint pink smile, so sweet, so cold.'

Just now this Cuban widow is the fashionable lioness; she is also a pet clientele of Erle Palma, and comes here to-day on a brief visit. Heaven grant she prove his Lamia."

She left the room, closing the door noislessly, and Regina was lost in perplexing conjectures concerning the significance of her parting warning.

It was not yet eight o'clock when she descended to the breakfast-room, but Mr. Palma was already there, and stood at the window, with an open newspaper, which he appeared to scan very intently.

In answer to her subdued "good morning" he merely bowed, without turning his head, and she rang the bell and took her place at the table.

While she scalded and wiped the cups (one of his requirements), he walked to the hearth, glanced at his watch, and said:

"Let me have my coffee at once. I have an early engagement. As it threatens snow, you must keep indoors to-day."

"I am obliged to attend the Cantata rehearsal at Mrs. Brompton's."

"Then I will order the carriage placed at your disposal. What hour?"

"One o'clock?"

Upon her plate lay a sealed envelope, and as she put it in her pocket, his keen eyes searched her countenance.

"Did you sleep well? I should judge you had not closed your eyes."

"I wrote a long letter to mother, and afterward I could not sleep."

"You look as if you had grown five years older since you gave me my coffee yesterday. When the rehearsal ends, I wish you to come directly home and go to sleep, for there will be company here to-day, and it might be rather unflattering to me as guardian to present my ward to strangers and imagine their comments on your weary, hollow eyes, and face as blanched, as 'pale as Seneca's Paulina.'"

FARM AND GARDEN.

CLOVER AND STRAW.—If the farmer has any clean bright straw left over, he can use it to good advantage for layering it with partially cured clover. By putting in a layer of straw every little while, even green clover-hay may be kept in fine condition. The layers of straw absorb the moisture and keep the mass from heating enough to damage it. In this way clover may be hauled in the same day it is cut, thus insuring brighter and better hay, with less risk incurred from catching weather. This plan also renders available the most profitable method of disposing of our surplus supply of straw. This straw seems to absorb much aroma and essence of the clover, for I notice that stock will eat the whole up clean when so mixed, and thrive upon it better than when fed on clover alone. A little salt sprinkled through the mass while storing will render it still more palatable and also assist in preserving it. In many sections of the country threshing, this year, will occur before the second crop of clover is cut. The straw will thus be provided for this purpose. Sowed corn cut with the mower is very hard to cure—in fact it will bleach out before it will cure thoroughly; but placed in layers with plenty of straw between, it will keep every time. When fed it may be cut up, straw and all, with a little bran sprinkled over. —Prairie Farmer.

BUTTER PACKING.—O. M. Tinkham, secretary of the Vermont Dairymen's Association, has devised some improvements in packing butter. Instead of lining his packing boxes with muslin, he uses a certain kind of brown paper, which is odorless and tasteless and costs very little. He also lines his cases thoroughly with a layer of felting half an inch thick. This, it is alleged keeps out the heat most effectually.

Mr. O'Connor is an excellent scholar and an efficient teacher, so that the Lindsay Board has made a very judicious choice. We only regret that we are losing Mr. O'Connor in Peterborough.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Moderate to fresh south to west winds, fair, warmer weather, with a few cool showers or thunder storms more particularly in the northern portion.

A Pastor Welcomed.

The Rev. J. Tovell, the new pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, arrived in Peterborough on Thursday evening. He and Mrs. Tovell were met at the parsonage by a member of the members of that church, from whom he received a hearty welcome. The ladies had provided a tea, and after the repast had been partaken of a very pleasant evening was spent in social intercourse. Among those present were the Rev. T. Manning, B.A., the Rev. F. McAmmond, B.A., and the Rev. J. W. Butcher. The new pastor and his people appeared to be favorably impressed with each other.

Lost a Hand.

Michael Mallon, who has been working with Mr. Redmond, in Otonabee, came into town on Thursday to draw his pension as a retired soldier. He had formerly worked in Mr. Hazlitt's saw mill, and in the afternoon he went into the mill. While in it he tried to pick up a stick near a circular saw, but in doing so he staggered and his left hand came in contact with the saw. His fingers were terribly cut up and mangled. He was taken to Mrs. Cain's boarding house and Dr. King was called in. The surgeon decided that the fingers would have to be amputated, and, assisted by Dr. Bell, he amputated the hand just above the knuckles.

A Surprise, a Chase, and a Capture.

On Thursday evening at a village not ten miles from Peterborough, about nine thirty p. m. might have been seen three men, two young, the third more advanced in age, taking a brief rest in the parlour of a comfortable hostelry. The young apparently trusted to their own legs to carry them home, the more advanced to the (we were going to use the hackneyed "trusty steed," but the sequel proved it otherwise) horse which waited not patiently for its owner. Soon the trio rose, bade adieu, and girded up their loins for the journey home. Now came the surprise. No horse, no vehicle, no anything. Then there was hurrying to and fro, shouts rose upon the evening air and dust upon the dry high-road as the three—the advanced in age as best he could—dashed in pursuit of the flying steed. This however impatient and perhaps homesick animal was nevertheless weary from a long day's work, and, to make a long story short, was captured, much to the relief (both mental and more especially physical) of its panting owner within a mile of the place of escape. Moral: Tie up your horse.

LACROSSE IN THE EAST.

MATCH PLAYED AT THE ODDFELLOWS' DEMONSTRATION.

How the Peterborough Boys Lost One Match and Won Another—The Trip to Brockville.

The first twelve of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, accompanied by their President, Mr. H. LeBrun, and about twenty-five other gentlemen, left Peterborough on Tuesday morning, July 8th, for Brockville, to witness the Oddfellows' grand demonstration, or at least the lacrosse part of it, between our boys and the Metropolitans, of Ottawa. As will be seen by the list of names below, our representatives on the field were not quite the same dozen that left Peterborough on August 17th, 1881, to "collar" the Gildersleeve cup in Kingston. The old time faces of Harry Phelan, Joe Joyal, Mike McDonald, P. Rudkins, Jack Simpson and Jack Donoghue were missed from the jolly crowd. But their memory and the vacancies left by them have time and again been honored and upheld by the noble field work of those who now stand in their tracks.

As usual, before the team had gone many miles the respective vocal musicians were called on for a "bit of a song." No excuses were offered and consequently no pressing was required. Song followed song joyously, from the "Green Grass" to the "Spicy Isles" and everything went on merrily until some person by mistake began the old "Good-Bye" racket. Then it was that Conductor Bill Morris appeared on the scene in regular Peterborough policeman style. He explained to the various vocalists the justice of his plea, and wound up what should be recorded as a masterpiece of oratory by comparing that song to the "Horace Greeley" story told in Mark Twain's "Roughing It." He then threw a half dollar in the hat in aid of the mouth organ fund and retired to the baggage car. When the train drew out from Hastings that village was one dollar richer—that was the amount collected—and minus a mouth organ, and with that instrument the boys amused themselves for the rest of the journey. Everybody seemed delighted with the change, and every baby passenger on board ate crackers for its mamma and stopped crying. The boys arrived in Belleville in time to catch the first train on the G. T. R. going east. It was impossible for them all to be accommodated with seats in one car. Those who got seats kept them and those who didn't took the only alternative and stood up. In this manner they travelled quietly, and after cleaning out the Kingston lunch room on their arrival in that city, proceeded on to Brockville, their destination, which town they made shortly before 3 o'clock.

Brockville looked her prettiest. Flags flying from the various public buildings and banners and appropriate mottoes suspended across the principal streets added greatly to the various other decorations which were made to attract the eye of the visitor. The rest of the afternoon was spent in taking in most of the principal sights and public buildings, for instance, the various churches on Church street, the Court House, Opera House, Victoria Hall, Revere House, etc., etc. Too much cannot be said of the kindness and courtesy of the various committees of the I. O. O. F. Demonstration, who hired hacks for the accommodation of the boys and spared no pains in making this visit an enjoyable one.

They then assembled at the St. Lawrence Hall, their hotel, and after going through a programme of music spontaneously retired to rest at 10 o'clock, according to orders from Captain Coughlin, who, to his credit be it said, is a strict disciplinarian.

Wednesday morning was spent pleasantly sailing on the St. Lawrence and being Yankees for about ten minutes. About three o'clock the teams marched to the grounds and took up their positions as follows:—

| Peterborough. | | Metropolitans. |
|---|---|---|
| J. Giroux | Goal | Dr. Cousins |
| P. Myles | Point | J. Seybold |
| M. Tierney | Cover Point | G. Popham |
| J. Howden | Defence Field | J. Grant |
| W. J. Scott | " " | M. Egan |
| A. Yelland | " " | J. Whyte |
| J. Sheehy | Centre Field | P. Lewis |
| R. Kelly | Home Field | A. Devine |
| R. H. Forty e | " " | J. Burke |
| C. Rutherford | " " | J. Dunn |
| W. Rudkins | 2nd Home | J. Hutton |
| G. Giroux | 1st Home | A. Perkins |
| J. Coughlin | Field Captain | M. M Fyke |

Umpires.—Messrs. Fairbairn and Turner. Referee—Mr. Smart, President Brockville Lacrosse Club.

At the face Yelland neatly scooped the ball from the two centres and running up made a nice drop on the Mets' goal, which was caught by Popham and returned down to the Peterborough flags, where it stayed until it was put through by Hutton, after three minutes of a struggle.

The second game lasted seven minutes. Some nice dropshots were made by Kelly, but the Ottawa men were too much for Peterborough, and when the above time had elapsed, Hutton was again the lucky man.

The third game was but a repitition of the first, the ball being put through by Burke, after three minutes playing.

Such a result was so unexpected that it seemed to paralyze the boys as well as their numerous friends. The grounds were large to a fault, and uneven, still the boys were downed fairly and by superior players.

On the way home the team took satisfaction out of the Okas, of Belleville, by beating them three straight games in 6½, 26 and 31 minutes of actual play.

NOTES.

Percy Miles is registered in the list of wounded.

Billy Rudkins never had the ball on his stick in the match with the Mets. This was unprecedented.

You should hear our new song. It goes:

"On our road down,
On our road down,
Harry LeBrun, etc."

The Ottawa Sun says that it was owing to the Mets. having, a few days previously, played a match with the Montrealers that they won at Brockville, and the Ottawa Citizen concludes a good account of the match as follows:—"It must not be supposed that there was poor playing done by the Peterboroughs. They are well known as a crack club, and their easy defeat was a surprise. The playing was sharp and checking good. The Mets. learned from the Montrealers how to uncover, and their team play in this match was the best they have yet shown. This is a strong argument why they should play as many first-class clubs as possible. The great point is to play a manly game free from roughness, using all the skill available. We are happy to say not a scratch was received by a member of either team."

Saved from a Horrible Death

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Even the children say Ball's Corsets are the best. Look for them at Turnbull's, he keeps a full range in all sizes.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Grover Cleveland, Governor of New York, is a native of new Jersey, born at Caldwell, Essex County, March 18, 1837. His father was a minister, and the candidate has living relatives prominent among the Protestant clergy, not to speak of his numerous clerical ancestors. After receiving such instruction as was procurable from the common school in various places of the parental residence, young Cleveland was sent to the academy situated at Clinton, Oneida county, N.Y. Upon leaving this seat of learning he went to New York City, where he filled for some time the position of clerk in an institution of charity. He is next heard of making his way west in company with an epterprising young man, with Cleveland, O., as his objective point; but visiting, while on his way, an uncle residing in Buffalo, he was induced to remain in that city, as clerk in the store of his relative He was 18 years of age at the time, an ambitious young fellow, possessed of the earnest desire to become a successful lawyer. His uncle favoured this aspiration, and we soon find the youth a clerk in the office of a prominent law firm and at the same time enjoying the comforts of a good home at his relative's house. He was admitted to the bar in 1859. His first political office. Was an assistant district attorney for the county of Erie, under C. C. Torrance, He held the position for three years, until the end of superior's term of office, when he was nominated for district attorney on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated. In 1870, five years after this failure, he was elected sheriff of Erie county; and in November, 1881, was elected Mayor of Buffalo by a decisive majority. His incumbency of the office was successful and popular.

In the fall election of 1882 Mr. Cleveland was elected Governor of New York, on a Democratic nomination, by a majority of nearly 200,000 votes over his companion, Charles J. Folger, Secretary of the Treasury. This overwhelming success was due chiefly to the "bolting" and absence from the polls of Republican voters, but it gives him a great advantage in competition with others for the Presidential nomination. He is a bachelor and very devoted to his official duties.

Sabbatarianism in Scotland.

A remarkable continuation of the recent Sunday desecration riots at Strome Ferry occurred recently at Macduff. It appears that some of the fishermen of the town, while returning from the herring fishing, had sent the crew of the trawler a considerable distance from the coast on Sunday, and it was resolved as a protest against such conduct to render it impossible to land the fish. Accordingly, when the vessel put into the harbour, a large body of fishermen marched up to the quay, and seizing the cargo —40 boxes of white fish—pitched some of them back on board the vessel and some into the sea. The crew of the trawler offered very little resistance, evidently perceiving that it was useless. When they had finished throwing the boxes, the fishermen proceeded to cast off the steamer's ropes and her engines were ungeared. The steamer was placed in a very dangerous position, as she was lying at the harbour mouth. The crew, however, managed to keep one rope fast ashore until they geared her engines, when she steamed out of the harbour amid a chorus of groans, yells, cheers, &c., accompanied by a shower of iron bolts, stones, &c. An outbreak of the same kind occurred recently at Burghead.

About Advertising.

Since the death of Holloway, the pill man of London, and the publication of facts about his advertising expenses, interesting facts about other great advertisers are coming to light. A well known firm of soap manufacturers are spending $150,000 to $200,000 a year. The most profitable investment they ever made is said to be Focardi's statute, "You Dirty Boy," for the marble of which they gave $2,500.

The Flooding of the Rideau.

A deputation from along the Rideau canal had an interview with the Acting Minister of Railways, Mr. Pope, with regard to the damage done by the flooding of the Rideau in the spring. They suggested that in the future spring freshets could be avoided by letting the water pass through the canal. Mr. Pope promised to consider the matter.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's porous plaster. Sold by J. D. Tully.

MR. BLAKE'S LIEUTENANTS.

Mr. Blake, who it will be remembered obtained a seat in the House of Commons by purchase, the funds being found by his ally Mr. Mowat—out of the Ontario treasury—has since used similar devices on behalf of some of his friends. He used his personal hold upon a creature and tool of his own to procure a seat for Sir Richard Cartwright. And now he has purchased, once more by the intervention of Mr. Mowat and again out of the Ontario treasury, a seat for Mr. J. D. Edgar. And now while in the market Mr. Blake would do well to purchase a policy upon which his lieutenants and creatures can agree. On the important subject of independence Sir Richard Cartwright has pronounced himself favourably, while Mr. Edgar, not quite so wrong headed, has denounced it, though in his fashion of doing even the right thing in the wrong way, he very improperly dubs the advocates of independence "irresponsible rags."

DUE CREDIT.

THE Toronto Globe has the following editorial note:—

"The Peterborough organ of the Ottawa Government is the last to glorify the good effect of the changes in the Northwest land policy secured by earnest and sustained effort on the part of the Liberal press, but with characteristic obliquity of vision the organ does not give the credit where it belongs."

With the passing remark, that though in accord generally with the Ottawa Government, we are not the organ of any body of men, we may say that the reason why we do not attribute the Northwest land policy or any change in it to the effort of the Liberal press is that it would be a falsehood. The opposition journals do not suggest improvements but content themselves with abusing the Government, all that it does, and the country itself. We hardly thought it necessary to give credit where it belongs for our excellent land policy and the minor changes made to improve it from time to time, because the facts are so well known that it seemed needless. To oblige the Globe, however, we will say that we give the credit in the first place to the people of Canada for having the good sense to dismiss their incompetent Reform advisers, under whom the settlement of the Northwest was making infinitesimal progress, and for entrusting the administration of the country to the competent Conservative statesmen under whom such rapid progress is being made. In the second place we give the credit to the Macdonald Administration for meriting the trust reposed in them by the people. The quarrel of the Globe and its friends is with the people of Canada.

CANADIAN IRON ORES.

WE are always glad to encourage the Globe on the rare occasions when it desists from its usual practice of telling falsehoods to cry down the credit of Canada, and tells the truth about it. Therefore we quote with approval the following extract from the leading Reform Journal:—

"The iron deposits of the country north of Lake Ontario are amongst the very largest in the world, and owing to the width and great continuity of the veins are worked with unrivalled ease. It is satisfactory to find that in very many cases the percentage of metallic iron approaches within a very small fraction the purest iron that has yet been found anywhere in the world. One of the mines near Peterborough shows 70.38 per cent. of metallic iron; another shows 70,50; the purest iron is only about 72. The presence of phosphorus in considerable quantity is one of the chief obstacles to be overcome by iron smelters, but in the ores from the many different Ontario mines, analysis fails to find more than the merest trace, and in one specimen it could not be detected at all. For Bessemer steel especially, Ontario ores are very superior, and the fact is now being generally recognized by the iron smelters of this continent. With abundance of easily worked ore and a prodigious amount of fuel at hand in the dense hardwood bush of the Laurentian country there is no good reason why Central Ontario should not become another Sweden in the production of charcoal iron."

It is very true that the iron ore of this and adjoining counties is excellent, and we only know one reason why this local production of charcoal iron should not be successful as the Globe suggests. The reason to which we refer is that the Globe's friends, Mr. Pardee and Mr. Mowat, have corruptly given away in return for political services to themselves, the best and more accessible iron mines, the property of the people of Ontario, to a speculator, who is shipping the ore out of the country for the benefit of smelters in the United States, and is making enormous preparations for continuing this export. It is true that Mr. Coe has also obtained from the same distinguished friends a quantity of timbered land, but he is showing no signs of using the timber for smelting, some of his friends say that he neither can nor will do so, but will continue to export, and it is generally supposed that he has obtained these additional grants of our property, either to secure more minerals, or to speculate with them as arable lands to the prejudice of the small settler.

Mr. Mowat and his friends prefer paying their political debts with other people's property to seeing Central Ontario become another Sweden.

THE ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

Inspected by a Dominion Officer—The Kaladar Sink Hole.

A special train having on board Mr. W. C. Van Horne, Vice-President and General Manager, Mr. Wm. Whyte, General Superintendent Ontario Division Canadian Pacific Railway, and Mr. E. V. Johnson, Dominion Inspector of Railways says the Globe, arrived in Toronto on Thursday afternoon over the Ontario and Quebec section of the road. In conversation with a reporter Mr. Johnson stated that he had inspected the new road in accordance with directions received from the department, and though not prepared to give any ex ended statement in advance of his report to the Government, we might state that he had found the road bed in excellent condition, the rails all first-class, and the bridges among the best in America. All the station houses were neat and substantial buildings, well adapted for the purpose of the road and the convenience of the public. There was only the trouble near Kaladar which interfered with the opening of the road but from what had seen and judged by a careful inspection, he was satisfied that the difficulties had been practically overcome, and there would be nothing now in the way of opening the road by the 21st inst, the time at which the managers hope to commence through passenge traffic. The special train had passed over the bad spot, and it had been carefully tested, but there had been no appreciable sinking of the road bed. Mr. Van Horne also stated to the reporter that he was now certain a solid foundation had been obtained, and that with the aid of a little more filling on either side of the spot, the place would be as secure as any other piece of the road in the country. The difficulties have been great. The cost of making a solid foundation has been immense, and no effort has been spared in the matter. The managers, therefore, now rejoice to find these difficulties practually surmounted.

LINDSAY.

TRYING TO "WAKE UP" THE TOWN.—About eleven o'clock on Sunday night some fiendish person started a steam whistle blowing. The pressure seemed to be stout for the annoying screech was kept up for nearly fourty-five minutes.

A SCENE OF ACTIVITY.—The convent presents a scene of activity. A large number of men are employed and others being taken on daily. The work has been confined principally to getting up the joists for the second and third floors so as to admit of the framing of the roof being erected.

POLICE COURT.—The case against Henry O'Leary and Paddy Bain for assault came up before the police magistrate on Monday morning. Bain was brought to the court room from the gaol. O'Leary, who is out on bail, also appeared. The evidence against the prisoners was taken down and the magistrate decided to commit the prisoners for trial at the fall assizes. Bail was taken in the case of O'Leary. Bain not offering bail was sent back to gaol and remains in custody. On Wednesday Bain decided to stand his trial before the county judge, without a jury. The case will be tried on Saturday morning at the court house. O'Leary preferred to wait and go before a jury at the coming assizes.—Post.

MILL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Thos. Williams, of the Lindsay grist mill, met with a painful accident while oiling some machinery in the mill on Friday afternoon. The machinery in some way caught his shirt sleeve drawing his arm in with it, and only for a large post which he clutched and held onto he would have been drawn in and instantly killed. As soon as released he was taken home and Dr. Kempt sent for, who dressed the arm. It is fearfully lacerated, the flesh from the wrist to near the shoulder being torn away, and leaving the bone in some places bare. Mr. Williams will be laid up for some months if he even then ever gets the use of his arm again.—Warder.

BOBCAYGEON.

CLOSE CALL.—A young gentleman of seven or eight summers had a narrow escape from drowning on Monday. He was playing behind the grist mill, and by some means fell into the river. Fortunately Miss Montgomery chanced to see him, and running to the spot succeeded in fishing him out.

ACCIDENT.—While Mr. and Mrs. Georg Justice were driving towards home the other evening, the team became startled, near Mr. Kelso's residence, and the bugey was overturned. Mr. Justice was unhurt, but Mrs. Justice received a fracture of the arm, and had to be conveyed to the doctor's and have the arm set.

LOGS.—Another drive of logs is passing through. They were got out north of Minden and belong to Mr. Strickland. The drive contains from twenty-five to thirty thousand logs, and are of a good class. Ritchie and Cox have charge of it, Cox having brought down a raft of timber to Fenelon Falls, where it is to be shipped by rail. The drive will probably be divided in Pigeon Lake in order to make quicker time.—Independent.

COBOURG.

ACCIDENT AT THE WHARF.—Mr. Hazeltine, foreman on the Government pier, met with a serious accident on Wednesday. While hewing timber he nearly cut off one of his feet with an adze. This is the second accident of a similar nature occurring on the wharf within the past three weeks.

RUNAWAY.—On Tuesday a team attached to a carriage containing Miss Burgess, her brother, and Miss Macdonald, ran away near Baltimore. The occupants were thrown out, Miss Burgess receiving some severe cuts about the head, her brother having his knee cap knocked off, and Miss Macdonald escaped without injury further than a severe shaking up.—Sentinel-Star.

MIDLAND.

THE CENSUS.—According to the special census just taken Midland has a population of 1,557.

A NEW PROPELLER.—Mr. James Storey, of Waubaushene, has got the frame work of the new propeller set up, and judging from the appearance of the model, some of the fast boats on the Georgian Bay will have to look out for her. She is upwards of 100 feet long.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—An accident occurred at Waubaushene on the G.T.R. on Monday morning, 7th inst., in which two loaded freight trains were demolished. Stewart's down special ran into the tail end of Harrington's special while standing at the station. Stewart's train was running at the rate of fifteen miles per hour. The engine was a total wreck No one was hurt.—Free Press.

CHAPTER XXIII

Notwithstanding the snow which fell steadily at one o'clock, all who were to take part in the "Cantata," assembled punctually at Mrs. Brompton's, and as Regina hurried down to the carriage, she found that Mrs. Carew, her little daughter, and maid had just arrived.

The musical exercises were unusually tedious, the choruses were halting and uneven, and the repetitions seemed endless.

It was almost four o'clock, the hour designated for her meeting, when she enveloped herself in her waterproof cloak, drew the hood over her hat, and almost ran for several squares from Mrs. Brompton's, toward a line of street cars which would convey her to the vicinity of the Park. She succeeded in meeting and upward-bound car, entered, and breathed more freely.

It was quite crowded, and forced to stand up Regina steadied herself by one of the leathern straps suspended from the roof.

After the heated atmosphere she had just felt, the sharp biting cold was refreshing, and against the glistening needles of snow she pressed rapidly on, until finally the trees in the Square gladdened her eye.

Near one of the corners, stood a large close carriage, whose driver was enveloped in a cloak, and protected by an umbrella, while the yellow silk inside curtains were drawn down over the windows.

Agitated by contending emotions of reluctance to meeting the man whose presence was so painful,—and of dread lest he had grown impatient, and might present himself to her guardian, Regina hastened into the Square, and looked eagerly about the deserted walks.

Pressed against the south side of a leafless tree whose trunk partly shielded him from the driving snow laden north-east winds, Peleg Peterson stood watching her,—and as she approached, he came forward.

"Better late then never. How long did you expect me to wait here, with the cold eating into my vitals?"

"Indeed I am very sorry, but I could not come a moment sooner."

"Who is in that carriage yonder?"

"I do not know. How should I?"

"There is something suspicious about it. It is waiting for you?"

"Certainly not. No human being knows where I am at this moment. Here are forty-five dollars,—every cent that I possess. You must not expect me to aid you in future, for I shall not be able; and moreover I shall be subjected to a suspicion if I come home again."

"She handed him the money rolled up in a small package, and he deposited it in his pocket.

"You might at least have made it a hundred,"

"I have no more money."

"Do you still doubt that you are my child."

"When you make your claim in a court of justice, as you yesterday threatened, the proofs must be established. Until then, I shall not discuss it with you. I have an abiding faith in the instincts of nature, and I believe that when I stand before my father, my heart will unmistakably proclaim it. From, you, it shrinks with dread and horror."

"Because Minnie taught you to hate me. I knew she would."

"Mother never mentioned your name to me. Only to Hannah am I indebted for any knowledge of you. Where is Hannah now."

"I don't know. We quarreled not long ago. Regina I want your photograph. I want to wear my daughter's picture over my heart."

He moved closer to her, and put out his arm, but she sprang back.

"You must not touch me,—at least not until I can hear from mother. I have no photographs of myself. The only picture taken for years, is a portrait which Mr. Palma had taken and sent to mother In any emergency that may occur,—if you should be really ill, or in actual suffering and want, write to me, and address your letter according to the directions on this slip of paper. Mrs. Mason will always see that your note reaches me safely. When I know that you are my father, I will pay you all that a child owes a parent. This, I promise you."

Her face was well-nigh as white as the snow that covered and fringed her hood; and out of its pallid beauty, the sad eyes looked steadfastly into the bloated visage before her.

"I believe you! There spoke my girl! You are true as steel, and worth a hundred of Minnie. Some day, my pretty child, you and I shall know one another as father and daughter should."

Turning, she ran swiftly away, and glanced over her shoulder fearful of pursuit, but the figure stood where she had left him; was occupied in counting the money—and breathing more freely, Regina shook the snow from her wrappings, from her umbrella, and walked homeward.

Had she purchased a sufficient reprieve to keep him quiet until she could hear from her mother, and receive the expected summons to join her? Or was this an illusive relief, a mere monotony lull in the tempest of humiliation that was muttering and darkening around her?

She had walked only a short distance from the square, and was turning a corner, when she ran against a gentleman hurrying from the opposite direction.

"Pray pardon me, Miss."

She could not suppress the cry that broke from her lips.

"Oh Mr. Palma!"

He turned, as though he had not until now recognized her, but there was no surprise in his stern fixed face.

"I thought Mrs. Brompton resided on West —— Street, had not heard of her change of residence. From the length of your rehearsal you certainly should be perfect in your performance. It is now half-past five, and I think you told me you commenced at one? Rather disagreeable weather for you to be out. Wait here, under this awning, till I come back."

He was absent not more than five minutes, and returned with a close carriage; but a glance sufficed to show her that it was not the one she had seen in the neighbourhood of the square.

As he opened the door and beckoned her forward, he took her umbrella, handed her in, and with one keen cold look into her face, said:

"I trust my ward's dinner toilet will be an improvement upon her present appearance, as several guests have been invited. The Cantata must have bored you immensely."

He bowed, closed the door, directed the driver to the number of his residence on Fifth Avenue, and disappeared.

The strain upon her nerves was beginning to relax; her head ached, her eyes smarted, and she felt sick and faint. Like one in a perplexing dream, she was whirled along the street, and at last reached home.

Everything seemed dancing in kaleidoscope confusion, and amid the chaos only one grim fact was immovable—she must dress and go down to dinner. Just now, unwelcome as was the task, she dared not neglect it, for her absence might stimulate the investigation she so much dreaded, and wearily she rose and began her toilette.

At half-past seven Hattie entered.

"Are'nt you ready Miss? Mrs. Palma says you must hurry down, for the company are all in the parlor, and Mr. Palma has asked for you. Stop a minute—Miss. Your sash is all crooked. There—all right. Let me tell you there is more lace and velvet down stairs than you can show, and jewelery! No end to it! But as for born good looks,—you can outface them all."

"Don't I look very pale and jaded?"

"Very white—Miss; you always do,—and red cheeks would be as much out of your style as paint on a corpse. I can tell you what you do look like,—more than ever I saw you before; —that marble figure with the dove on its finger, which stands in front of the parlor bay window."

Two gentlemen stood on the rug, talking with Olga, a third sat on a sofa engaged in conversation with Mrs. Palma, while Mrs. St. Clare and her daughter entertained two strangers in the opposite corner,—and on a tete-a-tete drawn conspicuously forward under the chandelier, were Mr. Palma and Mrs. Carew.

Regina merely glanced at Olga long enough to observe how handsome she appeared, in her rose-hued silk, with its rich black lace garniture and the spray of crushed pink roses drooping against her neck,—then her gaze dwelt upon the woman under the chandelier.

Unusually tall, and proportionately developed, her size might safely have been pronounced heroic, and would by comparison have dwarfed a man of less commanding stature than Mr. Palma; yet so symmetrical was the outline of face and figure, that the type seemed well nigh faultless, and she might have served as a large-limbed rounded model for those majestic women whom Buonaroti painted for the admiration of all humanity, upon the walls of the Sistine.

Truth Bible Competition

NO. ELEVEN.

THE FINAL ONE!

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by any Publisher.

RESIDENTS OF TORONTO INADMISSABLE.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER!

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable other Valuable Rewards.

DON'T DELAY SENDING IN YOUR ANSWERS.

At the solicitation of many friends Truth announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Any one residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. We hope the publisher of Truth will meet with the success his enterprise so richly merits. Everything he has offered in previous Bible Competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. We most heartily commend the paper to our readers. They will find it all it is represented to be. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in Truth the week following the close of each competition. There will be no chance, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is Gold first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was only one language and one speech on the whole earth?

3.—When is an Inn first referred to in the Bible? by the word inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment, commonly known now as an hotel).

Everyone competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months' subscription to Truth. And aside from the rewards themselves they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. Truth is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, as you will get Truth for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided you answers are correct, and reach Truth office in time. Don't delay.

The further you live from Toronto the better you can compete for these last or consolation rewards. Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of Truth that gets number one in these consolation rewards. The offer is open only to the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the post mark, where mailed, of the date of 15th September, it will take its place in the order received at Truth office. Fifteen days after date of closing will be allowed for letters from distant points to reach Toronto, but don't forget your letter must not bear a later post mark than September 15. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six months' subscription to Truth, which will be sent to any desired address for the twelve months. Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now, and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaining a valuable reward in addition to Truth,

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50 each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid rolled gold brooch, new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopædia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact every Province was represented in the last, not excepting British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first, you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. Truth directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value. This we think exceedingly fair, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, as Truth says, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph or in any way but through the post-office or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S. Frank Wilson, Truth office, 33 and 35 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of the ailment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Can't Be Beaten.

It is a fact that Nerviline cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure. Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to Ormond & Walsh's drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25cts.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubborn ly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district fo the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Light to moderate winds, fair, warm weather, with a few local showers or thunderstorms.

Dominion Express Co.

On Friday an interesting load came to the O. & Q. Railway station. It was a car containing several waggons of the Dominion Express Co. One of them was left here, and was paraded through George Street in the afternoon. The others are to be distributed at various points along the line.

The Market.

Despite only a moderate attendance on the market this morning a very fair amount of produce was exhibited for sale by the various vendors. The show of vegetables, as was naturally to be expected, was conspicuous by its variety and abundance. Peas, currants, beans, radishes, celery, carrots, et hoc genus omne, were plentiful. Currants, it may be remarked en passant, ranged in price from ten to fifteen cents a quart, and all three varieties, red, white, and black, were exposed for sale. Nothing of any particularly unusual interest was seen worthy to be noted.

Still another lot of those Heavy Cottonades, for Farmers and Mechanics, at Turnbull's. The quality sells them rapidly.

Queries.

—Whether there is any one who need be imformed what anniversary this is.

—Whether there is any one who remembers that this is also the anniversary of the evacuation of the Crimea.

—Whether the rain will interfere with the Cobourg celebrations.

—Whether the orange and blue regalia are in fast colours.

—Whether the Lakefield and Nassau Lodges regret that their uniform dispenses with a coat.

—Whether the enfant terrible who is trying to sing "The Sweet By-and-bye" just outside our particular window will ever be on the staff of a paper.—If so, what he would feel inclined to do to such another enfant terrible.

Dramatic.

Lytell's Dramatic Company will give two entertainments here next week, presenting "The World" in the Opera House on Wednesday evening and "The Galley Slave" on Thursday evening. Of this Company the Winnipeg Times says:—

"The Lytell Company continues to increase in popularity, and no wonder. Every performance given by them is perfect in every respect. The audience last evening was large as it should have been, which no doubt added materially to the appreciation and production of this great play. Mr. Harkins as 'Sidney Norcott' scored another grand success and fully sustained the splendid reputation he has gained since his first appearance in the city. Miss Mortimer, who is acknowledged by all to be a very clever artiste, was better than ever last evening, throwing her whole heart into the character and scoring what is generally termed a 'big hit.' The Lytell Company have received the patronage they deserve. With Lytell and other clever actors on the stage, with splendid scenery and costumes, and the popular Barry in the front part of the house, it is bound to come, and the excellent company will surely go out in a blaze of glory."

Estate of the Late James Hall, Esq.

Remember the auction sale of the valuable town and suburban property belonging to the estate of the late James Hall, at Halpin's Hotel, Hunter street, on Tuesday, the 15th July, at 2 p.m. The property consists of the houses on Hunter street opposite the Oriental hotel, between Mr. Kingan's hardware store and Mr. Belleghem's furniture store. The land on the south side of Hunter street, lying between Mr. Halpin's blacksmith shop and Mrs. Barbino's Hotel, the block bounded by Hunter, Brock, Aylmer and Bethune street, except that occupied by Sheriff Hall as a residence, and park lot 3, south of the gravel road and west of Park street, south of the residence of Elias Burnham, which has been laid out in 21 building lots, and other property. Easy terms of payment are offered and prices will be reasonable.

Summer Underclothing in Merino, Gauze, Balbriggan, Lisle Thread and Cotton (all sizes) at Habiliment Hall.

THE ORANGEMEN.

Arrival of the Lakefield and Nassau Lodges —The Start for Cobourg.

Early this morning the members of the Peterborough Lodges No's 25,49 and 80 of Orangemen mustered at the gates of the drill shed on Murray street.

Shortly after eight o'clock they formed line, and, headed by the Blues, marched down to Bethune street to meet the train from Lakefield which brought from that place the Lakefield and Nassau Lodges.

The train—a long one of ten carriages, soon arrived, and, without loss of time the newly-arrived lodges, No's 1385 and 457, took their place in the procession, and headed by the City Band playing "The Fermanagh Roys," walked up Murray to George street.

Proceeding down the main thoroughfare the procession turned the corner at Simcoe street and thence to the Midland Railway station.

STABBING AFFRAY IN ASHBURNHAM.

A General Melee—Row About Rent—Three Men Stabbed.

About one o'clock this (Saturday) morning, Dr. Clarke was hastily summoned to see an Italian who had been severely stabbed by one of his confreres. The particulars of the means by which the man received the wound, as far as can be discovered, are as follows: Some of the Italians living in the general boarding house at Ashburnham, it seems, had intended leaving that domicile, and, in the final settling of money matters—or perhaps, and with more probability, owing to an attempted avoidance of such final settlement—there occurred apparently a general tournament. Angry discussions, abusive language, and the usual predecessors of such a fracas were, of course, plentiful. Matters soon came to a crisis, knives were freely used, and the result was that one man was very dangerously wounded in the right side about the region of the spleen, another received a flesh wound in the arm, and a third a cut in the thigh. One man, whose name we have not yet been able to discover, has been arrested and placed in the lock-up by the Ashburnham constable.

The most severely wounded of the three, Dr. Clarke informs us, is easier this morning, but not yet out of danger.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

The State of Maine Wrecked.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 12.—The disaster to the steamer State of Maine at Point Lepreaux, 20 miles from St. John, is the sensation of the hour. During a fog she struck on a ledge with tremendous force. The passengers, about 300 in number, including many tourists, were speedily landed. Luggage is on board and may be lost. The last accounts from Lepreaux are to the effect that the steamer is full of holes, breaking up, and is likely to be a total wreck.

The Canada Pacific.

In the Northwest the promise of a golden harvest has banished the despondency which ensued upon the inevitable collapse of the boom. Since the discovery of a sufficient supply of fuel there has been no real ground for duty as to the ultimate capabilities of the region. But these capabilities cannot possibly be developed without a good system of railroads. Land 50 miles from a railway, though it yielded a thousand bushels to the acre, might almost as well be in the moon. The single line running from ocean to ocean, while it may connect the different provinces of the Dominion together for political and military purposes, cannot open up the North-West. Its effect so far has been to draw out the population in a long string instead of securing the advantages of compact settlement. If the money which is being spent in carrying the road over the Rocky Mountains had been laid out on roads in the Prairie region, the political union with British Columbia might not have been effected but the commercial results would have been infinitely better.—Bystander in the Week.

SLANDERING CANADIAN SKILL.

The Globe has been quoting London Truth as hitting the nail on the head in ascribing the alleged reluctance of English capitalists to embark in Canadian mining enterprizes, to the heavy taxation on mining implements, whereon the Belleville Intelligencer comments in forcible fashion. It appears that the duty in Canada upon the machinery is 25 per cent. ad valorem in the United States it is 44 per cent. ad valorem, so that if an English capitalist imported machinery to Canada to carry on his mining works, valued at $10,000, he would pay $2,500 duty. If he took the same machinery to the United States he would pay in duties to that Government $4,500, being just $1,200 more upon the $10,000 importation than he would had he brought it into Canada; and yet this English Solon and Canadian Grit tells the people the English capitalist is driven to the States on account of the higher duty in this country. Probably we shall be told the machinery cannot be obtained in Canada and can in the States. If this were true, which it is not, it would be the result of the protective policy so rigidly adhered to by our neighbors. The fact is, machinery for mining purposes, except diamond drills, and they are free, can be obtained as cheaply in the United States, and quite as good. The policy of the Grits, is to assist in disseminating such slanders upon the skill and productive ability of our manufacturers, thinking that the people are humbugged thereby but they are mistaken as they learned in the past, and will again, when the electors have an opportunity of expressing an opinion at the poll London Free Press.

A PARK SUGGESTED.

THE letter which we publish in this issue from "Ratepayer," suggesting that Burnham's Point should be secured for a public park, deserves careful consideration. It certainly does seem to be a pity that a piece of land so convenient and so admirably adapted for the purpose should be allowed to be alienated so that later it could not be acquired except at an enormous cost. It might be well for those who favour the idea to ascertain upon what terms the ground could be obtained, and what share the village of Ashburnham would be disposed to take in an improvement which would be for the benefit of both municipalities. If such a park could be obtained for a reasonable amount, there should be no difficulty in making the necessary arrangements. Possibly it might facilitate matters to organize a Park Commission under the statute of last session, if on consideration it was thought the act would work satisfactorily, as to which we have not yet had leisure to form a positive opinion.

There is one advantage in selecting Burnham's Point for a park, to which "Ratepayer" does not refer. Besides access by the railway bridge a foot-path to the Point could be constructed in such a way as to form a very attractive portion of this recreation ground. The islands in the river belong to the town, and by connecting them with ornamental bridges, planting them and otherwise improving them, a very beautiful walk could in time be laid out at comparatively small expense.

Whether Burnham's Point be the chosen locality or not, a park should be secured without delay It is a great mistake for a growing town to wait till the requisite land can only be secured at an enormous cost for the recreation ground that must in time become necessary.

THE GLOBE AND THE FARMERS.

THE Toronto Globe has the following editorial note in reference to us :—

"The PETERBOROUGH REVIEW agrees with Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, in the belief that two many farmers' sons are leaving the country for the cities and towns. But at the same time it does not condemn the N.P., which have done so much to make agriculture unprofitable."

This is not an accurate version of what we did say, but we may let that pass, for no body xpects accuracy from the Globe in dealing with a political opponent. And now as to what we did not say.' We do not condemn the N.P. for doing so much to make agriculture unprofitable, because we do not publish untruths. In the first place farming is not unprofitable, and the statement that such is the case is one of those base slanders of our country and of its leading industry with which the Globe in its impotent malice endeavours to revenge itself upon the country and upon the farmers for having the good sense to dismiss the Globe's friends in favour of more competent advisers. This is the cause of the Globe's bitterness, and having for this reason slandered in turn the factory operatives and the mechanics of Canada it now attacks our farmers. The farmers of Peterborough and the other counties of this district are certainly not so unskilful or indolent as to find farming unprofitable, and they will not thank the Globe for its insulting disparagement of them. We believe the same to be true of other districts.

And now a few words as to the effect of the N.P. Under its beneficial influence clothing, groceries, &c., nearly everything in fact that the farmer has to buy for his household, have become cheaper. Agricultural implements have been lowered in price. Some things have advanced in value, but they are precisely those things that the farmer has to sell, not to buy. We do not say that the increased price of food is due entirely to the N.P. though it has had a salutary effect, but the Globe does say so when talking to townspeople, so how can it tell the farmers that the N.P. which according to it raises the prices of their produce can render their skill and labour unprofitable?

We defy the Globe to give us a list of things bought by the farmers that are not cheaper that before the N.P.

We defy the Globe to give us a list of things sold by the farmers that are not dearer that before the N.P.

As it cannot do so it will hunt for some isolated exception, or will ignore figures and acts, falling back upon the fallacious theories of the free traders, with its own mixture of slander and abuse.

THE TWELFTH OF JULY.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE CELEBRATED.

The Peterborough Orangemen go to Cobourg —A Large Number of the Brethren and Others at that Town.

The Orangemen of West Peterborough, and some from the county of East Peterborough, celebrated the one hundred and ninety-fourth anniversary of the battle of the Boyne by attending the celebration at Cobourg.

At six o'clock in the morning the City Band went to Lakefield on the special train, and the train arrived again in Peterborough at eight o'clock with the Lakefield and Nassau Lodges. These Lodges were met at the Murray street crossing by the Peterborough brethren, and a procession was formed, consisting of the following Lodges :—Young Canadian L. O. L., No. 1384, Lakefield, Bro. Jas. Moore, W. M. ; L. O. L. No. 122, Lakefield ; L. O. L. No. 457, Nassau, Bro. Wm. King, W. M. ; McWilliams Lodge, No. 25, O. T. B., Peterborough, Bro. F. Weir, W. M. ; L. O. L. No. 49, Peterborough, Bro. J. Batton, W. M. ; L. O. L. No. 80, Peterborough, Bro. T. Brown, W. M. The procession was led by Bro. R. Weir, County Master of West Peterborough, and was marshalled by Bro. Geo. W. Hall. The City Band provided music, and the Lodges proceeded along Murray, George and Charlotte streets to the Midland station.

The train consisted of ten coaches, and was in charge of Conductor Buller. It left the station at about 8:30 o'clock, taking a large number besides the Orangemen, the coaches being pretty well filled. At Fraserville two Lodges from Cavan District boarded the train, and at Millbrook station more people were taken on. When Port Hope was reached the Grand Trunk station platform was crowded with Orangemen from that town, Cavan, Manvers and other places, and a large number of other persons. These were taken on, and Cobourg was reached at about 11 o'clock.

The Cobourg brethren and those from other places, who had previously arrived, were at the station to meet the brethren from the west and north. Rain was falling at this time, and soon after the procession was formed at the station it came down heavily. The people hurried to find shelter, but the Orangemen marched down the streets to Victoria Hall. There were four brass bands in the procession, the City Band, of Peterborough, the 46th Band, of Port Hope, the Bethany Band and the Cobourg Band, besides a number of fife and drum bands. The procession was Marshalled by Bro. J. McCaughey, County Master of Northumberland. A route had been laid out for the procession, but on account of the rain it had to be abandoned and the most direct route to the hall was taken. The brethren then separated for dinner.

After dinner the brethren reassembled at Victoria Hall, but the streets were so muddy that the afternoon procession was abandoned. A very large number of Lodges were present, there being six from West Peterboroug, one (Emerson Lodge, Otonabee) from East Peterborough, six from Cavan, and four from Manvers, besides a large number of other Lodges from East Durham and Northumberland. The town was crowded with people, and when the bands were playing in the afternoon it was almost impossible to make one's way along King street.

The True Blues, Young Britons and 'Prentice Boys, who were, perhaps, more enthusiastic than the older brethren, arranged a procession in the afternoon, and marched through the principal streets, accompanied by the Peterborough and Port Hope Bands. This was the first appearance of the City Band in any of our neighboring towns and their appearance and playing was commented on very favorably.

The addresses were delivered in the afternoon, in Victoria Hall, instead of in the Agricultural Grounds. Bro. J. McCaughey, County Master, took the chair, and several prominent brethren occupied seats on the platform. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Young and the Rev. Mr. McGrea, of Cobourg, Bro. T. Collins, of Millbrook, and Bro. Wm. Johnson, Grand Master of Ontario East, Belleville.

Bro. JOHNSON, during his address, referred to the objection urged against the Orange Order that it was a political organization. He emphatically denied that it was a party organization, and said that, while in Ontario the majority of the Orangemen were Conservatives, in Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island the majority of them were Reformers. He contended that if it was a party organization at all, it could only be in the interest of one party, and the fact that the majority of the members in one Province favored one political party, and in other Provinces another, proved that it was not managed in the interest of any party.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the speakers, and the meeting broke up.

The Lodges then formed in procession and proceeded to the Grand Trunk station. The train departed from that station at about five o'clock. At Port Hope the Lodges from Peterborough, Port Hope, Cavan, Manvers, &c., marched through the principal streets of the town. At Millbrook the City Band got off the train and played a tune. At Fraserville the train was delayed, waiting for the regular passenger train, and Peterborough was reached at half-past nine o'clock. Again a procession was formed, headed by the City Band, and proceeded up George street. The train then proceeded north with the Nassau and Lakefield brethren.

The Cobourg celebration was, in one sense, a success. It attracted an immense number of people to the town, and but for the rain it would undoubtedly have been a success in every way.

It might be stated, in concluding this notice of the celebration of 1884, that the Peterborough Orangemen contemplate having a celebration here next year that will be ahead of any such demonstration previously held in this town.

LINDSAY.

SINGULAR DEATH OF A COW.—A cow belonging to a poor widow, on which she depended for a living, was found dead on Victoria Avenue, supposed to be poisoned by Paris green, but on holding a post-mortem a large sized darning needle was found piercing the heart of the cow. Her heart was larger than a patent pail. How she got the needle is a mystery.

Manitoba's Claims.

Manitoba is asking for an extension of boundary, thereby adding to her already large territory 180,090 square miles. We do not like to complain of the selfishness of our elder sister, but we would gently remind her that were her request granted, it would be at the expense of the newly formed districts, which must, in a short time, themselves become provinces. There is abundance of land ; still the people of the Northwest are not willing to give away any of it to enlarge the boundaries of Manitoba. We are glad that it has been found inexpedient to alter the boundaries. It would add nothing at the present time to the wealth and influence of Manitoba, while it would be detrimental to the interests of Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Athabaska. If each district is honestly dealt with, and not to be a mere plaything in the hands of unprincipled politicians, the boundaries will remain as they are, and Manitoba will lessen her claims by this one demand at least.—Calgary (Alberta) Herald.

Saved from a Horrible Death

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

...e the use of teams, a simple and effective arrangement may be used. A strong axle, say six inches square, is fitted to any stout pair of wheels, as those of a truck, to which a triangular lever is firmly bolted. It projects sixteen inches behind and sixteen feet in front, and is made of tough hard-wood, the pieces six inches square. To the end piece, which is mortised and securely bolted to the others, a chain with two stout hasps is attached. In using it, a broad plank is placed under each wheel to prevent sinking into the earth, and the wheels are blocked. The hooks are grappled into the root, and when raised as far as possible by depressing the lever it is blocked and a dew hitch taken lower down. Two men can move the implement from stump to stump. The leverage would be nearly twelve to one, giving three thousand six hundred pounds power if the men weighed one hundred and fifty pounds each, and could both put their weight upon the extreme end of the lever—a power that would start small stumps.—American Agriculturist.

SUMMER POULTRY ROOSTS.—The presence of a pair of fine cedar trees in our poultry yard accidentally led us into the belief that poultry fares much better if allowed to roost out of doors at night in summer instead of being confined in hot, stifling, and often ill-ventilated and filthy houses. Our poultry manifested a disposition to roost in the cedars in summer. Some of the limbs of the tree were low, drooping nearly to the ground, so that all the fowls, even large and heavy Brahmas, found no difficulty in getting up among the branches. They were then out of the reach of of the weasel and fox, and being so completely hidden from view by the foliage, it was not likely that any prowling owl, or passing biped inclined on theft would ever discover them in the seclusion.

The result exceeded our anticipation. Not only did our poultry lay better, an more regularly than ever before, out were healthier, their coat of feathers looked brighter an livelier, and they keep in better flesh than ever before at the same season. Close houses are a necessity in winter, but in summer it is doubtless best to give fowls much more liberty, and all the fresh, pure air at night that they need.—American Agriculturist.

KEEPING HAMS THROUGH THE SUMMER.—It is somewhat difficult to guard hams from flies through the summer, however well cured and smoked. The smoke-house, if well made, preserves them, and this is the more common place of deposit with those who smoke their own hams. But multitudes have on hand a season's supply of hams and shoulders. They keep much better in a dry atmosphere. If sugar-cured hams are purchased, the cloth that covers them is a sufficient protection against insects. If the hams are home-cured, they can be covered with cloth at small expense, or even with a bag of thick paper tied tight at the top, around the string by which they are suspended. If hung in a dry, cool place, they will not mould, and will always be on hand for the staple of a hearty meal, in any emergency of the family. Farmers generally make there own meat, and cure it, and, with a good recipe for curing, secure better hams then they can purchase, and at less cost. It pays to keep the larder well stocked with the best.—American Agriculturist.

Croquet vs. Lawn Tennis.

There are signs of a croquet revival this year. Lawn Tennis is not altogether doomed, but young ladies are beginning to see that it is a game for men. If played by girls it should be played without corsets. Against a young fellow in flannels a girl in stays and a dress weighted with the cumbersome protuberances which are now in fashion has no chance. If she bestirs herself much in striking at the ball, her movements are not only ungraceful but injurious to health; if she cultivates grace, waiting in pretty attitudes for the ball till it comes within her reach, then there is no game. The proper tennis costume for a girl would be a Garibaldi shirt and a plain skirt, as light as possible, but girls do not really care enough for tennis to make any sacrifice of personal adornment for its sake. What they like is the open air and the company of men (four girls playing at tennis with no man looking on is a very rare thing); but croquet offers these attractions with additional possibilities in the way of talk. At croquet the fair player may wear what she pleases, strike a picturesque attitude, go through the game without hurry, and hold sweet confidential chat between the hits. At tennis there is no confidential chatting. Croquet is certainly slower than tennis to good players of the last game, but not slower than tennis as played by some young ladies, who only send the ball over the net once out of five tries. It might have been expected that the earnestness of some young men in their practice of tennis would prove fatal to the game as a sociable pastime. Enthusiasts of the racket play too well for their sisters and sisters' friends; and it is really no great fun after all to "field out" while a proficient in flannels amuses himself by cutting balls in so dexterous a style that they scarcely rebound, and must always be missed, even when a girl tires herself out in straining at them.

Grief in the Dog.

Mrs. Walter Odell, of Stapleton, Staten Island, died at 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning, March 25. A Scotch terrier, Fido, had been her pet for twelve years. During the two months of her illness Fido remained beside her bed. After her death he persisted in lying beside the coffin. He followed it to the hearse, and tried to jump inside the hearse. When the procession reached the grave, Fido was there. After the funeral he took up his former position beside the bed lately occupied by Mrs. Odell. He refused to eat. Two days ago he found a pair of shoes that formerly belonged to Mrs. Odell, but had been thrown out of doors. These he took up in his mouth and carried to his self-assigned post near the bed, and, placing the shoes on the floor, laid his fore paws and head across them, in which position he remained several hours. During Monday night, 31, he roused the household by his mournful cries. At 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning, exactly one week to an hour after Mrs. Odell's death, Fido died beside the bed, his head and paws resting on the shoes.—N. Y. Sun.

Hops at Sturgeon Point.

The first of the series of social hops will be given at Sturgeon Point hotel on Saturday night of this week. The boat leaves [Lindsay] wharf at eight o'clock, returning the same evening. The occasion is one that should be taken advantage of, and as an amusement will be deservedly popular.—Lindsay Post.

Truth Bible Competition

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by any Publisher.

RESIDENTS OF TORONTO INADMISSABLE.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER!

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable other Valuable Rewards.

DON'T DELAY SENDING IN YOUR ANSWERS.

At the solicitation of many friends Truth announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Anyone residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. We hope the publisher of Truth will meet with the success his enterprise so richly merits. Everything he has offered in previous Bible Competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. We most heartily commend the paper to our readers. They will find it all it is represented to be. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in Truth the week following the close of each competition. There will be no chance, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is Gold first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was only one language and one speech on the whole earth?

3.—When is Inn first referred to in the Bible? by the word inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment, commonly known now as an hotel).

Everyone competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months' subscription to Truth. And aside from the rewards themselves they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. Truth is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, as you will get Truth for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided you answers are correct, and reach Truth office in time. Don't delay.

The further you live from Toronto the better you can compete for these last or consolation rewards. Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of Truth that gets number one in these consolation rewards. The offer is open only to the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the post mark, where mailed, of the date of 15th September, it will take its place in the order received at Truth office. Fifteen days after date of closing will be allowed for letters from distant points to reach Toronto, but don't forget your letter must not bear a later post mark than September 15. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six months' subscription to Truth, which will be sent to any desired address for the twelve months. Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now, and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaing a valuable reward in addition to Truth.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50 each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid rolled gold brooch, new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopedia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact every Province was represented in the last, not excepting British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first, you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. Truth directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value. This we think exceedingly fair, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, as Truth says, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph or in any way but through the post-office or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S. Frank Wilson, Truth office, 33 and 35 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

"Hub" Cough Cure, 25 Cents.

Prescription of a Boston physician, dispensed years by a Boston Druggist. One dose will cure any ordinary cough. It acts almost magically. Ask J. D. Tully for a 25 cent bottle of Hub Cough Cure.

A New Principle

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

CHAPTER XXIII.—CONTINUED.

Mr. Palma was smiling at some low spoken sentence that rippled like Italian poetry over her full lips,—when his eye detected the figure hovering near the door, and at once he advanced and drew her in.

Without taking her hand, his fingers just touched her sleeve, as walking beside her he said:

"Mrs. Carew must allow me the pleasure of presenting my ward Miss Orme, who has most unpardonably detained us from our soup."

The stranger smiled, and offered her hand.

"Ah, Miss Orme! I shall never pardon you for stealing the only heart, whose loyalty I claim. My little Llora saw you at Mrs. Brompton's, heard you sing, and was enchanted with your eyes—which she assured me were—'blue as the sky, ma mere, and like violets with black lace quilled around them.'"

Regina barely touched the ivory hand encrusted with costly jewels, and Mr. Palma drew her near a sofa, where sat a nobly looking elderly gentleman, slightly bald, and whose ample beard and long moustache were snow white, although his eyebrows were black, and his fine brown eyes sparkled with the fire and enthusiasm of youth.

"My ward, Miss Orme, has a juvenile reverence for congressmen, whom, knowing only historically, she fondly considers above and beyond the common clay of mankind—regards them as the worthy successors of the Roman Patres Conscripti, and in the Honorable Mr. Chesley, she is doubtless destined to realize all her romantic ideas relative to American Statesmen. Regina, Mr. Chesley represents California in the council of the nation, and can tell you all about those wonderful canons, of which you were speaking last week."

The guest took her fingers, shook them cordially, and, looking into his fine face, the girl felt a sudden thrill run through her frame. What was there in the soft brown eyes, and shape of the brow that was so familiar—that made her heart beat so fiercely?

Mechanically she sat down near him, failing to answer some trivial question from Mrs. Palma, and bowing in an absent preoccupied manner to the remainder of the guests.

Fortunately, dinner was announced immediately, and as Mrs. Palma moved away on Mr. Chesley's arm, while Mr. Palma gave his to Mrs. Carew, Regina felt a cold hand seize hers, and lead her forward.

"Mr. Roscoe, where did you secrete yourself? I was not aware that you were in the room."

"Standing in the window watching you bow to every one else. Your guardian requested me to hand you into dinner."

Something in his voice and manner annoyed her, and, looking up, she said coldly:

"My guardian is very kind; but I regret that his consideration in providing me an escort, has taxed your courtesy so severely."

Before he could reply they had reached the table, and glancing at the card attached to the bouquet at each plate, Regina found her chair had been placed next to Mr. Chesley's while Olga was her vis-a vis.

"Regina I must see you alone, sometime this evening."

"Why?"

"To demand an explanation of what I have seen and heard, otherwise I would not credit."

"I have no explanation to offer on the subject. If you refer to a conversation which Mr. Palma had with me yesterday, at your request, let me say, once for all, that I cannot consent to its revival. Mr. Roscoe, we are good friends now, I hope; but we should be such no longer, if you persist in violating my wishes in this matter."

"What I wish to say to you involves your own safety and happiness."

"I am grateful for your kind intentions, but they result from an erroneous impression. My individual welfare is bound up with those whom you do not know, and at all events I prefer not to discuss it."

"You refuse me the privilege of a confidential talk with you?"

"Yes, Mr. Roscoe, Now be pleasant, and let us converse on some more agreeable topic. Did you ever meet Mrs. Carew until to-day."

He was too angry to reply immediately; but after a little while mastered his indignation.

"I have the pleasure of knowing Mrs. Carew quite well."

"She is remarkably beautiful."

"Oh, unquestionably! And she knows it better than any other article in her creed. New York is spoiling her dreadfully."

He turned and addressed some remarks to Miss St. Clare, who sat on his right, and Regina rejoiced in the opportunity afforded her of becoming a quiet observer and listener.

The shuttlecock of conversation was well kept up from all sides of the table, and when Regina's thoughts crept back from their numbing reverie Mr. Chesley was eloquently describing some of the most picturesque localities in Oregon and California.

Across the table floated a liquid response.

"I saw in Philadelphia a large painting of that particular spot, and though not remarkably well done it enables one to form an approximate idea of the grandeur of the scenery."

Mr. Chesley bowed to Mrs. Carew and answered:

"I met the artist while on his sketching tour and was deeply interested in his success. At one time I hoped he would cast matrimonial anchor in San Francisco and remain among us, but his fickle fair one deserted him for a young naval officer, and after her marriage California had few charms for him. I pity poor Eggleston most cordially."

"Then permit me to assure you that you are needlessly expending your sympathy, for I bear witness to the fact that his wounds have cicatrized. A fair Philadelphian has touched them with her fairy finger,—and at present he bows at another shrine."

Shivering with sympathy for Olga, Regina could not refrain from looking at her while Mrs. Carew spoke, and marvelled at the calm deference, the smiling insouciance with which her hazel eyes rested on the speaker. Then they wandered as if accidentally to the countenance of Mr. Palma, and a lambent flame seemed to kindle in their brown depths.

"Mr. Eggleston has talent and I am surprised that he has not been more successful," said the Congressman.

Mr. Palma was pressing Mrs. St. Clare to take more wine, and appeared deaf to the conversation, but Mrs. Carew's flute-like voice responded:

"Yes, a certain order of talent for mere landscape painting; but he should never attempt a higher or different style. He made a wretched copy of the Crucifixion for a wealthy retired tailor, who boasts of his investments in 'virtue and bigotry,—and I fear I gave mortal offence by venturing to say to the owner that it reminded me of the criticism of Luis de Vargas on a similar failure: "Methinks He is saying, Forgive them, Lord, for they know not what they do.'"

"Apropos! of pictures. Mrs. Carew I must arrange to have you see a superb new painting recently hung upon the wall at the 'Century,' and ask your opinion upon its merit——"

Regina did not catch the remainder of her guardian's sentence, which she felf assured was intended to divert the conversation and shield Olga,—for just then, Mr. Chesley asked to fill her glass, and the talk drifted away to less dangerous topics.

Irresistibly attracted by some subtle charm in his manner, she found herself drawn into a pleasant dialogue with him, relative to some startling incidents which he narrated of the early miners in the far West. Watching his face, she puzzled her brain with the solution of the singular familiarity it possessed. She had never met him until to-day, and yet her heart warmed toward him more and more.

At length she ventured the question:

"Did you leave your family in California?"

"Unfortunately I have no family, and no relatives. My dear young lady is it not melancholy to find a confirmed old bachelor, verging fast upon decrepitude—with no one to look after, or care for him? When I was a good-looking young beau, and should have been hunting me a bonny blue-eyed bride, I was digging gold from the rocky ribs of mountains in Western solitudes. When I made my fortune I discovered too late that I had given my youth in exchange."

"I should think, Sir, that you might still marry, and be very happy."

His low pleasant laugh did not embarras her, and he answered:

"You are very kind to kindle that beacon of encouragement, but I fear your charitable sympathy clouds your judgment. Do you imagine any fair young girl could brave my grey hair and wrinkles?"

"A young girl would not suit you. Sir; but there must be noble middle-aged ladies whom you could admire, and trust, and love?"

He bent his white head, and whispered:

"Such for instance as Mrs. Carew, who converts all places into Ogygia?"

Without lifting her eyes, she merely shook her head, and he continued:

"Miss Orme, all men have their roseleaf romance. Mine expanded very early, but fate crumpled,—crushed it into a shapeless ruin,—and leaving the wreck behind me, I went to the wilds of California. Since then, I have missed the humanizing influence of home ties, of feminine association; but as I look down the hill, where the sun of my life is casting long shadows, I sometimes feel that it would be a great blessing, had I a sister, cousin, niece, or even an adopted daughter, whom I could love and lean upon in my lonely old age. Once I seriously entertained the thought of selecting an orphan from some Asylum, and adopting her into my heart and home."

"When you do, I sincerely hope she will prove all that you wish, and faithfully requite your goodness."

She spoke so earnestly that he smiled, and added:

"Can you recommend one to me? I envy Palma his guardianship, and if I should find a young girl like you I should not hesitate to solicit——"

"Pardon me, Mr. Chesley, but Mr. Palma is endeavouring to attract your notice," said Mrs. Palma.

The host held in his hand an envelope.

"A telegram for you. Shall I direct the bearer to wait?"

"With your permission, I will examine it."

Having glanced at the lines, he turned the sheet of paper over, and with a pencil wrote a few words; then handed it to Terry, requesting him to direct the bearer to have the answer promptly telegraphed.

"Nothing unpleasant, I trust?" said Mr. Palma.

"Thank you—no. 'Only a summons which obliges me to curtail my visit, and return to Washington by the midnight train."

Interpreting a look from her step son, Mrs. Palma hastenen the slow course of the dinner, by a whisper to the waiter behind her chair; and as she asked some questions relative to mutual friends residing in Washington, Regina had no opportunity of renewing the conversation.

Mr. Roscoe was assiduous in his attentions to Miss St. Clare and Regina looked over at Olga, who was talking very learnedly to a small gentleman, a prominent and erudite scientist, whose knitted eyebrows now and then indicated dissatisfaction with her careless manner of handling his pet theories.

A REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

Brief mention is made in our casualty list of the death by accident of Captain Short and a man named Randolph at Sauble Point. Henry Gamble, who operates in the vicinity of Grand Marias, was at Saginaw, Mich., July 1, and gave a representative of the Courier the following particulars: "Hook & Randolph have been engaged in putting in a quantity of board pine timber on the Sauble banks, a high bluff on the shore of Lake Superior, and had a force of men at work putting the timber into the lake where it was made up into rafts to be towed below. The bank at this point is 400 feet above the water, and a shute was constructed down which the huge pieces of timber slid into the lake, and a crew of men and a tug then made them up into rafts. On the day of the accident a piece of timber which was crooked was sent down the shute at a terrible rate of speed, and on striking the water it took an unusual course, owing to the crook, it is supposed, shooting seaward and striking a portion of the raft, on which a number of men were at work, struck one of the men, carrying away his head, as complete a severance from his body as though cut with a knife. Going on, it encountered the yawl of the tug, in which was the Captain and two men, struck the former, crushing and killing him instantly, and then, as if satisfied with its bloody sacrifice, stopped in its mad career. The body of the Captain was terribly mangled.

The Salvation Army.

The procession, or as the Salvationists term it, the review and march-past, took place at Sheffield on Monday, June 23rd, in fine weather. Over 5,000 of the army, including rebresentives from India, Australia, America, France, and Switzerland, were present with General Booth, Mrs. Booth, and other members of the family. There were no disturbances, though the playing of the brass bands, of which there were about 50 in number, caused much amusement and jeering. In the evening meetings were held in the drill-hall and the Albert hall, attended by some 10,000 persons. The General, in strong language, denied that he and his family had benefited by the funds of the army; he had not had a shilling out of them for his own purpose since it was started. He had that day received intelligence that one who holds a high position in an important firm had decided to give up an income of £2,000 a year to become acaptain in the army, which would yield him 27s aweek. He would have to begin as a lieutenant at18s. It was reported that the army had now 590 corps at home and 254 abroad, and 1,411 officers at home and 587 abroad.

A PARK REQUIRED.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—The old saying "that everybody's business is nobody's business" is often carried out in municipal affairs where no one has an individual interest in the matter concerned. This partly accounts for the fact of a town of the importance of Peterborough having made no provision before this for ground within easy access of the town which can be converted into a park. This provision, though late, can yet be made, and we can yet obtain, and I understand at a very moderate figure, the spot that nature provided should be Peterborough's park.

I was never more firmly convinced of this fact than I was the other evening when admiring the canoe illumination from this spot—Burnham's Point.

Nature has provided that this should be a park, viz., from its accessibility to the town, the nature of the ground which is high and dry, from the view it commands and from the great consideration of its having water on the three sides.

What more can anyone want for a foundation whereon to make one of the prettiest parks on the continent. Of course this land is not within the town limits, but this is only temporally as no one doubts that before long Ashburnham will form part of our town. Don't let us "cut off our nose to spite our face." I am sure Ashburnham would be glad to pay their share in proportion to the advantage they derive from it. From what I have heard I believe the railway company would allow us to put a foot-bridge on their piers which can be cheaply done. This park question, and in fact most questions are killed by public individuals who have private ends to serve and who put self before public good. But the time has come when this important question should be acted upon before it becomes too late, or we shall have to go far from the centre of the town to find such a suitable place. Let us make strong effort to obtain this spot, where we can resort to after the heat and burden of the day is over and our "children and children's children will rise and call us blessed."

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, July 12, 1884.

AN APPEAL FROM PORT PERRY.

To the Editor of the Review:

SIR,—The accompanying circular will give you some idea of the loss the people of Port Perry have suffered.

At a meeting of the Relief Committee held on Wednesday evening it was unanimously resolved to ask the editors of city dailies in Canada to ask for subscriptions to be sent to them. Will you kindly announce in your paper that you are authorized to receive subscriptions, and remit from time to time to the Manager, Ontario Bank, here?

Yours very truly,
N. F. PATERSON,
Sec. Committee.

DESTRUCTION OF PORT PERRY BY FIRE.

At midnight on the 3rd of July inst., a fire broke out in the hotel premises known as the "Mansion House," being fanned by a high wind every building in the business portion of the town was entirely consumed.

When day dawned 62 business places and 15 residences, with all their contents, were in ashes. One hundred persons were direct losers by the fire, and about three hundred more were thrown out of employment; a large majority of the above are in need of prompt assistance. A careful estimate has placed the loss at $345,000, insured for $152,000—but a small grocery store was left. Many, whose prospects the night before were bright and promising have been ruined, some have lost the earnings of a lifetime.

In November last a fire destroyed a large portion of the business centre, the loss was $116,000; several who lost heavily then have suffered severely by this last calamity. The assessed value of the village this year is $360,000 so that in less than 8 months property exceeding in value the whole assessment by $100,000 has been swept away. The population is 1800; when compared with the fires of Chicago, Boston and St. Johns, the loss to our Village is far greater in proportion, for with us every one is more or less a direct loser. To add to the burden of the people, there is a debenture debt of $47,000 on the village, part of which will fall due on the first of September next. Our yoke is too heavy for us to bear; our once bright, pretty and prosperous village has received a shock from which we fear it cannot recover without assistance—a parallel case has never been known in this country.

A committee of citizens has been formed to solicit monetary aid as follows:—H. Gordon, Reeve, chairman; N. F. Paterson, Q.C., secretary; W. J. McMurtry, Manager Ontario Bank, treasurer; and Messrs. W. J. Trounce, E. Major, C. Dawes, Caleb Grandell, and P. A. Hurd.

Contributions sent to W. J. McMurtry, Esq., Manager Ontario Bank, Port Perry, will be paid out on the order of the Committee by cheque of the chairman and secretary. A faithful account of all receipts and expenditures will be kept and published, and only the deserving and needy will be aided. The committee appeal with confidence to the liberality of a generous public and of municipal bodies for assistance.

H. GORDON, Chairman, N. F. PATERSON, Secretary.

[In accordance with this request we shall be happy to receive and forward any contributions that may be sent to us.—ED. REVIEW.]

The Eno Case.

QUEBEC, July 10.—Judge Caron gave judgment to-day in the Eno case. After reciting the details of the arrest he took up the different points urged by the prosecution. He held that the indictment by the grand jury of New York was not sufficient, as it was foreign, and the facts had been proved without reference to the laws of Canada. He further held that the indictment, even if excepted, did not cover forgery as understood under the treaty, for they charged forgery in the second and third degrees, which were not known in our laws. The evidence, moreover, did not go to prove that such an offence had been committed as constitutes forgery under Canadian or English authorities. He found nothing in the case to justify his committing the accused under the extradition treaty. He therefore maintained the writ of habeas corpus, and ordered that the prisoner be set at liberty.

Preserves.

A scheme is on foot among the farmers in the neighborhood of Hamilton, Dundas and Waterton to purchase the Dundas marsh from the Government and transform it into a private shooting and fishing property. The scheme will probably get into definite shape in a week or two.

Arrival of General Middleton.

General Middleton, the new commander of militia in Canada, arrived in Quebec on Sunday morning per S.S. Polynesian. Upon disembarking a salute of 13 guns was fired from the Citadel.

FARM MATTERS.

Now is the time to go through the apple orchard and to look for signs of the appletree borer. If carbolic soap is diluted with water, and the trunks washed with it, the borer will be expelled, but if the egg has been inserted beneath the bark no outward application will destroy it.

A correspondent of the Fruit Recorder says he has boiled leaves and stems of tomato plants until the juice is all extracted, and finds the liquor deadly to the caterpillars, lice, and many other enemies of vegetation. It does not injure the growth of plants, and its odor remains for a long time to disgust insect marauders.

It is all very well to break the colt and exercise him gently when two years old, but it will be a great mistake to put him at hard work until two years later. Fast road service is more injurious than farm work. While the muscles and bones are yet tender injuries are easily incurred which no after care will remove.

A horse whose eye is inflamed from any cause should be protected from the light and the eye strengthened as much as possible by tonic applications, as cold solution of three grains of sulphate of zinc to one of water. In case of dust, a wire frame fitted with a fine green gauze should be fitted over the eyes to arrest the dust.

Stallions and other animals kept for procreative service are all the more vigorous and surer breeders for doing some work. If properly handled bulls may be made to work enough to pay for their keep. This is often done in Enope, where a bull harnessed to a cart is frequently seen. The bull is stronger than an ox of equal size.

Much is said about cows for general purposes, meaning usually their adaptability for making into beef after they are two old for the dairy. But a cow that is good for butter, cheese, or milk should never be killed until so old that her value for beef will be very small, however well-built she may be. Practically, the only use we may need consider a cow's value is for the dairy.

Until trees got to the bearing age hoed crops should be the only ones sown among them. It is ruinous to young trees to have wheat or spring grain growing on the ground. Seeding to clover is equally bad. If the clover is ploughed in, the alternate stunting and stimulation produces an unhealthy growth, and the trees are more liable to disease.

Sows about to farrow should be allowed some exercise and be fed mainly with green food. This will make parturition easier, increase the tendency to give milk and prevent the feverish condition which frenzies so that they often destroy their pigs. A sow that has once done this is not apt afterwards to make a good mother, and should be fattened as quickly as possible.

A correspondent of the Mirror and Farmer applies the "hot water cure" to hard milking cows in this way:—"Before milking, put two or three handfuls of water upon each teat as hot as the hand will bear. After giving the teats a thorough soaking, wipe lightly with a dry cloth or strip with the hand until there is no danger of the water dripping into the pail; then milk at once." By this means a hard milker can be milked in half the usual time.

Garden slugs, when they become a nuisance, may easily and safely be abated. Distribute pretty liberally over the garden flat pieces of stone or bit slate or zinc. At nightfall put a little bran on each fragment, and soon the slugs will come out from among the plants and shrubs to feed upon the bran. When it is dark go out with a lantern and a pail containing some strong brine, and remove the slugs from the bran-baited surfaces and put them in the pail, where the salt water will soon dispose of the pest.

Warts are caused by some peculiar poison in the skin which produces outbreaks of fibrous skin tissue, more or less vascular, and supplied with blood and nerves. When these are removed in one place they are apt to appear in another. They are allied to the more serious tumours which are cancerous in their character. The only remedy seems to be to remove them as they appear until the offending matter is exhausted. To touch the surface with nitric acid on a small glass rod is one of the best methods. When the raw skin is reached after a while it is dressed with zinc ointment.

Curled leaf in the peach trees usually occurs after a severe cold storm, while the leaves are tender, and the curl is properly attributed to the cold. The fact that insects find these curled leaves good hiding-places does not indicate that they are the cause. With the return of warm weather, if the soil is properly enriched, the curl will speedily disappear. On poor soil the check to growth shown by curled leaves is not so readly recovered from, and it is often the premonitory symptom of the yellows. But curled peach leaves abounded years ago, when the yellows was an unknown disease.

Mr. S. H. Thomas, of Clerk county, Ohio, informs us that he has successfully fought the plum curculio for two seasons by the use of tar smoke. He takes an ashpan, puts in a layer of chips, smears these with pine tar, then adds another layer of chips with more tar, and so on till the pan is sufficiently full to keep burning. This he sets on on fire, and places it so that the smoke will thoroughly fill the top of the plum tree, choosing the early morning or late evening, when the air is still, and applying the smoke just at the time the petals are falling from the plum blossoms. He has found a single application made at this time to be sufficient to secure a full crop of plums, the scent of the smoke apparently adhearing to the young fruit for sometime after the application.

While for general market one should grow those sorts of apples which combine most flavour and long-keeping qualities, it is nevertheless not always desirable to look to quality alone. Early fruits, to sell well, should be attractive in size and colour. Winter apples are more apt to be sold upon merit than appearance. The large and showy early fruits sell quicker, however. For one's own use a few showy apples are also desirable. Some time and attention can very properly be given to handsome fruit. They are a source of surprise and pleasure to grower and visitors. In a pecuniary point of view such fruits are not useless. Most buyers are more favourable impressed with an orchard containing a few showy fruits than with one of the opposite nature.—American Cultivator.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Camping Parties.

Parties are now moving north to spend a few days on the shores of the lakes. A party consisting of Messrs. W. Brownscombe, F. Foote, B. Clarke and Long went north at noon to-day. They will pitch their tent at Hurricane Point, Stoney Lake.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Fresh westerly to north-westerly winds; fair weather; not much change in temperature.

An Upset on the Street.

When the Orangemen's procession was passing up George Street on Saturday night, a horse became frightened and its antics upset the buggy. The band stopped playing, the horse was quieted and the vehicle placed right side up, the damage done being slight.

Real Estate Sold.

The property on Aylmer Street, sold by Mr. R. Lund at auction, was purchased by Mr. John Garvey for $1,950. The rough cast dwelling on Brock street, on the church property, owned by Mr. Young, was purchased by Mr. Robert Rowe for $520. Mr. Stapleton conducted both sales.

Cricket.

A cricket match will be played in the Ashburnham grounds on Thursday between the Peterborough and Toronto clubs. The Toronto club is one of the best in the Province, and the match will therefore be a very interesting one.

The team of the Peterborough club will be published to-morrow. It is proposed to select fifteen to play a match with this team to-morrow afternoon, and all who will take part are requested to be on the grounds at 3 o'clock or as soon after as possible.

Estate of the Late James Hall, Esq.

Remember the auction sale of the valuable town and suburban property belonging to the estate of the late James Hall, at Halpin's Hotel, Hunter street, on Tuesday, the 15th July, at 2 p.m. The property consists of the houses on Hunter street opposite the Oriental hotel, between Mr. Kingan's hardware store and Mr. Belleghem's furniture store. The land on the south side of Hunter street, lying between Mr. Halpin's blacksmith shop and Mrs. Barbino's Hotel, the block bounded by Hunter, Brock, Aylmer and Bethune street, except that occupied by Sheriff Hall as a residence, and park lot 3, south of the gravel road and west of Park street, south of the residence of Elias Burnham, which has been laid out in 21 building lots, and other property. Easy terms of payment are offered and prices will be reasonable.

The Methodist Churches.

The Rev. I. Tovell, who has succeeded the Rev. John Shaw, in Peterborough, preached in the Charlotte Street Church on Sunday morning and the George Street Church in the evening. At the evening service he chose for his text Philippians iv., 23.—"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." His subject was the duties of the minister and the members of the church in working for the salvation of souls, and he dealt with it in an able manner. The Rev. F. McAmmond, B.A., the new pastor of the Ashburnham Church, also occupied the pulpit of that church on Sunday, morning and evening. Mr. McAmmond preached in Otonabee in the afternoon on each Sunday. The congregation of the Murray Street Church, which is now closed, on account of the union, divided between the George and Charlotte Street Churches, and the pupils of the Sunday School also divided pretty evenly between the schools of those two churches.

THE STABBING AFFRAY.

Th Prisoner Remanded to Gaol—The Wounded Italian in a Critical Condition.

On Saturday afternoon Contable Craig, of Ashburnham, brought the Italian whom he had arrested on account of the stabbing affray in the village, before Mr. Dumble, Police Magistrate. The prisoner's name is Joseph Maffei, and the name of the man who was so seriously wounded is Peter Scarpion.

The charge, which was laid by Jas. Jardine, was simply that the prisoner did, on July 11th, stab Peter Scarpion, contrary to the statute in that behalf, Maffei was remanded until Friday next.

The prisoner is a good-natured looking man, and one would not expect, judging from his looks, to find him engaged in such an affair as that which took place at the boarding house on Friday night or early Saturday morning.

Scarpion, the wounded man, was taken, soon after receiving the wound, to the house of Mr. Kelly, who lives near the scene of the row, close to the railway track. He has there received good nursing and careful attention. Although he has improved somewhat, he is still in a critical condition, and his ultimate recovery is by no means certain.

A Great Offer.

The greatest bona-fide offer ever given in Peterborough for Dry Goods is at the celebrated Red Store.

The Time to Buy.

The Red Store has made sweeping reductions in prices. Now is your time. Next to the REVIEW Office.

Personal.

The Rev. Jas. Cleland, of Port Hope, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church on Sunday.

The Golden-Eye.

The steamer Golden-Eye now runs regular trips to Harwood and Idyl-Wild, on the days on which the Whistle-Wing formerly made the trips.

Summer Underclothing in Merino, Gauze, Balbriggan, Lisle Thread and Cotton (all sizes) at Habiliment Hall.

Masonic.

We notice that at the annual meeting in Toronto of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters, Mr. E. H. D. Hall was elected Inspector General of the N.W.T. Division. At the annual meeting of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Dr. Fraser was elected superintendant of the Ontario District.

The Idyl-Wild Lacrosse Cup.

Arrangements are being made for a lacrosse tournament to be played on the Peterborough grounds on Tuesday, July 29th, the clubs to compete for the valuable cup presented by Mr. H. Calcutt, and known as the Idyl-Wild cup. Quite a number of clubs are expected to compete.

Mild Pleasantry.

Eight days after the appearance of the meteor the Lindsay Post facetiously remarks:—"On Thursday night of last week a brilliant meteor flashed across the sky from the south-east and after bursting in a grand display of celestial fireworks, disappeared behind the sheds of at least fourteen of the most respectable residents of the south ward. That at least seemed to be the general opinion expressed to our reporter by the people mentioned. The surprising thing about this meteor was not that it was brilliant, unexpected, and that its appearance before the public was made rather hurriedly, but that it was not first seen, that it rose and set and that the fragments are preserved in and about Peterborough. Come, Peterborough, waken up or your claim for claiming things first will be presently disputed."

An Obstinate Gate.

One of the gates at the locks last week gave trouble on account of being hard to open. On Friday night it refused to open at all and he Whistlewing, which was going to Keene was delayed for some time. A number of men put their shoulders to the lever, and a tow line was fastened to the gate so that the steamer could render assistance, and finally it was opened. Mr. R. Jackson dived to the bottom, and ascertained what the trouble was. The bolts had sprung a little, and in consequence the roller on which the gate worked had cut into the plank. On Saturday the gate was repaired, and it now opens and shuts easily again.

Fire in a Dry Goods Store.

People have often been attracted by the fine display made in the windows of Mr. Thos. Kelly's store, but on Saturday evening a larger number than usual were drawn that way by a (fortunately) unusual sight. When the gas was being lit by a boy in the store, and he had applied the match to one jet, he turned the rod around so as to light the second jet. In doing so the flame ignited some goods, and instantly the goods in the window were in a blaze. The alarm was sounded, and the firemen turned out, but their services were not required, as the fire was extinguished. A large amount of goods, however, was damaged, including lace, hose and dress goods, both by the fire and the smoke. The loss will amount to between $200 and $300 and is covered by insurance. The damaged goods, as will be seen by Mr. Kelly's advertisement, will be sold at reduced prices.

THE C. P. R.

The Monetary Times of July 11, contains the following:—The assurance of the Canada Pacific directors that the means already provided are sufficient to enable the company to complete the construction of the line, was needed in the London market. The heavy fall in the price of shares had caused some uneasiness there. But as the Economist remarks, the downward movement, "is in the main due to New York selling," and "when the company would only have been too glad to avail itself of the London market, London was flooded with shares already placed in America." How the attack on stocks in the position of that of the Canadian Pacific is made, the New York Commercial Bulletin explains: "The most sensitive points in the loan market are selected for special attack. Railroad and other enterprises in an incipient stage and which are dependent on credit for their completion are the favorite objects of assault. It is known that a certain amount of the paper of such corporations is afloat bearing frequently the endorsement of its supporters and backed by new securities. If such paper can be rendered unnegotiable, or its collateral impaired, or if suspicion can be cast upon the names it bears, that is an achievement to the purpose." In such a state of the market, it is fortunate for a road under construction when, without so borrowing, it has the means provided for its completion. And in this position the Canadian Pacific is now declared to be.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the large Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

RECIPROCITY.

The people of Canada do not desire that anything more than an exchange of raw products should be considered. We are quite willing to exchange our wheat, corn, oats, limestone, plaster and other articles for various staples in the United States or elsewhere, but decline to proceed any further in the medium of exchange. —Montreal Herald (Reform.)

WHO PAYS THE DUTY?

In Hamilton anthracite coal sells for $6.50 the net ton. In Philadelphia it sells for $6.50 the long ton. That would be $5.80 for the ton of 2,000 pounds. The distance from the mines to Philadelphia is less than 100 miles, from the mines to Hamilton the distance is about 400 miles. The difference in freight is greater than the difference in price. And yet papers will persist that the Canadian consumer pays the duty.—Hamilton Spectator.

FACT AND THEORY.

Mr. Bright has been the recipient of not a few letters in which complaint is made that several British industries are suffering severely in consequence of the successful importation of the productions of "protected" countries, which are underselling the productions of British manufacturers on their own soil. The only consolation the greatest living apostle of Free Trade gives them is in effect: Protection is a fraud: Free Trade is the true political economy; struggle on and hope for the best. But the facts are against Mr. Bright.—Ottawa Citizen.

A CORRUPT BARGAIN.

There can be no doubt that an understanding was arrived at by which Mr. Wheler was to accept an office at the hands of Mr. Mowat and Mr. Edgar was to get his place.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

REFORMERS RESISTING.

There is no use in the Globe talking about the liberals of West Ontario looking to "Tory papers for advice or counsel"—all the Reform papers in the Riding are a unit in their dislike of its Toronto nominee, and the offensive manner in which the electors were required to accept its dictum.—Newmarket Era (Reform.)

THE SWEET SINGER SPURNED.

The Globe and a few other partisans are in an agony of fear lest the sweet singer of the party be again rejected, but all who look forward to the emancipation of the electors of this country from the domination of the machines in politics, will rejoice at this manifestation of a vigorous growth of independent thought.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

A DEPOSED DICTATOR.

The dilemma in which Mr. Blake and Mr Edgar find themselves over the West Ontario election is due entirely to the Globe's blundering attempt at dictation. The organ does not realize that it has lost the power over the Grit electors which it formerly exercised so arbitrarily. It still assumes to play the role of dictator, though the personal force of character and intellectual grasp which once enabled it to rule as with a rod of iron is forever gone. Nobody is now alarmed by its sheet-iron thunder and stage fire.—Toronto News (Indep.)

FRANCE AND CHINA.

A SETTLEMENT PROBABLE.

LONDON, July 12.—A peaceful settlement of the Franco-Chinese difficulty seems likely. The representatives of China adopt a conciliatory tone and are understood to offer fair reparation.

CHINA'S FATUITY.

LONDON, July 12.—The Shanghai correspondent says that Sir Robert Hart, the Chinese Customs Inspector, is trying to negotiate with the French Minister. The foreign council seems blind to the dangers of a war of rebellion. Prince Chun trusts to the boasting fanatics and officials who conceal the defenceless condition of the coast and ignorance, confusion and treachery, render the situation most critical. The British officers have left the Chinese Fleet.

AN OFFER.

PARIS, July 12.—La Paris believes that Fong Pao, the Chinese Minister, has made an offer to M. Ferry to immediately withdraw the Chinese troops from Tonquin and declared that China recognized France's demand for reparation. The Chinese admit they lost 400 men in the engagement at Langson.

THE LANGSON AFFAIR.

Ferry is disposed to consider the Langson affair a misunderstanding. The indemnity will probably be limited to £800. It is hoped that the trouble will be promptly arranged.

The Alberta's Collision.

DETROIT, July 12.—The propeller Pacific which collided with the Canadian Pacific propellor Alberta in the Sault River a few days ago, arrived in port yesterday towing the schooners Commodore, W. L. Peck and Groton. It was reported that the Pacific, which belongs to Cheseborough, of this city, was in a sinking condition, but it was found that there was only a slight leak and that she was not making over two inches an hour. The bow of the propeller has gone down as far as the main deck and the stern is carried away to the surface of the water. The officers on the Pacific claim that the Alberta is to blame for the accident. The Alberta blew a signal whistle which was answered by the Pacific. The Alberta's whistle indicated that she would pass on the starboard side and the Pacific on port. Notwithstanding this the wheelman on the Alberta ported the wheel and the consequence was the Pacific struck the Alberta forward of the wheel house, breaking plates, three or four ribs, and deck beams. The damage to the Alberta was all above water and she continued on her route. The shock stopped the Pacific and her tow sheered off to the side and went by her. After a few minutes' delay the propeller continued to Detour where she was patched up and had canvas stretched over the bow. The passengers on the Alberta were badly frightened, and when the collision happened a general stampede took place for the stern of the ship. It is the opinion of those on the Pacific that had she not been heavily laded her damage would have been a great deal more serious. The Pacific and her tow are bound to Cleveland with lumber, and after discharging her load, the propeller will be docked at that place. It is expected the Alberta will be obliged to come to this port to have the damage done to her iron work repaired.

How to Make Candy.

This book gives full directions for making all kinds of plain and fancy candy. The receipts for making caramels, chocolate drops, French mixed and all other kinds of candies contained in this book are the same as used by the leading city confectioners. Any one can have these candies at home at less than one third the usual cost. Sent post paid for 50 cents (no stamps taken). COBOURG.

VITRIOL MISTAKEN FOR WATER.—On Saturday last as Lena Boswell was washing clothes she was approached by Minnie Stillwell, who took up a bottle lying on the window, and telling her that she would anoint her with "holy water" proceeded to pour the liquid on the young girl's head. The victim began to scream and soon all the mill was in an uproar and the liquid was found to be vitriol. The side of the young girl's face as well as her neck and arms are seriously burned. She will be marked for life.

A United British Empire.

"From one end of the British Empire to the other, the subjects of this mighty confederation rejoice in their unity, their loyalty to the representative of the Imperial Government, to their national flag and to each other. Personally the sovereign is esteemed and loved, but the "divine right" exists no longer, even as a respectable thory. Englishmen—and we use the word in its widest and noblest sense, which combines the three kingdoms—recognise in the crown not a personal rule, but the embodiment of the highest principals of the democratic government and the glory and greatness of an empire on which the sun never sets. We sometimes hear shallow pated stump orators talk glibly of the lack of loyalty in the colonies and the readiness of the people to throw off the ties with the mother country. We don't believe it. Every Englishman, worthy of the name, is proud of his country, he is proud of her traditions, her national prestige, of the respect paid to her subjects in every part of the world, proud of his flag that floats triumphantly in every sea. No Roman citizen had so noble a birthright. Colonists are not going to exchange these privileges for the sake of enabling a few Brummagem statesmen to pose as the founders of a pettifogging republic."—The Auckland (New Zealand) Evening Star.

MEGANTIC

At length the Reformers have gained what is not simply a "moral victory." Their candidate has been elected at Megantic for the House of Commons by the small majority of 31, there having been a turnover of 75 votes, not an extraordinary difference considering that they had in Mr. Langelier an exceptionally strong candidate from his official position and his great personal popularity. It must also be remembered that Megantic is an old Reform constituency, having been represented by Reformers in the first four Parliaments since Confederation, and by a Conservative only in the fifth Parliament for a time. This regain by the Reformers of their former seat is not a matter of great political importance, and the almost unprecedented fact still remains that the large majority of the Macdonald administration at the general election still remains undiminished by the subsequent bye elections, a very unusual experience. Under these circumstances the Reformers sadly need some gleam of success, and we need not grudge it to them.

ENGLAND AND CANADA.

A VALUABLE and interesting contribution both to the literature and the history of Canada is the new work just published by Mr. Sandford Fleming, C.E., C.M.G., "England and Canada, a Summer Tour Between Old and New Westminster, with Historical Notes." In a very pleasant style, clear and unpretentious, Mr. Fleming describes, from his full personal experience, the whole route from the capital of the Empire to the western boundary of our wide Dominion. Much historical information is agreeably interwoven with the narrative, while his remarks as to our connection with the rest of the Empire, and our future position, will have weight with all, as coming from one unaffected by party ties and having exceptional opportunities of forming an enlightened opinion.

But the chief interest of the work to the majority of readers will lie in the descriptions of our great interoceanic highway, destined as it is not only to unite our Provinces but to be one of the great commercial routes of the world. It is satisfactory to find that so excellent and experienced a judge should give such a good account of this great national work, both as to the engineering and the thoroughness of the construction. His comparison, too, with the other great transcontinental roads will impress upon the mind the superiority of our own route.

On one point of great importance Mr. Fleming gives testimony which cannot be disputed coming from such an impartial source. It will be remembered that the route through the prairies, as selected when he was in charge of the work as chief engineer, was further north than the line now adopted, the Canada Pacific Railway Company having deflected it to the south, chiefly with the object of lessening the mileage by taking a more direct course. The enemies of this great national enterprize seized upon this opportunity for disparagement, and represented this section of the road as running through a sterile, semi-desert country, quite unfitted to attract agricultural settlers. Our author completely refutes these calumnies, both of the country and or the C.P.R. route. Having in his mind these depreciatory accounts, he paid particular attention to the matter, and fortunately he found them to be utterly unfounded, the whole region being fertile and well adapted for the growth of grain. The disparaging accounts of this region, which Mr. Blake and some of his followers rashly accepted, the wish being father to the thought, and which they so unpatriotically circulated without examination, are thus proved to be utterly untruthful by the testimony of a witness who, if biassed at all, might be expected to be somewhat prejudiced against a route selected in preference to his own. And then Mr. Fleming has missed the opportunity of acquiring fame by having his name published far and wide in the emigration literature of the United States as decrying his own country—that is a glory which he cannot share with Mr. Blake.

Perhaps the most striking portion of this interesting volume is that which describes the manner in which Mr. Fleming and his friends penetrated through the mountain passes on horseback or more frequently on foot, amidst all sorts of difficulties and dangers. Their party was in fact the first to pass through the mountains on the route now adopted by the C. P.R., by the Kicking Horse, Rogers' and Eagle passes, through the main chain of the Rockies and the Selkirk and Gold Ranges. And here again we have the satisfactton of knowing that Mr. Fleming thoroughly approves and appreciates the advantages of this route, though a smaller minded man might have been prejudiced in favour of the line chosen formerly by the engineers under his control as chief engineer.

We have not attempted even to mention the numerous subjects upon which Mr. Fleming touches in this volume. He traversed every province of the Dominion in the trip except Prince Edward Island, and he has something fresh and interesting tc say of each, besides giving intelligent views on many things of general interest. A very clear map aids the reader in following the course of the author.

We may add that the publishers, Dawson Bros., of Montreal, have made the appearance of their volume as attractive as its contents. It should have a large sale, for it is full of interest and no reader can fail to learn something from it. Mr. Sandford Fleming has earned another debt of gratitude from Canada and all interested in it.

A REMARKABLE DISCOVERY.

The Lalande Primary Battery—An Electric Light that Pays for Itself.

Electric lighting by means of the primary battery would appear to have advanced another step by the introduction of the Lalande primary battery. This apparatus, however, comes before the public with the remarkable claim that it not only gives a good electric light for nothing, but leaves a profit to the user out of the residual products. The nearest approaches to this have been primary batteries which have given the light at a somewhat low cost owing to the sale value of decomposed elements. The Lalande battery goes far beyond this, and its proprietors certainly, to a large extent, substantiate the claims they set up for it. Practical application on a commercial scale, however, will be the only satisfactory test, and steps are now being taken to apply this test. The battery is composed of a series of cells, each of which consists of an iron tray in which is placed a layer of the depolarizing agent, which is oxide of copper. Over this, but not in contact with it, is a zinc plate, the tray being filled with a solution of caustic soda. This acts upon and decomposes the zinc only when the circuit is completed, no action taking place when the circuit is open. Upon completing the electrical circuit the oxygen of the oxide of copper combines with the zinc, oxide of zinc being produced and metallic copper remaining behind. When the battery has been exhausted the zinc is recovered from the soda solution in the form of an oxide which is stated to be 25 per cent, more valuable than the metallic zinc. The oxide of copper can be revivified at a trifling cost and used over and over again. We recently inspected the Lalande battery at the offices of Mr. H.A. Fergusson, of 31, Lombard street, London. The battery was made up of 48 cells each 1ft square and giving a current of between 15 and 20 amperes, the electro motive force being a little under one volt. The battery is said to be capable of supplying a current to 15 glow lamps of 10 candle power each. The current can also be used for supplying motive power. These two points were fully demonstrated as an excellent and a steady light was produced from nine Woodhouse and Rawson glowlamps, and one of Ayrton and Perry's motors was run at a high speed and developed considerable power. The invention of the battery is due to M. Lalande, but the credit of utilizing it for the manufacture of oxide of zinc belongs to Mr. J. Berger Spence, the head of the firm of manufacturing chemists bearing his name. Mr. Spence was seeking a means of making the oxide more cheaply than by the ordinary process, and was trying electrical decomposition when he met with M. Lalande, whose system he has adopted at his works. The battery is stated to be perfectly constant so long as the elements remain efficient, and it is claimed that while the light is not being used no waste takes place. There is, moreover, no smell from the battery as when acids are used. On the whole, there appears to be much in favour of the system and, on behalf of the public, we hope the expectations of the proprietors may be fully realized, inasmuch as they promise to supply the public with the electric light at a price much below that of gas. At the same time they are to make a good profit for themselves out of the oxide of zinc which is in great request for making paint and for other purposes in connexion with the arts and manufactures.—London Times.

Our Provincial Debt.

Messrs. Blake and Mackenzie, after opposing the scheme of Sandfield Macdonald to give $1,500,000 out of the surplus, when they came to the treasury, gave that and $1,400,000 more, the province being mortgaged for the last mentioned amount to scatter largess to servile supporters. The mortgage is now due, and the iceterest has to be paid. One might have supposed the sum necessary could be taken from the $5,000 000 surplus which Mr. Mowat boasts of possessing. But instead we find him going to the money markets abroad with a bizarre scheme to raise the wind. People have been asked ro buy forty year annuities to an amount sufficient to cover the interest now coming due on Blake's railway mortgages. Has that scheme been successful, or has it signally failed? The Globe is dumb on the subject.

But is it fair to the people that they should be kept in suspense and ignorance? The matter is a serious one. The money has to be raised in some way, and if the Annuity Dodge does not work, the people will have to shell it out in some other and more direct way, for the surplus balloon has been effectually punctured by the disclosure of the nature and intent of the Dodge question. We have now to smart for the inconsiderate generosity of Mr. Blake and his friends on the occasion referred to. Where will the money come from, supposing the Annuity pedlars have been unable to make sales? That is the next question to be considered.—London Free Press.

"Too Previous."

Don't be too previous, young man. Go slow, take it easy, and consider your ways. Be ever watchful of the future, but in so doing it is not at all necessary for you to deprive yourself o all the legitimate pleasures of the present. Laugh and be merry, but dont resort to low dives and questionable companions to do it. Associate with no boy or man whom you would be ashamed to see your mother and sister with. Be courteous to all and confident with none. Mind your own business first, and then if you have time, which you will not, attend to other people's affairs.—Peck's Sun.

A SHAKESPEARIAN DISCOVERY.

The Rev. W. D. Macray has recently discovered in the Bodleian Library an old letter from a certain Wm. Hall, a Queen's College man, who took his B.A. degree in October, 1694, to Edward Thwaites, of Queen's College, a well known Anglo-Saxon scholar. The interest of the letter consists in the light it throws upon the verses cut upon Shakespeare's tombstone. Mr. Halliwell-Phillipps has printed it for private circulation, with a short preface, in which he shows that it was probably written in December, 1695, and goes on to say —:

"Early traditional notices of Shakespeare are of such excessive rarity that incessant research among the multitudinous records of England have heretofore disclosed only four manuscripts of the kind belonging to the seventeenth century. The present discovery adds a fifth but unfortunately it follows the brevity of its predecessors. But yet, in one singal respect, this lately discovered manuscript of 1694 is the most important of the series—it is the only one in which there is recorded a vestige of the personal sentiments of the great dramatist. And, when we consider the fidelity with which traditions were then handed down in rural districts, can it henceforth be reasonably doubted that the poet gave expression from his deathbed to a special wish that his bones should forever rest in peace?"

The portion of the letter that refers to Shakespeare is as follows :—

Dear Neddy,—I very greedily embrace this occasion of acquainting you with something which I found at Stratford-upon-Avon. That place I came unto on Thursday night, and the next day went to visit the ashes of the great Shakespeare which lye interr'd in that church The verses which, in his lifetime, he ordered to be cut upon his tombstone, for his monument have others, are these which follow :—

"Reader, for Jesus' sake forbear
To dig the dust enclosed here ;
Blest be he that spares these stones,
And cursed be he that moues my bones."

The little learning these lines contain would be a very strong argument of the want of it in the author, did not they carry something in them which stands in need of a comment. There is in this church a place which is called the bone-house, a repository for all bones they pick up, which are so many they would load a great number of waggons. The Poet, being willing to preserve his bones unmoved, lays a curse upon him that moves them, and having to do with clerks and sextons, for the most part a very ignorant set of people, he descends to the meanest of their capacities, and disrobes himself of that art which none of his cotemporaries wore in greater perfection. Nor has the design missed of its effect for, lest they should not only draw this curse upon themselves but also entail it upon themselves they have laid him full seventeen foot deep, deep enough to secure him. And so much for Stratford, within a mile of which Sir Robinson lives, but it was so late before I knew, that I had not time to make him a visit."

A THEORETICAL BUSINESS CHAT.

We, among others, have lost quite heavily of late through the honest failure of three firms who at one time seemed fully competent, financially, to meet all the waves of adversity which might come, but they all relied too much upon the promises of personal friends and were forced to succumb, as is generally the case when the meeting of obligations depends upon the action of a third party.

It would be well when one is about to enter trade, and concludes that his reliance rests chiefly upon the promises of personal friends, to be sure of it that this man leans upon a broken reed. If he deems it essential to his success that he must secure some one peculiar locality for the establishment of his mill, above all others, he could not entertain a greater fallacy. And a too common belief that certain salesmen must be employed, if competition is met with sufficient strength, to endure a formidable encounter with a rival of enterprise, betrays at once the weakness of a would-be mill or factory owner. The idea of a large building, brilliantly decorated, a finely furnished office and splendid equipage, is one of the most delusive and fatal of all the notions apt to be considered seriously by the inexperienced.

The miller or manufacturer, in fact anyone who starts out depending largely upon such auxiliaries, will repent his folly and cry for help, when, alas! none of his pillars of strength will do to lean upon even for a single moment.

Real merit, and that alone, can be utilized when the pinch comes. Dreams of a splendid building, hosts of friends, best salesmen and a fine location, all vanish when paying patrons are wanting, and the expense account absorbs not only profits, but capital itself. The manufacturer or merchant finds out not only that he has one weak spot, but many, and that the successful tradesmen he had expected to outstrip have suffered nothing by his efforts, but, on the contrary, owe him an obligation for convincing the custom of both places that mere pretrense and sham will not pass current among honest people.

It is well to have an establishment of easy access and well furnished with all modern appliances, machinery and the like, to make out of the material at hand the best that can be made. Again, one must be assured his qualifications are not outbalanced by his competitor, and by no means ever allow a rival to think for a moment that he can outdo you in politeness and courtesy to all with whom you may come in contact. Reduce expenses to the lowest possible point commensurate with the production of good goods, ask a fair price and be positive that no one can undersell you and make a profit ; he may sell at less than cost, but such do not hold out long.

In conclusion, in the majority of instances where we have lost heavily by others' honest failures it has been among a class who, though understanding their own business thoroughly, possessed the ambition which characterizes Americans, and, to make a better show, dabbled in some outside business. This generally means failure in the end, unless you have the amount so invested to spare without crippling your own business.—Lumber Trade Journal.

A Picnic Picture.

(From Peck's Sun.)

Now doth the picnic young man and maiden bloom forth in all their glory. Arrayed in smiles and garments of white, at the rising of the sun, they return again at the setting thereof, clothed in brown and green decorated garments. Yea, verily his white duck pants plainly showeth the green moss stains which did put themselves thereon as he climeth the tree to hang the hempen pendulum on which to swing her, while near the top thereof, and where their fulness is, have these same white duck pants changed to "crushed grass" and berry pie tints. She who went forth in all her glory, looketh even as though her robe had been used as a towel, yet both are much pleased, at least so they say, with their picnic experience.

Matters Commercial.

The Earl of granville has sent further notice to Mr. West, the British Minister at Washington, directing him to ask, that if advantageous terms are given to Cuba for the admission of Cuban products into America, the products of the British Colonies in the West Indies be placed on the same footing.

DISEASES OF SHEEP.

The sheep is a ruminating animal, and in common with all cud chewers, has a very complex digestive system ; and while its four stomachs do not hasten, but rather prolong, the work of digestion, yet that work is more perfectly done in the sheep than in any other of our domdestic animals. But on account of the complexity of its digestive organs, it is liable to diseases affecting this system. The brain and nervous system of the sheep are smaller, in proportion to its size, than those of any other animal. On this account they are not capable of great and long continued exertion ; the circulatory system is also small and comparatively feeble. On account of these peculiarities sheep are not very subject to active inflammatory diseases; but the power to resist disease, or to recover from it when attacked, is diminished from these same causes. Indeed a serious attack of disease in sheep too often proves fatal, and especially if it be a disease that makes a drain on the fluids, or in any way depletes the power of the system. This fact must be remembered in the treatment of their diseases. Bleeding or active purging should not be resorted to except in active inflammation, and then cautiously. In the treatment of diseased sheep all medicine should be given in a liquid form, through a drenching horn or a properly shaped funnel. If given concealed in food it passes into the first stomach, or pouch, where it is liable to be lost. The chief diseases of the breathing organs are catarrh, or cold, and pneumonia, or inflammation of the lungs. Catarrh is known by profuse running at the nose, often accompanied by a cough. It is a disease of the winter and spring months, and is generally the result of too close and too warm stabling. Sheep need dry bedding and protection from rain, but their health demands a free exposure to the open air. Catarrh is a troublesome but not a dangerous disease, unless the inflammations extends to the lungs, when it becomes pneumonia, which is generally fatal. This transition is marked by a quick and laboured breathing, a frequent hacking cough, and a grinding of the teeth together. The discharge from the nostrials becomes yellow ; a high fever, a loss of appetite, and thirst are present. Bleeding and purging with Epsom salts is the treatment recommended, but usually death terminates the case in a day or two under any treatment. This disease is often the result of exposure to cold rains after shearing. The special diseases of the digestive system are diarrhœa and costiveness. Diarrhœa or scours, as it if commonly called, occurs generally in the spring, when the diet is changed from the dry winter food to the tender spring grass. This disease is not generally accompanied with the loss of appetite, nor with fever, and therefore is seldom fatal. The sheep afflicted with diarrhœa should be separated form the flock and kept in a lot with but little grass on it and fed with dry food until the condition of the bowels is corrected. If the disease is stubborn give an ounce or two of castor oil, and follow it by two tablespoonsfuls of strong oak bark tea, with half a teaspoonful of prepared chalk or baking soda in it, morning and evening. Costiveness often occurs when sheep are changed from green pastures to dry food. The animal frequently stretches itself and making a groaning noise when voiding dung. A little linseed meal mixed with the food will generally remove this difficulty. A mixture of sulphur and salt, placed where sheep can get at it, is a good precaution against disturbance of the bowels in this direction.—Colman's Rural World.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A BIB for children has been patented by Mr. George E. Kimball, of Franklin, Mass. The bib has on its front a pocket for a nursing bottle, so the clothes will be protected, the bottle held conveniently, and the contents not apt to be spilled nor the bottle broken.

A FIRE alarm has been patented by Mr. Chas. H. Judson, of Greenville, S.C. In combination with a wire having highly fusible connections is a spring connected with a mechanical bell rinving mechanism, several lines of wire from different parts of a house being so arranged that the melting of any one of them will give the alarm, and record the place of fire on an annunciator in the office or elsewhere.

A MULTICHAMBERED bottle has been patented by Mr. Edwin D. Newton, of New York city. The bottle has one or more thermic chambers, each with an orifice at its lower end to introduce hot water or a heating fluid, with passages at the upper end for the escape of air, the thermic chambers being surrounded by fluid chambers for rapidly and uniformly heating the fluid.

AN improved gate has been patented by Messrs. Josiah Austin and Rosco Chamberlain, of East Liberty, Ohio. This invention covers improvements on automatic gates formerly patented by the same inventors, by which a quicker movement is obtained, and the gate is operated with a greater facility.

A DUMP cart has been patented by Mr, Robert Clark, of Brockville, Ontario, Canada. This invention covers a special construction and combination of parts, for both waggon and harness, so that the weight on the cart tongue bears directly upon the saddles of the horses, and they are enabled to carry the load naturally.

"MAY DEW"
The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.
It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented ; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white ; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Two Eggs in One.

Mrs. McCullough, who is visiting Mrs. Finlay, while eating an egg the other day found within it a perfectly formed smaller egg, about the size of that of a sparrow. This is a rare though not unprecedented phenomenon.

Warm Weather Ties in great variety at Andrew McNeil's.

Festival.

A social will be held this evening in the Separate School Grounds, Murray street, in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral. The Fire Brigade Band will be in attendance, and the grounds will be illuminated with electric light.

The team to represent the Peterborough Cricket Club in their match with the Toronto's on Thursday, will be chosen from the following:—Messrs. Rutherford, Rogers, Cooper, Grundy, Hatton, Miles Hamilton, Max Hamilton, Leader, Logan, LeRoy, Montgommery, Norley Stratton.

Peterborough Canoes.

The July number of the American Canoeist, the official organ of the A.C.A., contains a full account of the Ontario Canoe Company and the various craft built by it, with numerous illustrations. Peterborough canoes are appreciated in the United States as well as in Canada and Great Britain.

Sick and Homeless.

Constable Adams on Monday night at about 12 o'clock found a man named Thomas Collins lying in the street, very sick. He took him to the cells and Dr. Kincaid was sent for. The physician left some medicine for him, and the constable remained with him until five o'clock this morning. Collins was brought into the Court as a vagrant and was allowed to go.

Foresters' Excursion.

The annual excursion of the Canadian Order of Foresters will be held on Thursday, July 24th. The excursion will be over the line of the Midland Railway, by special train, to Couchiching Park and Orillia. The Peterborough Lacrosse Club will accompany the Foresters and will play a match at Orillia with the club of that town. The indications are that the excursion will be one of the pleasantest ever held under the auspices of the Foresters, and their picnics have always been successful.

NEWBOLD AGAIN HEARD FROM.

An Interesting Story of his Family—He is Still Romancing.

A recent issue of the Toledo, Ohio, Evening Post contains a strange story regarding the notorious bigamist, Newbold, and his family. The Post says:—

"A well known citizen of the Eighth Ward cornered a Post reporter and extracted a promise that his name would not be used in connection with what he had to say, and then proceeded to tell a remarkable story of old England which the name of Newbold alias Neveille, had called to mind.

"He said 'Neveille's' grandfather was John Newbold, steward of Sir Francis Burdette, Earl of Derby, and was with the Earl imprisoned years ago because they were Quakers. Dickens took the circumstances for a novel, and describes the king as going to prison with his faithful servant Samuel. The Newbold family is a numerous one, and were employed about the immense estate in Derbyshire. The eighth warder's mother was a Newbold, and was maid to Lady Frances. Lady Coutts, relative of the Baroness Burdette-Coutts, was of the family. In 1810, Sir Francis and John Newbold were liberated, and soon after Newbold came to America with a son, the father of the Toledoan, but returned to England, leaving his son here. When he died he was succeeded to the stewardship by one of his sons, he thinks Joseph, and that Neveille, if he is a Newbold, is a son of Joseph and a second cousin.

"The gentleman was conducted to Neveille and the two enjoyed a talk about Old Hingland. Neveille said the old man living at Peterborough was Joseph Newbold, and he was a perfect likeness to the visitor. He was born, he thought, either in Derbyshire or Leicestersnire. He was not the son of Joseph Newbold, although he had carried that name at times. The old Peterborough man knew who he was, but was forbidden to tell until a certain event occurred.

"A surprising circumstance was Neveille telling his visitor what his (the visitor's) mother's name was, and how old she would have been if she had lived until now. He said her name was Elizabeth Newbold, that she was a sister of Joseph Newbold, of Peterborough, and had never been heard of after she married and left England. All this the gentleman pronounced true. Neveille carried the idea that he had been adopted by Joseph Newbold, but that his name was not Newbold."

Look for It.

Read H. Levi & Son's Proclamation of War on the 2nd page.

A Great Offer.

The greatest bona-fide offer ever given in Peterborough for Dry Goods is at the celebrated Red Store.

Summer Underclothing in Merino, Gauze, Balbriggan, Lisle Thread and Cotton (all sizes) at Habiliment Hall.

Golden-Eye.

The steamer Golden-Eye will run to Idyl Wild in place of the Whistle Wing every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Tickets to return the same day only 60 cents. See advertisement.

Regatta at Lakefield.

A Regatta will be held at Lakefield on Tuesday, July 22nd, commencing at three o'clock p. m. The races include sailing, double paddle, hurry scurry, skiff, and four paddle races, for which first and second prizes are offered. A band will be in attendance. There will be a grand illumination on the water in the evening, when a prize will be given to the best illuminated craft.

One of the Finest.

Lytell's Dramatic Company will produce "The World" in the Opera House on Wednesday night, and the "The Galley Slave" on Thursday night. This company is highly spoken of by the press. The following is from the Port Hope Guide:—

"Mr. Mackie, of the St. Lawrence, who has enjoyed the privilege of seeing this company in Toronto, says they gave one of of the finest entertainments he has ever witnessed. The company are also a fine lot of people and were patronized by the most select circles in Toronto."

Lacrosse.

At a meeting of the Lacrosse Club held on Monday night it was decided to arrange a match with Orillia for July 24th, to take place in Orillia. The Hastings and Norwood Clubs have also been written to with a view to arranging return matches with the second twelve of the Peterborough Club. As the proprietors of the Driving Park have decided to build a fence around it at once, lacrosse matches will be played there, as the ground is longer than the grounds now used.

A Nor'wester's Hard Luck.

"I'll give you an interesting item," said a gentleman to a REVIEW reporter this afternoon, and the graphite annihilator having intimated that such an item was always acceptable, he related the hard luck of a certain man who had been living in the North West for some time and who had become tired of living in bachelordom. He returned to a certain town in western Ontario, and, when he thought the ground well prepared, proposed marriage to a young lady—and the proposal was rejected. This act of the young lady's stung him a little, but he still had hopes, and he proposed to a second. Again he met with a refusal, and twice rejected, dejected and desperate, he proposed to a third young lady, and was refused for the third time. The most startling part of the item was that the three proposals were made inside of two hours, and a man who could propose three times in two hours certainly deserved to get a wife, even if he did not succeed. "The information is reliable," said our informant, "but I do not wish the name of the town mentioned." Consequently the town that holds the hero who beat the record of rapid proposals must remain unknown.

Bodega.

Fine Spanish wines, Ports and Sherries drawn from the wood, at William Chamberlain's Restaurant.

The Time to Buy.

The Red Store has made sweeping reductions in prices. Now is your time. Next to the REVIEW Office.

Piano Tuning.

Flannel Shirts suitable for Campers' use in Blue and Grey at the Fashionable Gentlemen's Furnishing House, Habiliment Hall.

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!

Is the heading of the poster now in the printers' hands announcing the Foresters' annual picnic to Orillia on Thursday, the 24th of July. As the return fare is placed at a price within the reach of all, one dollar, there is no doubt the excursion will be a great success.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

HEALTH.

THE letter which we publish to-day from Mr. Lech deserves to receive full attention not only from the public bodies to which he refers, but from all who wish to see our town healthy. Those who may think that Mr. Lech is too easily alarmed have only to ask the opinion of their medical advisers to find that he does not speak without cause. If we neglect to observe the plain rules of sanitary science, we have only ourselves to blame, if we suffer the consequences of thus sinning against nature.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

THE OLD TRICK.

The Ottawa Free press is at its old tricks—fomenting discontent and inciting to rebellion; anything to create a feeling of antagonism against the Dominion Government.—Winnipeg Times.

MOWAT'S BRIBERY FUNDS.

The Conservative party does not object to grants to roads; but it enters a most emphatic protest against making these grants a gigantic bribery fund. That the Grits do manipulate the road grants for political purposes is proved by the fact that in years when an election occurs the appropriations are almost double when compared with the years when election matters are quiet.—Muskoka herald.

UNPOPULAR AND UNPATRIATIC.

Rev. Nelson Brown, who pretends to represent the farmers of High Bluff in the Farmer's Union, is probably the most unpopular man in that parish. He ran for councillor once and only secured two votes—those of the mover and seconder of his nomination. These are the the kind of 'influential' men who are making such a fuss about Manitoba's grievances, and these very same men are seriously injuring the country abroad, especially in England, where their insane actions are being made use of to prevent emigration to Canada."—Portage La Prairie Tribune-Review.

THE GLOBE CONVICTED.

At the West Ontario Liberal convention there was a most decided kick against the attempt that is being made by the Toronto machine to foist an outsider upon the constituency. The Globe, which a short time since denied that Mr. Wheler, the ex member for the riding, had accepted an office, was convicted of lying by a letter which the chairman read from Mr. Blake, stating that the cause of the opening of the constituency was the acceptance by Mr. Wheler of "an office of emolument."—Ottawa Sun (Indep.).

THE "REFORM" POLICY.

With the average Reformer the poplar cry is rule or ruin.—Winnipeg Times

THE GLOBE'S CONFESSION.

Before the party organ at Toronto took the license to declare that the constituency was opened for a given purpose, care should have been taken to have voiced the electorate—at least to a certain extent—NewMarket Era (Reform).

ROGUES FALLING OUT.

The mendacity of the Globe, which plainly stated that the late member had not received any office, was clearly brought out by the letter from Mr. Blake, read by the president, stating that Mr. Wheler had obtained a government position.—Toronto News. (Indep.).

A C. P. R. BENEFIT.

"A Large Freight Payer," in a communication in this issue, talks very sensibly regarding the endeavors of the C. P. R. to please the public. As he says, it was the competition of the Port Auther route of the C. P. R. that lowered the rates on the all rail route, via St. Vincent.—Winnipeg Times.

THE WEST ONTARIO JOB.

The wire-pullers in Toronto came to the conclusion that the seat should be given to Mr. Edgar, a director of the Globe, a well known Reform agitator, and a man who made both himself and his party ridiculous by writing some very trashy campaign poetry at the general elect on of 1882. The wishes of the people were not consulted at all, the wire-pullers considering it preposterous that they had any right to say who should or should not represent them. —Montreal Star (Indep.).

MR. MOWAT'S CRIMINALS.

He (Mr. Mowat) "invaded" Algoma, and spent a large sum of the public money in order to win an election in that district. He set the election law at defiance, disfranchised a large body of the electors of Algoma, and then passed legislation with intent to screen the criminals,—who had done his bidding—from the consequences of their crimes.—Halifax Herald.

MUCH THE SAME.

The "Canadian" flag exhibited at the office of a Toronto "independence" organ the other day, was about as close an imitation of the great American stars and stripes as the designer could make without infringing on the patent. The difference between "independence" and annexation is still less than the difference between the two flags.—Hamilton Spectator.

ORDERS TO PHYSICIANS.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Frelinghuysen to-day instructed by cable the consular officers at London, Liverpool, Marseilles, Havre, Bordeaux, Bremen, and Hamburg to appoint competent physicians to inspect vessels and passengers departing for America from the ports mentioned. They were instructed to refuse clean bills of health in all cases except upon the recommendation of a sanitary inspector, and to report by cable any case of infectious or contagious diseases known to exist on a vessel at time of departure. This course is adopted that the American health officers may have warning of approaching danger.

Yellow Fever in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 15.—Yellow fever is quite bad at Guayras. There are several cases at Mazatlan. The people are fleeing from the latter place. Hermosillo authorities have quarantined the Sonora railway. The fever this year appears confined to the Pacific coast.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. GOOD CROPS.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Associate press reporters of the Stock Exchange say that the crop situation is the chief topic of discussion and the favourable character of the advices from the grain growing regions was the principal factor in speculations to-day. ### THE BOUNDARY AWARD.

First Point Decided by the Privy Council—The Award Not Binding.

LONDON, July 15.—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decided to-day the first point raised in connection with this dispute as to the boundary between Ontario and Manitoba. The question put for the decision of the Committee was whether the award of Sir Edward Thornton, Sir Francis Hincks, and the late Chief Justice Harrison, the boundary arbitrators, was binding upon Ontario and the Dominion. For Ontario it was argued that the Award partook of the nature of a solemn treaty between two nations. The parties to the dispute agreed to leave the matter to the decision of the persons they selected to arbitrate upon the question; and now they should be bound by the award arrived at after mature consideration and much investigation. For Manitoba it was claimed that the arbitration was not authorized, that Ontario and the Dominion had not agreed to be held to it, and that all the interests touched by it were not consulted or represented. It was further urged that the Arbitrators had not as required, found the actual boundary line; but had arrived at a compromised boundary, in which respect they had exceeded their instructions and had assumed the functions of the Legislature. Their Lordships held that the duty of the Arbitrators was to find the exact boundary referred to on the Confederation Act, and not to mark out or suggest a new boundary. It had not been agreed in advance that the decision of the arbitrators should be binding; and in the face of the Imperial Act it could not be binding unless the boundary was the true and indisputable boundary. It was therefore within the competence of either of the parties to object to the Award, and in the case of an objection it fell through. The award is not a binding award. It having been claimed that Ontario must extend to near Hudson's Bay, because the Hudson's Bay Company's territory was the western boundary of old Canada, and because that Company territory extended no farther inland than to the Company's posts on the shore of the Bay, the committee dealt with that question. It refused to entertain the contention in that regard, and insisted that the actual boundaries of the Hudson's Bay Company's territory must be ascertained in order that the true western boundary of Ontario may be marked out.

FANCY REPORTING.

THE Toronto World has given a very fanciful and imaginative account of the first day's proceedings of the bribery Commision. Those who have ever seen Judge Scott will be amused with the following description of him :—

"The third commissioner, Judge Scott of Peel, is a little man with red hair and red beard and a pair of large spectacles, and had no sooner taken his seat than he began writing vigorously and placed his head as close to the table as it could possible be kept."

Fancy six feet odd inches being discribed as "little," and black hair and beard (perhaps slightly whitened now by time) being called "red." The spectacles too may possibly be now required, though we doubt it, for recently his piercing eyes did not require them, and his described attitude and demeanour are very different from the erect carriage, and grave, thoughtful, dignified look of Judge Scott.

Other portions of the World's version of the circumstances seem to be equally imaginative.

SHUNNING ENQUIRY.

THE Mowat administration seems to be determined that there shall not be a full and fair investigation of the charges of complicity in bribery brought against various persons of both parties, some within and some without the Ontario Legislature. The Attorney General and his colleagues have practised a variety of devices to obstruct a thorough examination of the circumstances of the case. In the legal proceedings theyhave joined Messrs. Bunting, Kirkland, Meek and Wilkinson in one charge, with the express purpose of closing the mouths of all of them and preventing them from giving evidence of the conspiracy by the Reform leaders and their tools to procure bribery in order to make political capital. Now that the Commission of judges, appointed to continue the investigation begun by the Committee of the Legislature, has commenced proceedings we find the same system adopted of burking enquiry. The council for these confessed culprits, Mr. S. H. Blake, strenuously opposed the demand of Mr. Meredith to be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses, and succeeded by technical objections, in shutting him out. Of course it is possible that Mr. Blake took this course on his own responsibility, and we all know his dislike of fair investigations. In fact he would have no standing himself before the Commission, for he would be stript of his gown, if the charges freely circulated against him by a political friend in this town of attempting to obtain money under false pretences had been proved true, for if they were true he only escaped by the refusal of this friend to tell the truth about him before a professional court of honour. But we can hardly believe that even Mr. Blake would have the effrontery to, frustrate a full enquiry without the instructions of his employers, who at all events can disavow him if he has misrepresented them.

The absurdity of this one-sided enquiry is self-evident. Certain charges of giving and receiving bribes have been brought against different indiuiduals, and being denied will be properly investigated before any of those charged can be found guilty. But there are other charges of committing the serious moral if not legal offence of conspiring to induce, and tempt men to commit bribery. These are not indeed charges to be proved, for they have been confessed by the culprits, but it may be important to fathom the extent of their rascality. As the chief of these plotters are Mr. Blake's employers, how can he be expected to assist in investigating this portion of the case. For instance is he likely to be inquisitive about the whereabouts of Mr. Mowat's friend Lynch, who is being kept up out of the way because he knows too much of this Reform plot, or to enquire from what source Lynch obtained the money which he tendered to the too willing informers and traffickers in their votes? It probably came out of the Provincial Treasury, but would Mr. Blake follow any clue in this direction even if it lay under his nose?

There should be a full and impartial investigation and those who are found guilty should receive their deserts, but it is evident that this is the last thing that is desired by those who at all events are confessed conspirators, and who are prostituting the name of the Crown for their own political gain.

THE MOWAT & CO. PLOT

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF THREE JUDGES.

The Mowat Administration Opposes a Thorough Investigation—The Culprits Conduct the Examination—Informer McKim

On Monday morning the Royal Commission, consisting of Vice Chancellor Proudfoot and County Judges Scott and Senkler held their first meeting to investigate the alleged bribery affair in the Ontario Legislature. Mr. S. H. Blake, Q. C., and Mr. W. Johnston appeared for "the Crown," that is for Mowat & Co. Mr. Caswell for Mr. Kirkland, and Mr. Meek for himself.

HAVE THEY JURISDICTION ?

Mr. HECTOR CAMERON, Q. C., gave his reason for not representing Mr. Bunting without his definite instructions, as Mr. Bunting had received no notice, and as there were doubts as to the jurisdiction of the Commission, especially on account of an alteration of the Act in the Gazette from its form at the third reading. He also thought they could not go on while the indictment was pending.

The CHAIRMAN said that if this alteration had been made they would have no jurisdiction.

SHIRKING INVESTIGATION.

Mr. W. R. MEREDITH, M. P. P., desired to have an opportunity as a member of the assembly of cross-examining the witness, especially as some of those charged were not represented by counsel. A full enquiry was essential and an investigation down to the very bottom was what the public looked for.

It was not even as if the Commissioners were conducting the examination, but it was conducted by the counsel for the Administration, and as some of the members of it had been charged their counsel could not be expected to probe the matter to the bottom.

Mr. BLAKE stoutly resisted this application unless Mr. Meredith appeared for one of those charged.

The COMMISSION took this view and Mr. Meredith retired.

The INSPECTOR and the CLERK of the Legislative Assembly gave some formal evidence.

THE CHIEF DECOY.

INFORMER MCKIM repeated his old evidence, with some additional improvement probably arranged, as was his first account, in concert with Mr. Pardee.

A MINISTER'S KNAVERY.

While being cross-examined by Mr. Meek, Informer McKim confessed (we quote the Globe's report) that he "went and spoke to Mr. Pardee, and that gentleman advised him to go ahead and catch Wilkinson if possible."

Mr. AWREY, M. P. P., gave evidence as to Mr. Kirkland persuading him that his views as to the Government's timber policy were reasonable.

Mr. FENTON, the County Attorney, and Col. DENNISON, the Police Magistrate, gave evidence as to the papers found on Kirkland.

The Commission then adjourned.

SANITARY MEASURES.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—I have repeatedly observed in the Peterborough Review, letters by ratepayers urging the town to action in obtaining grounds for a public park. The object of my remarks is in no way to oppose a scheme, which in itself is praiseworthy and commendable, and I think no one can accuse the people of Peterborough of being careless or indifferent, as there are evidences so striking, which can hardly escape the eye of a daily observer, but are more so, acknowledged by strangers who have visited our town, and who proclaim that Peterborough cannot be outrivalled by any place of the same size in style or beauty. This, however, should not set us at rest and make us think that all the claims, and some very imperative ones, are satisfied; but before we clothe ourselves with the outer garments, let us consider that the ones closer and nearer to ourselves are of greater importance, and ought to be kept clean as a necessity for health, and if neglected, we must pay the penalty by failing health. As the expenses for general improvement of the town, are chiefly borne by George street, even the watering of the street, although a benefit to the public in general, is borne by a local tax, and yet for all this, George street is sadly neglected. In vain I have looked over the list which came forth, after the councillors had made the inspection of streets and bridges for needy repairs expecting something for our principal street. Striking it must have been to any observer, how much the estimates differed, for the improvements noted down, and no doubt some of them thought of providing for some extras, and a great deal of our money will be frittered away as usual without giving us any value more substantial. Now, as we have a Board of Health, I raise the question before we consider the Park (as ten minutes walk from the centre of the town will bring us to that grank park which nature has so lavishly bestowed on us,), that is, what Peterborough wants at present without loss of time, and which is the Council's as well as the Board of Health's imperative duty, to urge the former body to action, and without which, the Board of Health would become a useless body, is the necessity of having a sewer constructed for George street and making extensions according as our finances will permit. The advocacy of earth closets by the Board of Health is well enough outside of George street at present, but insufficient where the population grows every year more dense, and nothing short of a sewer will insure health. Let us not close our eyes and slumber when this question receives serious consideration everywhere with alarm. Had the Council done its duty, the construction of a sewer in conjunction with the waterworks would have made the former less expensive than what it will cost now.

Yours, &c.,
WM. LECH.

Arrest of a Merchant.

HALIFAX, July 12.—Great excitement has been caused here in business circles by the arrest of Henry Hart, of Breamer & Hart, West Indian merchants. The firm recently failed for a large amount. Mr. Hart was arrested on a charge of obtaining $1,000 under false pretences. The warrant was issued at the instance of the Halifax Banking Co., and Hart was arrested at the Halifax Hotel last evening by Detective Power and the City Marshal. He was subsequently released on giving bonds himself in $2,000 and two securities in $1,000 each. The preliminary examination will begin Saturday, as witnesses will have to be procured from Guysboro. Hart, it is said, obtained various amounts ranging up to $5,000, from the Halifax Banking Company, on notes made by his father and endorsed by himself, upon asserting that the notes were bona fide transactions, and that his father was worth $20,000. It has now been ascertained that these were nothing more than accommodation noter, the sequel being a charge of fraud and consequent arrest. Other banks are said to have discounted notes under like conditions. Hart is a man of about 45, but without family. —Globe.

CHAPTER XXIII.—CONTINUED.

Mrs. St. Clair called Regina to her sofa, to make some inquiries about the Cantata, and when the latter was released, she saw that both Mr. Chesley and Mr. Palma were absent.

A half hour elapsed, during which Olga continued to annoy the learned small man with her irreverent flippancy, and Mrs. Carew seemed to fascinate the two gentlemen who hovered about her, like eager moths around a lamp. Then the host and Congressman came in together, and Regina saw her guardian cross the room, and murmur something to his fair client, who smilingly assented.

Mr. Chesley looked at the window, and at Olga, and his eyes came back, and dwelt upon the young girl who stood leaning against Mrs. Palma's chair.

Her dress was a pearl white alpaca, with no trimming, save tulle ruchings at throat and wrists,—and a few violets fastened in the cameo Psyche that constituted her brooch.

Pure, pale, almost sad, she looked in that brilliant drawing-room like some fragile snow-drop, astray in a bed of gorgeous peonies and poppies.

Lifting her eyes to her host, as she leaned over the back of her sofa, Mrs. Carew said:

"Miss Orme poses almost faultlessly; she has evidently studied all the rules of the art. quite pretty too; and her hair has a peculiar gloss, that reminds one of the pounded peach-stones with which Van Dyck glazed his pictures."

The fingers of the hand that hung at his side, clenched suddenly, but adjusting his glasses more firmly, he said very quietly:

"My ward is not quite herself this evening, and is really too unwell to be down stairs; but appeared at dinner in honor of your presence, and in deference to my wishes. Shall I ring for your wrappings? The carriage is waiting."

"When I have kissed my cherub good-night, I shall be ready."

He gave her his arm to the foot of the stairs, and returning, announced his regret that Mrs. Carew was pledged to show herself at a party, to which he had promised to escort her. Whereupon the other ladies remembered that they also had promised to be present.

Mr. Chesley standing at some distance, had been very attentively studying Regina's face, and now approaching her, took her hand with a certain tender courtesy, that touched her strangely.

"My dear Miss Orme. I think we are destined to become firm fast friends, and were I not compelled to hurry back to Washington to oppose a certain bill, I should endeavour to improve our acquaintance. Before long I shall see you again, and meanwhile you must help me to find an adopted daughter as much like yourself as possible,—or I shall be tempted to steal you from Palma. Good-bye. God bless you."

His earnest tone and warm pressure of her fingers, thrilled her heart, and she thought his mild brown eyes held tears.

"Good-bye, sir. I hope we shall meet again."

"You may be sure we shall."

He leaned down and looked at her, she saw his mouth tremble.

A wild conjecture flashed across her brain, and her hand clutched his spasmodically, while her heart seemed to stand still. Was Mr. Chesley her father?

Before she could collect her thoughts, he turned away and left the room, accompanied by Mr. Palma, who during the evening had not once glanced towards her.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Mrs. Carew had arrived on Tuesday morning, and announced that a previous engagement would limit her visit to Saturday, at which time she had promised to become the guest of a friend on Murry Hill.

Accustomed from her cradle to adulation and indulgence, she had a pretty, yet imperious manner of extracting it from all who ventured within her circle; and could not forgive the cool indifference which generally characterized Olga's behaviour.

At ten o'clock on Thursday night, when the guests invited to dinner had departed, and the family circle had collected in the sitting room to await the carriage, which would convey the ladies to a wedding reception,—Mrs. Carew came down stairs magnificently attired in a delicate green satin.

As she stood before the grate, with the white lace shawl drooping from her shoulders, and exposing her bare gleaming bust, Olga exclaimed:

"O Queen of the Nile! What Antony awaits your smiles?"

As if aware that she were scrutinized, the gray eyes sank to the carpet, then met Olga's.

Miss Neville is not the only person who has found in me a resemblance to the Egyptian sorceress. When I return to Italy Story shall immortalize me in connection with his own impassioned poem. Let me see, how does it begin:

'Here, Charmian, take my bracelets.'"

She passed her hand across her low white brow, and glancing furtively at Mr. Palma she daringly repeated the strongest passages of the poem, while her flute-like tones seemed to gather additional witchery.

Sitting in one corner, with an open book in her hand, Regina looked at her and listened, fascinated by her singular beauty, but astonished at the emphasis with which she recited imagery that tinged the girl's cheeks with red.

"If there be a 'cockatoo' in Gotham doubtless you will own it to-morrow. But, forgive me, oh Cleopatra! if I venture the heresy that Story's poem, gorgeous though I grant it,—leaves a bad taste in one's mouth, like richly spiced wine, hot and sweet and deliciously intoxicating; but beware of to-morrow! Sometimes the poison of asps is not confined to figbaskets; and with your permission I should like to offer you an infallible antidote, Seraph of the Nile."

Mrs. Carew smiled defiantly and inclined her head, interpreting the lurking challenge in Olga's fiery hazel eyes.

Leaning a little forward to note the effect the latter began and recited with much skill the entire words of "Maud Muller." Whenever the name of the Judge was pronounced she looked at Mr. Palma, and there was peculiar emphasis in her rendition of the lines:

"But the lawyers smiled that afternoon,
When he hummed in Court an old love tune.
* * * * * * * * *
He wedded a wife of richest dower,
Who lived for fashion as he for power."

How had Olga discovered the secret which he believed so securely locked in his own heart? Not a muscle moved in his cold guarded face, but a faint flush stole across his cheek as he met her sparkling gaze.

Mrs. Carew's rosy lip curled scornfully.

"My dear Miss Neville, should you ever be smitten by the blast of adversity, your charming recitative talent would prove wonderfully remunerative upon the stage."

"Thanks! but my observation leads me to believe that at the present day the profession of the Sycophant pays the heaviest dividends. Does Cleopatra's fondness for figs enable her to appreciate my worldly wisdom?"

Regina knew that Olga meant mischief to both host and guest, and though she did not comprehend the drift of her laughing words, she noticed the sudden smile that flashed over her guardian's countenance, and the perplexed expression of Mrs. Carew's eyes.

"Miss Neville has as usual floundered into her favorite blue mire, whose stale scraps of learning cannot tempt me to pursuit."

"Not into the mud of the Nile, oh celestial Isis! but into the classic lore of Hellas. Ask Mr. Palma why I am opposed to smuggling figs—especially rose-colored figs."

Olga was leaving the room, had almost reached the door, but at the last words she turned and her face sparkled mischievously.

"Beautiful Egypt is acquainted with sphinxes and should be quick at guessing riddles. Will Cleopatra or Anthony answer my conundrum? When my erudition creates a panic, why am I like those who dwelt about Chemmis, when the tragical fate of Osiris was accomplished?"

Mr. Palma answered promptly:

"Because the Pans who inhabited that region were the first who learned of the disaster, and as they spread the fatal news among the people, all sudden public frights and shocks have been ever since called panics. The carriage is ready. We shall be late at the wedding. Olga, where is your shawl?"

As they quitted the room together, he added in an undertone:

"Your Parthian warfare would have justified me in returning your arrow, but I was never an expert in the use of small arms."

With her hand upon the balustrade of the stairs, which she was ascending, Olga looked down on him, and her eyes blazed with an intensity of scorn and defiance.

"To your empty quiver, not your leniency, I am indebted for my safety. Your arrows were all skilfully barbed, and even the venom of asps distilled upon them;—but you have done your worst,—and failed. Parthian tactics ill suit my temper let me tell you, and just now I should infinitely prefer the Scythian style. Were I only for one brief hour Tomyris—I would carry your head, Sir,—where she held that of Cyrus,—in a bag."

He walked on to the front door, and those in the sitting room heard Olga run up the steps, singing with gusto that strain from Fra Diavolo,—ending: "Diavolo! Diavolo!"

In Male Attire.

For some time past the neighbors have been curious to learn the antecedents of the clerk in a west-end cigar store in Toronto. The supposed young man possessed a decidedly feminine cast of countenance and was very reserved in his manner, studiously avoiding all intercourse with the neighbours. Several incidents occurred which aroused the suspicion of the neighbours, some of whom kept a close watch upon the house, the result of which was a discovery which startled them. Upon the evenings on which the clerk took his weekly holiday it was noticed that a young woman, whose entrance had not been observed, regularly left the store and as regularly returned late in the evening, only to disappear from view until the next week. This strengthened their suspicions, which were afterwards confirmed by those who succeeded in getting a good view of the face of the young woman by the light of a street lamp near by. The neighbours are now discussing the best means to be taken to put a stop to this masquerading.—Globe.

A cure for Drunkenness,

There is a prescription in use in England for the cure of drunkenness by which thousands are said to have been enabled to recover themselves. The recipe came into notoriety by the efforts of Mr. John Vine Hall, commander of the Great Eastern steamship. He had fallen into such habitual drunkenness that his most earnest effort to reclaim himself proved unavailing. At last he sought the advice of an eminent physician, which he followed faithfully for several months, and at the end of that time he had lost all desire for liquor, although he had been for many years led captive by a most debasing appetite. The recipe, which he afterwards published, and by which so many other drunkards have been assisted to reform, is as follows:—Sulphate of iron, 20 grains; magnesia, 40 grains; peppermint, 44 drachms; spirit of nutmeg, 4 drachms; dose one tablespoonful twice a day.

The Late Senator Skead.

There will be an interesting Cricket match between Toronto and Peterborough clubs on the Ashburnham Cricket grounds, to-morrow, commencing at 11 o'clock a.m.

Electric Light.

The second dynamo machine has arrived. It is a similar one to the machine which has been working, supplied by the Royal Electric Company, its capacity being twenty-five lights.

Championship Match.

The first Lacrosse match of the season for the championship of Central Ontario will be played on the Ashburnham grounds on Friday between the Checkers of Beaverton and the Peterboroughs. The Checkers have not been defeated this year and an interesting match is expected.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Moderate winds, generally fair weather, stationary or slightly higher temperature.

An Accident.

Mr. Wm. Matthews met with a painful accident on Monday. While slaughtering hogs, in the pork packing establishment, his hand slipped and struck a knife, cutting a gash across the palm. The cut was a long one, and four stitches were put into it to draw the severed parts together.

"The World."

Lytell's World Company arrived on the noon train to-day and are registered at the Oriental Hotel. They will present "the World" in the Opera House this evening and "the Galley Slave" to-morrow evening. The company is highly recommended. The City Band Orchestra will furnish music at both entertainments.

Lovely Spot.

No more charming lake could be selected for a day's recreation than Lake Couchiching. On the wharves every facility is given for fishing, boating and general rusticating. For a pleasant day's outing, with the assurance of pecfect arrangements being made for the comfort of passengers, accompany the Foresters' excursion to Orillia on Thursday, July 24th. Return fare, good for two days, one dollar.

Personal.

Among the list of names of those who successfully passed the June examination at the Ottawa Norman School for professional Second Class Certificates, we are pleased to notice that of Miss Eliza Johnston, of Peterborough.

Mr. Thos. Dolan, of the firm of T. Dolan & Co., returned home at noon to-day from a visit to the Old Country. Mr. Dolan reports having had a pleasant visit to the home of his younger days in the Emerald Isle, and he certainly looks benefitted by the journey.

Mr. R. W. Thompson has returned to Peterborough from the Northwest.

S. S. Excursion.

The annual excursion of the George Street Methodist Sunday Sunday School was held on Tuesday. A party of about six hundred persons, including teachers, pupils, parents and friends, went east on the Grand Junction train and arrived at Hastings at about half-past ten o'clock. A picnic was held in Johnston's Grove, a picnic ground now well known to Peterborough people. A most enjoyable day was spent there in true picnic style, the principal amusements being base ball, lacrosse, foot ball, boating and swinging. The children, and the older people as well, appeared to enjoy themselves selves thoroughly. The party arrived home at about half-past seven o'clock in the evening.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE ESTIMATED RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES FOR THE YEAR.

A Report from the Committee on School Property—Fitting up Another Room and Repairs.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held on Tuesday evening.

PRESENT.—Messrs. Stevenson, (Chairman), Stratton, Sawers, Burnham, Kendry, Weir Denne, Errett, Millar, Dumble, Rutherford, Wrighton and Cox.

The CHAIRMAN explained that this meeting was a special one held for the purpose of considering and passing the estimates for the present year. It gave him pleasure to state that Dr. Tassie, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, was present, and, as it would not take them long to transact the business, there would be time for a consultation with him.

THE ESTIMATES.

Dr. BURNHAM, Chairman of the Finance Committee, then read the following statement of the receipts and expenditures for the current year:—

THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

| Fees from pupils | 712 39 |
| Amount required from town | 3,550 00 |
| Total | $5,917 39 |

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Estimate of the revenue and expenditure of the Peterborough public schools for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1884:

Expenditure.

|---|---|
| Salaries of teachers | $6,200 00 |
| Proportion of Secy.-Treas'. salary | 132 50 |

| Deficiency in demand of 1883 | 9 10 |
| Total | $8,334 00 |

Revenue.

| Fees from non-resident pupils | 80 00 |
| Rent charged to Collegiate Institute | 700 00 |
| Required from Town Treasurer | 6,900 00 |
| | $8,334 00 |

Recapitulation.

The total amount required from the Town Treasurer is as follows:—

|---|---|
| For the Collegiate Institute | $3,550 00 |
| For the Public Schools | 6,900 00 |
| | $10,450,00 |

Dr. BURNHAM explained that the increase of the levy over last year was caused by an increase of $200 in the salaries of teachers of the public schools, and an increase of $100 in the salary of the Inspector, and an additional teacher for the public schools. Last year, also, they had a surplus from the previous year, while this year they had a deficit.

The CHAIRMAN said that the Board should be paid a surplus caused by interest added by the Town Council to taxes not paid by a certain date.

The SECRETARY said that the Town Treasurer had said that the money would not be handed over to the Board.

Mr. DUMBLE said that they should have a report from the Property Committee as to improvements to the buildings, before the estimates were adopted.

THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

Mr. ERRETT then read the report of the Property Committee, as follows:—

To the Board of Education of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—The Property Committee of your Board have to report that they will, during the vacation, reseat the room we meet in; also seat and otherwise repair the north-east room of the flat [the lowest flat], to accommodate the smaller children attending the school.

They have made a careful examination of the heating apparatus of this building and the small building on these premises, accompanied by Mr. Bolton, a practical mechanic, skilled in putting in steam heating appliances, and are of opinion that they can make such improvements in the boiler steam pipes, and by using the other chimney near the boiler, as will, without any increase in fuel expense, or of building a costly smoke stack, make the heating of the building all that is required.

They will also repair the floors and building where necessary, put a porch over the north door to the new school room, and close in the porch over the outside door in the second flat on the west side of the building.

They are of opinion that storm or outside windows on the north and west sides of these buildings would aid greatly in the heating of the same, and add to the comfort of both pupils and teachers, but as this would entail considerable cost they cannot advise it being done this year.

They have considered the scheme for ventilating the rooms as submitted by Messrs. Halliwell & Gordon, but as it would involve an expenditure of nearly $1,200, they cannot see their way clear to advise the Board to adopt it, especially as the system of ventilating shafts very similar already exists in both buildings, and could be made operative by putting steam coils into the chimneys. Your Committee, before incurring so great a responsibility as so large an outlay would do, will require a special vote of the Board authorizing and directing them what to do in the premises, but they cannot recommend that it be taken in hand this year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. W. ERRETT,
Chairman.

Peterborough, July 15, 1884.

Mr. DUMBLE said that he understood that Mr. Wrighton was Chairman of this Committee.

Mr. ERRETT said that Mr. Wrighton had resigned and the Committee elected him Chairman.

Mr. RUTHERFORD objected to this procedure. He thought the Board should appoint the Chairman.

Mr. ERRETT maintained that each Committee could elect any member of it for its Chairman. He said that the work recommended to be done was estimated to cost $510.

After further discussion the report was adopted.

THE ESTIMATES ADOPEED.

The consideration of the estimates was resumed.

Mr. DUMBLE advocated the expenditure of some money, at least $100, in improving the ventilation of the rooms. Ventilation, he contended, was more important than heating, as they could keep out the cold by warmer clothing.

The estimates were adopted, and the Committee on Appointments met to consult with the Principal of the Institute. The Secretary-Treasurer was authorized by the Committee to advertise in the Globe and Mail for three teachers for the Institute, for the Mathematical, English and Modern Language Departments respectively.

POLICE COURT.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

WEDNESDAY, July 16.—Wm. Kearns, from Napanee, was charged by Constable Adams with being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty, but urged that this was "the first time he was ever tight," and on promising that such an oc-Kearns would not happen again he was allowed to go.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. George J. Gunpricht, piano tuner and repairer, for Mason & Risch, Toronto, will remain in Peterborough for a few days. Orders left at T. Menzies' bookstore, or Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's drug store will be attended to.

Music in the Park.

The City Band gave an open air concert in the Court House Park on Tuesday evening. Although the weather was cool, they had a fair sized audience. The music showed that they had prepared a good programme for the occasion.

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!

Is the heading of the poster now in the printers' hands announcing the Foresters' annual picnic to Orillia on Thursday, the 24th of July. As the return fare is placed at a price within the reach of all, one dollar, there is no doubt the excursion will be a great success.

Lake Couchiching.

Being translated means "Lake of Many Winds," and is without doubt one of the prettiest lakes in western Ontario, it being 750 feet above Lake Ontario and almost 400 feet above Superior. To feel the exhilaration of a high latitude, don't fail to accompany the Foresters' excursion on Thursday, 24th of July. Return fare, good for two days, one dollar.

Fruit Jars.

Every person putting up fruit should give the the jars the first-attention; without a perfect sealing jar, it is useless going to the expense and trouble of canning fruit, China Hall is the only store in Peterborough selling the improved perfect fitting "Crown Jar" in firsts. Every jar warranted. It costs no more to have the best as the enormous quantities, we handle enables us to sell our jars as low as any house in the trade and give a better jar, Stone Jars and Jelly Cans all sizes at CHINA HALL.

Pencil Points.

—One prisoner, arrested for drunkenness, in the cells last night.

—We understand thas the canoe parade will not be held to-morrow evening.

—The excursion business is in full blast. Good opportunities for enjoyment.

—The Independents (junior lacrosse club) will play the Victorias, of Millbrook, at that village to-morrow.

—An excursion party from Toronto will arrive here over the Ontario and Quebec to-morrow. It is under the auspices of the Sunday School of the Yonge Street Methodist Church.

—The annual excursion of the Sunday School of St. John's Church is being held to-day. Between 350 and 400 persons attended it and went down on the Grand Junction train to Johnston's Grove, Hastings.

A Social Festival.

A social festival was held on Tuesday evening in the Separate School grounds, Murray street, in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral. It was held under the auspices of the ladies of the congregation residing in No. 2 Ward. The attendance was large, there being over 600 persons present. The grounds were illuminated with electric light, and music was provided by the Fire Brigade Band. The band had prepared a choice programme, which they rendered in their usual excellent style. There was an organ in the library, and several local musicians and vocalists voluntarily contributed largely to the pleasure of the occasion by music and singing. The refreshment tables which were also in the school building, were well patronized, and the ladies who had charge of them—Mrs. M. McFadden, Mrs. J. Hackett, Mrs. Daly, Mrs. B. Morrow, Mrs. Mayhew, Mrs. T. Cavanaugh and Mrs. Kenneally—were kept busily employed. Mrs. Laplante and Mrs. Clancy had charge of the tables containing lemonade, candies and nuts, and, considering that the table was a small one, they realized a handsome sum. Mrs. John Doherty, the treasurer, had her hands full in receiving the revenue coming in from the different sources. The festival was a successful and most enjoyable one, and the result was satisfactory.

THE concentrated power and curative virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla render it the most reliable and economical medicine that can be used. It contains no dangerous or harmful ingredients and may be safely administered to patients of all ages. When you are sick, the best medicine that can be obtained is none too good, and is the cheapest, whatever its cost.

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—At all seasons, when the system is foul and the digestive powers feeble or the liver and kidneys inactive Burdock Blood Bitters are required.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all ether metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

Indian Head, N. W. T.
Mr. R. W. Thompson has left in this office some samples of Northwest wheat two feet long. It was sown on the 15th of April, 1884, and was grown on the farm of Mr. Wm. Cathcart (formerly of Springville) within seven miles of Indian Head, N. W. T., and the celebrated Bell farm. On the latter there are 7,000 acres in wheat, and they have sown 800 bushels of flax. They employ about 200 men and 200 horses. Major Bell, the Manager, is from Brockville, Ontario, where they purchase the most of their agricultural implements. They have $600,000 invested in this enterprise, and in harvest employ about forty self binders to reap the crop. The Mackay farm, also in the same vicinity, has about 600 acres in crop. The Burton Bros., from Millbrook, also expect to harvest 6,000 bushels of grain this year. Oats averaged last year about 50 bushels to the acre and wheat about 40 to 45. The season generally promises to be better than last year.

THE FORESTRY EXHIBITION

Manitoba's Place at the Forestry Show—A Model North-West Farm.

The Edinburgh Forestry Exhibition opened on the 1st inst. The display of foreign and native woods was very large and very interesting. One of the leading features of the Exhibition was the Manitoba exhibit which is thus described by the Edinburgh Scotsman. "The Manitoba farm, in the open-air portion of the Exhibition, has now been thoroughly equipped, and will serve to convey to visitors a good idea of the mode of life followed by pioneer settlers in the great Canadian North-West, as also of the cost to be incurred by the emigrant farmer in making a start in his new home. A tent, with camp-fire in front, is erected inside the entrance gate of the steading, and this contains the settler's box, blankets, and cooking utensils. He is supposed to live here very comfortably while the virgin soil is being turned in order to procure a first crop, and his first dewelling-house is in process of being put together. The house shown on the farm is a dwelling of two apartments, furnished in the manner commonly adopted by new settlers, each article bearing the price at which it can be purchased in Manitoba. In the gate of the front room are specimens of coal from the Souris district of the province; but it is explained that settlers generally use the firewood which is to be found on their farms or in more or less convenient proximity. The spaces between the joists of the house are filled in with clay and hay mixed together, and over this, though not quite in contact with it, a kind of heavy paper is tacked, in lieu of lath and plaster. Behind the house is a representation of a log stable, with two stalls, the manger being filled with hay from the Manitoba prairies. Close to the stables stands a cart made entirely of wood, which seems to have seen much service in the north-West. This is the sort of vehicle which, drawn by an ox or rough pony, has from time immemorial been used for "freighting" over the vast prairies of the North-West.

One notable advantage it possesses, for a country where a wheelwright were hard to find, is that any breakdown occurring on a journey can be repaired with timber from the nearest copsewood. In the driving shed, at the corner of the farm, are a modern Canadian wagon and a heavy bob-sleigh, the fittings of which are so arranged that the box on the waggon can be transferred to the sleigh in winter.

A cattle shed occupies the adjoining space, in which are displayed samples of the timber grown in Manitoba, as also of sawn and dressed lumber from the mills of the North-West Timber Company of Winnipeg. There are likewise to be seen here examples of the different kinds of fencing used on the prairies, including the picturesque-looking snake fence; specimens of pails, tubs, and washboards from the Province of Quebec; a mower, breaking-plough, and harrow, from Winnipeg; and a saw-horse and saw for cutting firewood, which is something of a curiosity in this country. Blocks of timber from the Rocky Mountains will impress the visitor with an idea of the vast timber resources of that part of the North-West territory; and the quality of the different kinds of grain produced in the province is also illustrated. The whole exhibit, which is made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, is neatly arranged, and cannot fail to prove exceedingly interesting, especially to those who may think of settling in the Dominion.

FATAL FIRE IN TORONTO.

An old and Well Known Fireman Killed.

A fire started in the stable attached to the grocery and liquor store of Thomas Hall, south east corner of Parliament and Sydenham streets, Toronto, on Wednesday night. The Wilton Avenue section of the brigade was first on the spot, and succeeded in confining the blaze to the building in which it started. This had been about extingnished in the lower part of the stable when the whole of the upper part with its load of hay fell in, bur ying all the men underneath. After many were extricated one man named Gilbert was missed. All worked heroically, hoping that if their comrade lay buried there that they would be able to rescue him in time to save his life. After what seemed a very long time they came to the lifeless body of poor Gilbert. Death must have been instantaneous, as the neck was broken and the chest crushed.

The deceased had been on the brigade for upwards of fifteen years, and during part of the time he had been assistant electrician. He was a carpenter by trade, and did all the work of that kind for his section. He was about 54 years of age, and had been a widower for some years. His family consisted of two sons and and two daughters, one of the latter being a cripple. The sons are still boys, but working at trades.

HASTINGS.

RUNAWAY.—As Dr. Coughlin was entering his buggy on Friday, the horse bolted and galloped up Bridge street at a lively rate, but beyond making "pi" of the Dr's medicine case no damage done.

PASSED.—In the list of successful candidates for professional second class certificates at the late examinations of the Normal schools of Toronto and Ottawa, we note with pleasure the following from this neighborhood. At Ottawa, Mr. W. O'Rielly, of Asphoded, and Mr. Fraser, of Seymour. At Toronto, Miss Mary Orr of this village, and Mr. Frank Porter.

GORED BY A BULL. The Convey Bros. have a savage bull which they find necessary to keep tethered even in the pasture field to prevent it doing harm, and on Thursday morning as Mr. Patrick Convey was approaching the animal for the purpose of driving it to water, the beast broke the fastening and attacked Mr. C. whom he threw on the ground and gored him, inflicting some ugly wounds. Fortunately the attention of Mr. Jas. Convey was attracted by the unusual noise and he rushed to the rescue armed with an axe, with which he dealt the infuriated animal a blow in the head before he could drive the beast awaw. The injured man, who fainted from the shock and loss of blood was removed to the house, and Dr. Coughlin was summoned, who after an examination found the injuries received very serious though not necessarily dangerous, but will likely confine Mr. C. to the house for several weeks.—Star.

GLOBE SLANDERS.

THE Globe indulges in a very paltry and disgraceful attack upon Mr. Sandford Fleming's new work "England and Canada." This volume is both interesting and instructive but that does not prevent the Globe from representing the book and slandering its author.

The fact is that Mr. Fleming has committed a deadly sin in the eyes of those Reformers whose statesmanship consists in decrying Canada as long as it remains conservative. He says that the country along the route of the C.P.R. denounced as a sterile desert by Mr. Blake, is really ferlile and well adapted for agriculture.

Of course the Globe thinks that Mr. Sandford Fleming's book is worthless.

THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

THE news that the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has pronounced that the Boundary Award is not binding can be no surprise to any reasonable person who is not blinded by partisanship. Even Mr. Blake, who seems to have some regard for his reputation as a lawyer, however little care he may have for it in other respects, never ventured to maintain that the award was valid. The award of the arbitrators was not made legally binding in advance, and even if it had been the arbitrators disregarded their instructions by making a boundary, not finding the true one., so that it fell to the ground on the objection of any one interested. So we have always contended and so our highest court has now authoritatively decided.

The ground being thus cleared of the figment to which Mr. Mowat has so unwarrantably adhered in order to make political capital for himself at the cost of Ontario, it now remains to find the tru boundary. We should not be surprised if this gave us even more than the award, remembering as we do the far wider claims that have been urged, and the admission of one of the arbitrators that every doubtful point was given by them against Ontario. But whatever the Privy Council decision may be it will be cheerfully accepted and will settle the matter definitely instead of leaving it as a subject for endless dispute. This Mr. Mowat could have secured for us years ago if he had accepted the proposition of the Macdonald administration and had not preferred his own polical advantage to the interests of Ontario.

If the report is confirmed that Mr. Mowat, since the decision by the Privy Council of the invalidity of the award, has abandoned the contention for our full rights, he has traitorously deserted the cause of Ontario. Such a refusal to push our claim to our full rights can only be designed to enable Mr. Mowat and his friends to assert hereafter that this Province has suffered through the action of the Conservatives. Ontario has suffered loss, but it has been been through the obstinacy and trickery of Mr. Mowat in adhereing to an untenable position when he might have obtained us our right long ago, and if he now abandons our claims he alone will be responsible.

Increasing Fire Insurance Rates.

The Fire Insurance companies in Toronto have been asked by the Assessment Commissioner at Ottawa to find him a statement of theier personal property and income, presumably with a view to imposing a tax thereon. In consequence of this notification, the Underwriters' Association have decided to lower the classification of Ottawa from "A" to "B," thereby increasing the rates of insurance upon property in that city fully ten per cent. Similar action will be taken regarding Kingston and all other places where these taxes are imposed upon the companies doing business there.

The New Express Company.

MONTREAL, July 16.—On Saturday the contract of the Canadian Express Company with the Canadian Pacific Railway expires, and on the following Monday the Dominion Express Company will commence a similar service over the entire system, extending from Montreal to the Rockies. The Dominion Express Company was orgunized in Winnipeg, and the headquarters for eastern Canada will be in Toronto.

The Marriage Aid Business.

At Napanee, W. A. H. Duff, President of the Mutual Marriage Aid Association of this city, was commited for trial. The Webbers were tried on Wednesday.

THE MOWAT & CO. PLOT

CONTINUATION OF THE INVESTIGATION OF THE BRIBERY CHARGES.

Leave of Absence for Muskoka—The Conspiracy to Entrap—How Reform Members were Deserting—Assaulting the Cabinet.

On Tuesday the proceedings were resumed.

THE MUSKOKA CONTEST.

Mr. MEREDITH asked that he and other members of the Legislature, Messrs. Creighton, Ermatinger, and Carnegie, should not be examined until after the Muskoka election, as they wished to take part in the contest.

Mr. BLAKE, who does not represent a party, of course objected to his political opponents being thus set free.

The COMMISSION decided that this evidence should not be taken till July 25th.

THE SEIZED PAPERS.

Inspector WARD gave evidence as to the papers taken from Mr. Kirkland, He admitted that for a time he had left them in charge of a Sergeant.

Col. GILMOR, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, gave some evidence as to the alteration of the Act.

THE CONSPIRACY.

Mr. BALFOUR repeated his former evidence as to Kirkland's endeavours to persuade him to oppose the Government timber policy. He described how McKim had taken him to Wilkinson, and then how Lyon had invited him to go to Wilkinson for some money. He also related his arrangement with Messrs. Fraser and Pardee to act as a decoy.

DESERTING MR. MOWAT.

Mr. GRAHAM, M. P. P., a new witness, testified to being introduced by Lyon to Mr. Kirkland, who wanted him to advocate a change of the timber regulations, Lyon saying that he meant to vote for the change.

ASSAULTING THE CABINET.

Dr. CASCADEN repeated his old evidence. He admitted that he had complained of being badly treated by the Government, that he had shaken his fist in the faces of some of them, and was not sure whether he had sworn at Mr. Pardee.

MR. MCKIM'S VERACITY.

Mr. GOLDIE gave his former testimony as to his being sounded about Mr. Laidlaw's vote. Mr. Bunting told him he did not approve of Mr. Wilkinson's scheme. Witness was asked as to McKim's credibility, but of course Mr. Blake objected to the character of the Government informer being divulged.

THE ROUND ROBIN.

Informer McKIM swore that a portrait shown to him as Stimson's was that of Lynch. The round robin was in Wilkinson's handwriting.

O. & Q. EXTENSION.

Survey of the Line from Smith's Falls to Montreal Completed.

The engineers who were appointed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to lay out the route of the new short line extension from Smith's Falls to Montreal have now finished their work. The road as located will run direct from Smith's Falls to a point immediately above Andrewsville and then across the Rideau River. From thence it will pass through the township of Oxford, passing about 1½ miles south of Kemptville, thence through Mountain and Winchester townships, passing near the village of Chesterville. From there it runs through the township of Finch and Roxborough, in which latter it passes close to Avonmore. Then through Kenyon and Lancaster townships, passing a little south of Loch Garry, and crossing the Provincial boundary one mile south of Dalhousie Mills, and from there running in an almost direct line to Vaudreuil, where it will cross the Ottawa River. From the Ottawa River the road runs on the survey made from Montreal to that point about a year ago. The whole of the extension will be in almost a direct line from Smith's Falls to Montreal, and this line between Toronto and Montreal will be shorter by several miles than the present Grand Trunk route. Work will be commenced this fall and every effort put forth to complete the road at a very early date.

Terrible Railway Accident.

LONDON, July 16.—A terrible accident occurred this morning to the express train on the Manchester and Sheffield Railroad. The train started all right with a large number of passengers and was going at high speed when the axle of the engine broke near Penniston. This is a small market town on the river Don, in the West riding of York and is approached by a bridge over the river. When the axle broke, the engine jumped the track and dragged several carriages after it to the river below. The scene was one of terrible confusion, and the cries for help of the passengers who were wedged in the broken carriages were heart-rending. Assistance was on once obtained from the town, and those who survived the crash, together with the wounded were got out. Twenty-five persons were killed and forty were injured, many of them seriously. A gang of workmen was at once set to work and the interuption to traffic was slight.—Mail

The Hocking Valley Miners.

COLUMBUS, July 15,—A special from the Hocking Valley mining district states that the operators who went in with Italian laborers yesterday as yet have had no trouble with the strikers. Soon after Pinkerton's detectives went on duty the miners telegraphed to the Governor asking him to order out the State troops to protect the citizens from Chicago sharpshooters, or compel them to lay down their arms. The Governor replied that he could not order out the troops until there has been some boisterous demonstrations, which he hoped would be averted. The miners have taken legal advice, with the hope of having the detectives disarmed. Ht a mass-meeting they agreed to go to work in Reads & Hayden's mines at 70 cents, if the union will allow them to do so. The operators say they will have three thousand more for eigners to go into the mines in a few days.

Shamrocks vs. Montrealers.

MONTREAL, July 12.—The Shamrocks and Montreal Clubs met this afternoon and played a remarkably good match. The Montrealers won two and the Shamrocks two goals. The fifth was not over when time was called and the match stands a draw. The Shamrocks were without Heelan and Lally and thus their game can be judged as they are likely to play the Torontos next Saturday for the Championship.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

VALUABLE IN INDIGESTION.

Mr. Daniel T. Nelson, Chicago, says: "I find it a pleasant and valuable remedy in indigestion, particularly in overworked men."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

MR. BLAKE A USURPER.

Mr. Blake had no right to authoritatively decide who should represent West Ontario without consulting the electors of that constituency.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

A POET'S EPITHET

Mr. J. D. Edgar, in his speech at Stouffville, the other day, said that the question of independence had been broached by "an irresponsible rag in Toronto." Come, come, Mr. Edgar; that won't do. Mister Cartwright may not be altogether what he ought to be; but he is not a rag. That he is irresponsible may be admitted; but we must defend the ex-Knight from the foul imputation implied in the epithet "rag."—Hamilton Spectator.

HOPING FOR EVIL.

It is a great pity that the Indians should disappoint the Grits of Ontario by not going on the war-path and rising "Hail Clumbia" generally. It is to Indian troubles, North-West disturbances, failure of the crops, commercial disasters, the break down of Pacific Railway constructions and the like, that these model pariots look in the hope of gaining party successes. The party, as a party, has few merits of its own to commend it to the people.—Ottawa Citizen.

ENGLAND AND THE SOUDAN.

CAIRO, July 15.—Two hundred Turks, serving in the Egyptian army at Abasses, were ordered to go to Assouan, when it was found that 130 had deserted.

The citizens of Dongola have telegraphed the Khedive imploring him to send troops.

The 70 Turks who finally reached Assouan deserted after arrival.

A British officer accompanied by the Khedives aid-de-camp has been sent to Dongola to learn the true conditions of affairs.

THE FRANCHISE BILL.

Lord Salisbury Urges the Lords to Oppose the Question of an Autumn Session.

LONDON, July 15.—At a conference of conservatives to-day Salisbury vigorously denounced the proposition that the Lords should reconsider and pass the Franchise Bill.

Salisbury urged the Lords to ignore all threats, and to firmly refuse to permit the bill to pass a second reading until the government explained its plans for redistribution of seats in the Commons.

Mr. Gladstone has written to the Liberal Association of Leeds that he still hopes to avert the loss of the Franchise Bill.

The Pall Mall Gazette, says that if a compromise on the Franchise Bill is rejected the Liberals will not sheath the sword until they exterminate the power which is incompatible with the Government of modern England.

The Earl of Codogan, under the sanction of the Conservative leaders, will move in the House of Lords on Thursday that the house present an address to the Queen, asking her to summon an Autumn session of Parliament to consider the Franchise question in conjunction with the question of the redistribution of seats. The Government is not likely will accede to this.

The Postmaster-General to-day said the Government would make no further concessions on the Franchise question. The question of adjusting the relations of the two houses, he said, promises next to the redistribution of the seats to be one of the most difficult and momentious question of the future.

CONFIDENCE ARUSED.

The Telegram discussing Mr. Blake's troubles in West Ontario says :—

"There can be no doubt that an understanding was arrived at by which Mr. Wheler was to accept an office at the hands of Mr. Mowat and Mr. Edgar was to get his place, The one thing needful to have this arrangement carried out is the consent of the West Ontario electors. If they are willing to accept Mr. Edgar, no one else has a right to complain."

But the public of Ontario have a good cause to complain. They see that Mr. Mowat is willing to create a needless office in order to induce Mr. Wheler to step out in order that Mr. Edgar may step in. Such an arrangement might suit Mr. Blake, and Mr. Edgar, and Mr. Wheler. All three might find it a very convenient arrangement. Mr. Blake might get back his parliamentary "whip," Mr. Edgar might get back into the House of Commons ; and Mr. Wheler would would be amply provided for at the expense of the people. But what right has Mr. Mowat to saddle the Province of Ontario with an unnecessary official in order to gratify Mr. Blake, please Mr. Edgar, and make Mr. Wheler officially comfortable for the rest of his days? Already the annual expenditures so far exceed the income that Mr. Mowat proposes to borrow large sums in order to meet the deficit. It is bad enough as it is ; but it being made worse by creating an expensive office in order to meet Mr. Blake's wishes. In a ministerial sense Mr. Mowat has nothing to do with Mr. Blake or his wishes in relation to the House of Commons. One of his chief duties is to husband the resources of the people, as a good trustee should ; instead of which he is found willing to saddle the province with a needless expense in order to benefit Mr. Blake's political position. Such a perversion of trust is but one of the many instances by which, under the name of "reform," the confidence of the people has been abused.—London Free Press.

A Wife Murderer.

DETROIT, July 12.—Paul Locker, of St. Joseph, Mich., came from that place with the idea of killing one Hugh Parmenter, who he claimed had wronged Mrs. Locker. The woman was at work in the Franklin House, at Montague, as cook. Not finding Parmenter, Locker called on Mrs. Locker, and they took a walk together. He tried to get her to go back home with him, but she refused. At a spot near the school house he drew a revolver and shot her dead. The murderer then directed another pistol at himself and inflicted a serious if not fatal wound.

A Courageous Proposal.

The Monetary Times of July 11, says :—A Duluth, Minn., despatch dated July 6th, states that the lumbermen of the northwest are considering a proposition to shut down all mills on Sept. 1st for the remainder of the year. They say that at present prices it is impossible for lumbermen to make anything, and that some such movement as this is not only needed, but demanded, to restore prices. The proposition has been talked of by lumbermen all over the northwest, and if agreed upon all the manufacturers will go into it.

Robbing the Government.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Dealers in carpets and other goods who have bid on supplies for the government departments during the last five years wondered why certain Washington bidders always have the inside of the trade. Investigation now going on has demonstrated that one merchant has robbed the government, through collusion with government employees, of over $190,000.

Emigrants to be Sent Back.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The Furnessia from Glasgow and the India from Hamburg, which arrived to-day, each brought four families of assisted emigrants. The families on board the Furnessia came from County Mayo, Ireland, their passage having been paid by the emigration union. The others were sent by the emigration committee in Breslau, Germany. They will be sent back.

A Lumber Case Settled.

OSWEGO, N. Y., July 14.—S. R. Wegg, lumber dealer, jailed in March last for fraud, preferred by Ross & Co., Quebec, interested with him in business, was released to-day. Ross & Co. are now satisfied there was no intent to defraud and Wegg confesses judgment to them for the amounts claimed.

The Crops in Dakota.

ST. PAUL, July 14.—Reports from stations on the Minnesota and St. Louis rail-road show that the crops are growing finely. The harvest will be ten days earlier than last year. In northern Dakota the progress of the crops has been rapid and satisfactory. Reports from southern Dakota indicate a fair condition of grain.

A Brutal Murder.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 14.—Mrs. Grace was horribly murdered in Cahoutta mountains yesterday. Her eyes were punched out and a sharpened stick run through her breast. The assassin escaped.

Fire at Priceville.

About 12.30 on Sunday night the contents and building used by James Tryon as cooper and waggon shop, at Priceville, Ont., were consumed by fire. Loss about eight hundred dollar, partially covered by insurance.

The proprietor of the Ladies Journal now announces a magnificent list of rewards for correct answers to Bible questions. It is surprising how little is known of the Bible. The questions are not so difficult this time as 1st, and we should be glad if there was a hearty response so as to encourage the proprietor of the Journal to persevere in his good work. It was announced in the June issue of the Ladies' Journal that the competition which closed last month would be the last for the present, but it has been decided to try one more.

All money must be sent by post office or express. No information will be given to any one more than is stated here. So send on answers, and don't waste time writing. Do not send postage stamps unless six cents is added for the discount. Remit by postoffice order, scrip or small coin.

All letters are carefully numbered as they arrive, and there can be no mistake. If your answers are correct, and they reach there in time, you will surely get some reward in addition to the Ladies' Journal, which alone is big value for the half dollar. If you don't get anything but the Journal you will be well pleased with your investment, as it consists of 20 pages of fashions illustrated, short and serial stories, poetry, newest music, household hints, etc., etc. ; in fact, just the paper to suit every lady.

By subscribing in a club with your neighbors you will secure some considerable advantage—that is, there must be at least thirty of a club, and all who send correct answers to the Bible questions may have their choice of a handsome ring, heavily gold-plated ladies' gold brooch, which retails at about one dollar and a half, or a triple-plated butter knife. Either of these you may wish will be sent postage paid. You will thus secure to a certainty one or other of these two presents, and in addition will have as good an opportunity of gaining some one of the other large rewards in lists given above just as well as though you had sent in singly. This is simply an inducement to get up clubs. We are sure our readers could not do better than to try their skill in hunting up these questions and competing for these rewards. Everything will be carried out exactly as promised.

Prizes in last competition went all over Canada and to many parts of the United States.

Address, Editor LADIES' JOURNAL, Toronto, Canada.

FOR THE LADIES.

THE FASHIONS.

Gloves are still worn long.

Buttons remain small and round.

The size of the tournurg, alias the bustle, is on the increase.

High collars and high coiffures are seen everywhere.

The Scotch fashion of large stones in buckles is in favour.

Twenty buttons is the correct length for gloves for full evening dress.

Full paniers are seen on the newest imported French dresses, and in spite of all predictions to the contrary they will be extensively worn this season.

Stylish vests are made of the wide sash ribbons that have had their day as sashes ; but they are very pretty when used to form vests, collars and cuffs to handsome wool costumes.

Large hats are seldom seen. The Henry II. is losing its popularity, and is now worn only by very young girls. Bonnets of the Princesse shape and hats in the crescent style are still extensively worn.

A WELL MERITED RETALIATION.

If the following story is true Ohio again steps conspicuously to the front : It is said that a pretentious shopper of Astabula has been in the habit of bothering dry goods merchants beyond endurance. Recently she entered a store, and after going through her regular hand-me down-that-and-I-wont-take-any-to-day programme she ordered a spool of cotton sent to her house. "This," says the narrator, "afforded the desired opportunity to enforce a needed lesson. A common dray drawn by four horses were procured and four stalwart laborers, with bare arms, were placed upon it to hold the spool of cotton. When the teams drove up to madam's door everybody stared and nobody could make out the purpose. After a great deal of whip-cracking and other expressive ceremonies the cart was backed against the curb. There reposing calmly, end up in the centre of the cart floor was the identical spool of thread she had 'ordered.' It seemed to be coming all right. With the aid of a plank it was finally rolled, barrel fashion, safely to the sidewalk. After a mortal struggle it was "up-ended" on the purchaser's doorstep. The fact that the purchaser came out a minute after and kicked her own property into the gutter detracted nothing from the sport."—Peck's Sun.

PORT HOPE.

ACCIDENT ON THE 12TH.—The special with the Orangemen from Millbrook and vicinity left here about six o'clock on Saturday evening, and among the number was a young man named Wesley Ogden. As far as can be learned, he got on the train intending to jump off before it got into full motion but did not do so until it reached the Cavan street crossing, more than half a mile from the station, and then jumped but in doing so fell so that his left foot was caught by the wheel of one of the coaches and crushed to a jelly. Mr. Ed. Livingstone, of Welcome, who was coming to town in his buggy with a friend happened along just as the accident occurred and lifted the unfortunate young man into the vehicle and drove him to his father's residence or the probabilities are he would have bled to death. Drs. Clemesha, Corbett and Powers were called who found it necessary to amputate the leg above the ankle. It seems no person on the train noticed the accident for it did not stop. The young man is 21 years of age, the eldest son of Mr. Miles Ogden, hotel keeper.—Guide.

LAKEFIELD.

From our Own Correspondent.

NORTHWEST.—Your correspondent returned last week from Moose Jaw, which is about 400 miles west of Winnipeg, and thinking that perhaps a few remarks in reference to that part of the Northwest would be of interest to many of your readers, the following is submitted. In going to Moose Jaw the Canadian route was followed, taking the Canadian Pacific Steamship Line at Owen Sound, and the trip was so satisfactory that the return journey was made by the same line. This line was found by experience to be not only the cheapest but the best in point of speed and comfort. Moose Jaw is a flourishing village on the Canada Pacific Railway, and is beautifully situated in the valley of the Moose Jaw. The weather during the month of May in the country visited was very dry. Showers visited some sections, but there was no general rain, and last year being very dry in that part, as well as all over the west, the settlers were very much disheartened and discouraged, in fact, some had already given up their homesteads and left the country. Many of these settlers had left comfortable homes and situations in Ontario and other parts of the Dominion and invested their all in the country the year before, and were, in consequence of the insufficiency of rain in May, almost without hope. June opened and continued throughout its duration with abundance of rain and heat, and as the month passed away day by day the prospects of the settlers become brighter and brighter, until at its close a bountiful harvest was assured. Your correspondent brought with him a sample of barley from Buffalo Lake, about 20 miles from Moose Jaw, which was sown on the 10th of May, and on June 5th it was just nicely up. On June 30th, twenty-five days later, it was over two feet high. Mr. John McCaroll, lately from the township of Emily, has a large area of as fine spring wheat as ever seen in Ontario. West of Brandon a large breadth was sown and looked remarkably well. The prospects are that a large quantity of grain will be grown in the Northwest this season as well as in Manitoba. In the Buffalo Lake region there was no frost to do any damage either in May or June. There are drawbacks in the west as well as elsewhere, and your correspondent would not advise those who have comfortable homes and are well to do in Ontario to go west, but the young who wish to improve their circumstances in obtaining good land, easy to cultivate, should go to the Canadian Northwest, where millions of acres of as good land as the sun shines on invites the husbandman and the plough. It was found impossible, in the part your correspondent was in, to find any remnant of the great agitation against the Dominion Government. The bona fide settler takes no stock, as the saying is, in either the agitator or corner loafer. My experience convinces me that there is very little, if any, dissatisfaction, either with the Government or the land regulations. In both going from Port Arthur to Winnipeg and coming from Winnipeg to Port Arthur, your correspondent was very unfavourably impressed with the appearance of the country, between Rat Portage and Port Arthur. The most of the country seems nothing but what would be called here in the back country a burn—it is really a continuation of rocky bluff and shaky muskeg. The remark was made by one of the passengers that he would not give 20c. for a hundred miles of the country, and it seemed to meet with approval as the remark was generally applauded by the other passengers; and then one made the remark that it was a wonder that Manitoba and Ontario were quarrelling about such a country, looking at it from the line of railway. One thing is certain, that the Canadian route from Peterborough to the North-West, considering speed, comfort and close connections is a credit to the country. Your correspondent in standing up on the deck of the large and magnificent steamer Alberta, of the Canadian Pacific S.S. line, while she was ploughing down the Sault St. Marie River, and while she passed rapidly by, and in a couple of hours out of sight of one of the largest and best of American steamers in almost a gale, felt the energy and perseverence which had established such a line should be commended, and also a pride in being a Canadian.

The Board then adjourned to meet at the call of the Chairman.

Moved by Dr. Armour, seconded by Mr. Casement,—That this board do now adjourn to meet on the regular meeting night in September.—Carried.

WATER.—Water has been the general topic of conversation for the last ten days at Lakefield and Young's Point. The interests of the lumbermen and steamboat owners are so widely divergent that it seems almost impossible to regulate these waters to suit anyone leaving out of the question the construction of new works. Neither the steamers nor the drivers have so far been inconvenienced, but the very possibility of such occuring seems to almost afright, and a perfect howl is at once raised and immediately others having no material interest in the matter go in and make the clamour general. For many years passed the people have been petitioning time and again for the Government to take these waters under control and build new dams, &c., and now when the Government steps in and begin work in order to put things in proper shape for next season those interested the most are the first to cry out damages! damages! The waters between Lakefield and the Point were never navigable except at certain times of the year when the water was high, and they have never been legally assumed or declared to be so. The running of steamboats from Lakefield has nearly always been troublesome and unremunerative. Then why this cry of damages? The opinion is very general y gaining ground that as the Dominion Government is assumed to be a fine fat cow and gives remarkably high milk it would pay better to milk than it would to navigate between Lakefield and Young's Point. The Government officials have been untiring in their efforts to please, and have been annoyed more than a little. The main question is are the dams to be constructed or not? Other years and for years past those interested have offered to bear a part of the costs in order to get certain improvements done, but it seems strange that now when the Government begin these very parties want to be paid for allowing these improvements to be done. The dams at Lakefield and at Young's Point are a public necessity and in the public interest, and the Government will have to assume a firm control and prevent private persons from interfering with the Government property, or decide to proceed no further with the work. In the event of these dams not being built what a change in the tune would occur with the very same grumblers. But it is to be hoped that the public will not suffer because of the cry and grumble of only a minority, as no doubt every section of the country have some such sore heads.

SAW MILL WASTE.

A correspondent of The Industrial Journal, Bangor, Me., writes from Waterville: "The Lockwood Company, proprietors of the cotton mills at Waterville, are on the track of the saw mill owners located on the river at Fairfield and Skowegan, seeking to restrain them from depositing their debris in the river.

In the spring of 1876, soon after the first cotton mill at Waterville started up, the slabs, edgings, shingle waste and other debris from the lumber mills above came down upon them in such quantities as to obstruct the flow of water through the raceway and canal, and also gathered on the rocks to such an extent that it was impossible to rake it off, fast enough to let sufficient water through to run the wheels. The following winter the legislature was asked to pass a law prohibiting the throwing of such refuse into the Kennebec and its tributaries. The law was not passed that year, but was passed by the legislature of 1878. Some little attention was paid to it, but it was not until three years ago, when the pulp mill at Fairfield was built, that much of the waste was kept out of the river, and then only the slabs and board edgings, which were valuable for wood and to grind into pulp.

Meantime the Lockwood Company continued to experience great damage and expense, and tried often to secure the desired end by friendly negotiations. One year ago the treasurer met the Fairfield mill owners, and they promised that the nuisance should cease at once. This year the trouble came in a still more aggravated form than ever before, causing the mills to shut down for several days, thus occasioning great loss in production, and expense to the company as well as loss of wages to the help. An application was then made for an injunction, and and Judge Peters came here to hear the parties on both sides. Hon. E. F. Webb appeared for the Lockwood Company, and S. S. Brown, Esq., and Col. J. W. Spaulding for the saw mill owners. Acting upon the advice of the judge, it was agreed between the parties, since the May term of the law court is so near at hand, to the evidence before a commissioner and have it reported to the full court at Augusta, when the chief justice will grant a temporary injunction, provided the facts in the case warrant it, pending the consideration of the question of a permanent injunction by the full court. R. B. Dunn, Esq., president of the Lockwood Company, and J. W. Danielson, treasurer, have already given their depositions, from which it appears that the damage has been from $40,000 to $50,000 to the company, besides a like sum to the help. The company employs 1,100 hands, and the monthly pay role is $25,000. The result of this case will be watched with deep interest, for it is reasonably sure that no more cotton mills will be built in Waterville if this nuisance is to continue."

On the contrary, I have had a splendid trade all through the season. The reason for which I ascribe to my universal mode of studying UTILITY, as well as artistic and pleasing designs, and by selling goods at market value, giving everyone the full value for their money.

I have, as my patrons know, nearly doubled my facilities this season, and found that I have been in a position to fill orders with greater satisfaction to my patrons, avoiding those annoying delays and disappointments which I find so common a complaint with the customers who deal at other stores. BOYNE CELEBRATION.—The 12th of July was celebrated by the Orangemen of this section, at "The Steps," where a picnic was held under the auspices of the brethern, Prepatations had had been made before hand, as a large crowd and good time was anticipated. The weather being dull in the morning our spirits were heavy also. Still more so when at 10 a.m. the rain poured in a torrents and we concluded our day was ended. But after this the clouds were cleared away and at noon sunshine favoured us us once more. The Orangemen marched to the grounds with colors displayed, keeping step to the music of the fife and drum. At 2 p.m. dinner was served to all who cared to invest 25 cents for satisfying their appetites. After dinner a boat race was proposed, and accordingly a subscription was raised to reward the champions. The first race, a double canoe race, between Thos. Parker and John Hurl, ane Jas. Tulten and Wm. Stone, was won by the latter two, prize $1.50. The next, a consolation race between the defeated party of the first race, and Timothy Croly and Lewis Winters was won by Parker and Hurl, prize $1.20. Supper was then partaken of and all returned home to attend to farm duties. In all, the day was well spent, and we feel it our duty to express our thanks to the members of the lodge for the efficient manner in which everything was conducted. We hope the same patronage will be extended to them on such future occasions when they again favor us. Other sports were indulged in, such as dancing, etc. Two stands were erected where soft drinks and candies were sold. In conclusion we must recommend the members of our band for the excellent music furnished at intervals duriug the day.

THE HAY CROP.—The clover in this section is thick but stunted in its growth. The Timothy is fair and on the whole we should regard ourselves more favoured than the farmers of the other townships. The fall wheat is in good condition and can be cut in a week.

CHEESE MANUFACTURE.—Our factory turned out for the month of June 42 cheeses; although not as much as other factories yet we consider it very fair. If all the patrons of last year subscribed our estimates would have been higher, but there is time left yet to retrieve our position.

THE CLERGY.—Mr. Mears, our new Methodist minister, delivered his first address to us on Sunday evening, 13th July. If allowed to judge, we consider him a man of great ability, besides of a friendly manner. We wish Divine blessing to rest on his labors.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAVED ARMY.—The friends of the Saved Army received two great disappointments last week, viz.: the removal of Lieuts. Webb and Bennett, who had endeared themselves to everyone by their kind manners and Christian life. Lieut. Webb's address on Sunday afternoon was a grand success in every way. His subject was the sufferings of our Lord for the sins of man, and many were moved to tears and all agree that such a fine exposition is seldom heard. Miss Bennett left for Peterborough, and Mr. Webb for Napanee.

Miss Boyler has taken command of the Army at Keene. Services were held on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 o'clock and on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

PICNIC.—The united Sunday School picnic to Idyl Wild on Tuesday last was a grand success in every way. The steamer Whistle-Wing with scow left Keene at about 9 a.m., and arrived on the return trip at 6.30 p.m. There were about 350 on board, and all were loud in their praise of Capt. Carson and the committee, who spared neither money or trouble for their comfort and pleasure. The boat has long been thought by some to be unsafe, but Capt. Carson has done a great deal towards removing that false impression, and henceforth the boat will most likely prove a favorite, as the genial captain is one already. At Idyl Wild the Port Hope Methodist Sunday School also joined them, accompanied by the 46th Battalion Band, who enlivened the day with music in their usual fine style, under the able leadership of Prof. D. Carson.

Commodore Harrison and Capt Mark added much to the enjoyment of the party by taking them out for short cruises on the lake.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The new church is fast assuming shape now, as the bricklayers are at work. Mr. Weir wants more men but can not obtain them.

METHODIST.—The services in the Methodist church were well attended on Sunday last. The Rev. Mr. Sexsmith, who preached in the morning for the first time, was very well liked for his quiet and masterly address.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Jas. McNeil, W.M. of Keene Lodge 374, G.R.C., A.F. & A.M., returned home very much pleased with his visit to the Grand Lodge in Toronto.

ALLANDALE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

THE HAY CROP.—The farmers in this locality are busy with the hay, some having finished. The crop in general is good.

I.O.G.T.—The Temple still reports progress. Three were initiated last Saturday evening. Mr. Thompson, a teacher in this township, gave a farewell reading and a song or two, which was received with applause by the temple, and hearty wishes were expressed for a safe and pleasant voyage. He sails for Scotland on the 19th.

THE WAY OF REPORTERS IS HARD.—Your correspondent received a most severe denunciation at the meeting of the Saved Army on Sunday evening, when volley after volley, strong and yet stronger, was fired at his devoted head. However, he still survives and now asks a calm perusal of the communication in last week's issue, the cause of all the commotion, and there see what "the meanest man" "led by the devil" can write. Well might the brother "hope the arrows of conviction would strike such a soul!" Is there one word in that paragraph against the Saved Army? Since Miss McCormack came amongst us she has labored earnestly, been the means of bringing souls to Christ, and gained the esteem of the community; also Miss Brown did a good work and gained friends. Lieut. Webb, although last mentioned, but not least, deserved and gained the good will and wishes of all. Did the folks in the 'Dale use these friends well? Now, was it right or wise for one, who came to do us good, to declare at the outset she would not stay in such a miserable place. We may be excused if we think our eternal interests are precious as others if we do not live in fine mansions. We truly say "such as we have, we give thee," but cannot help giving a squirm or two when we feel our aid is treated with indifference. We still say, however, "success to the Saved Army."

MANUFACTURING IN EUROPE.

Of all European nations only three, England, France, and Germany, claim to have a textile industry. Manchester, Bradford, Glasgow, Lyons, Elboeuf, Crefeld, Chemnitz, and many more are well-known centres of European textile industry, and the manufactuers of these towns can be found in almost every part of the world. The lion's share of this trade is, however, taken by England, whose cotton industry, with its 42,000,000 spindles (that is more spindles than the rest of the world put together), has reached a stadium of development that the inventors of the spinning-frame and power-loom would have hardly dreamed of one hundred years ago. In order to protect themselves against the too great productivity of England, the European States have nearly all placed high import duties on foreign goods so as to secure the home market to their own manufacturers. Lyons is still the centre of the silk industry, but the Swiss and German silk trade keenly compete for the trade of Lyons. The country which shows the relative increase in textile industry during the last ten years is Germany, and that country is now aspiring for a good share of the world's textile trade, as is proved by the efforts made to establish in several cities permanent exhibitions of samples for export. But, notwithstanding all the efforts of the French and Germans, England has so far retained her industrial supremacy, and her industries show no sign of decay. Will the efforts of Continental Europe be at last crowned by success, and will the Continent succeed in obtaining the principal share of the world's textile commerce? Time will show. But as civilization travels westward so does commerce also, and the position and resources of the United States, and its progressing industrial capacity, permit us to expect that in the fight for the world's commerce the industrial powers of Europe will not have to fight alone, but will have to count as a competitor the great American Republic, whose incalculable resources will be a heavy odd in favor of the younger continent.—New York Dry Goods Bulletin.

An Accidental Diagnosis.

Dr. Fordyce was a man of convivial habits and much addicted to the bottle. He was one evening called away from a drinking bout to see a lady of title who was supposed to have been taken suddenly ill. Arrived at the apartment of his patient, the doctor seated himself by her side, and having listened to a recital of a train of symptoms which appeared rather anomalous, he proceeded to examine her pulse. He tried to reckon the number of beats, but the more he endeavored to do this the more his brain whirled, and the less was his self-control. Conscious of the cause of his dilemma, and in a moment of irritation, he blurted out, "Drunk, by Jove!" The lady heard the remark, but remained silent, and the doctor, prescribing a mild remedy, took his leave. Early next morning he was aroused by a somewhat imperative message from his patient of the evening before to attend her immediately, and at once concluded that the object of this summons was to inveigh against him for the state in which he had visited her on the previous occasion, or perhaps for having prescribed too potent a medicine. Ill at ease from these thoughts he entered the room prepared for a severe reprimand. The patient began, however, by thanking him for his attention, and said that she had been struck by his discernment on the previous evening confessing that she was sometimes addicted to indulge in strong drink, and concluded by saying that the object of this early message was to obtain his promise of inviolable secrecy as to the condition in which he found Her. "You may depend on me," said Dr. Fordyce, whose face had never changed since the commencement of the patient's story, "I will be as silent as the grave.,,

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Cricket Match.

A cricket match is being played this afternoon between the Peterborough and Toronto clubs on the Ashburnham cricket grounds.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Light to moderate variable winds, fine, slightly warmer weather.

Art Exhibition.

An exhibition of paintings, curiosities and articles of vertu will be held here an the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th August. It is expected there will be a good collection of objects of art, etc., as quite a number of our citizens have already signified their willingness to assist. The exhibition is under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, the committee in charge being Dr. Fife, D. B. Gardner, J. F. Jeffers, G. M. Roger and the secretary of the Association. This committee will be responsible for all articles lent, and great care will be taken in every way. They would be glad if any citizen possessing objects of art or curiosities and willing to loan them would notify the secretary, G. E. Williams.

The Hall Estate Sale.

The sale of the Hall Estate property was conducted at Halpin's Hotel on Tuesday and Wednesday by Mr. Charles Stapleton. On the first day the following propreties were sold:—The Brick building west of Mr. R. Kingan's hardware store, sold to Mr. James Gallin, Lindsay, for $3,600. The Roughcast building next to Halpin's Hotel, sold to Mr. John Lynch for $2,500, The Brick building known as Halpin's Hotel, sold to Mr. M. Halpin for $8,000; the Brick cottage, south side of Hunter street, occupied by Mr. Patrick Costello, sold to Mr. C. Halpin, for $2,050; and the cottage on west side of Aylmer streets, between Brock and Hunter streets, occupied by Mr. James Byrne, sold to Mr. Walter Paterson, for $1,700. On the second day the bidding was not so lively, and only three lots were sold, but fair prices were obtained for these. The park lots were purchased by Mr. Duncan McKellar, for $240 each, and the McKellar property, the old "Black Horse" stand on Aylmer street, was purchased by Mr. Geo. Edmison for $1,020. The sale was adjourned indefinitely.

"The World."

Lytell's Dramatic Company presented "The World" to a fair sized audience in the Opera House on Wednesday evening. The play is one that does not allow the interest of the spectator to flag, as it is full of incidents that, when well acted, as they were on this occasion, holds the attention of the audience from first to last. The scenery was good—every scene was good. When the curtain rose on the raft scene there was a burst of applause, and at the close of the scene the curtain was called up again. The circumscribed stage did not allow the ship scene, when the explosion occurred, to be shown as it might otherwise have been, yet it was well put on. The acting of the members of the Company was good. Mr. J. H. Gilmore, as the courageous, manly and kind "Sir Clement Huntingford," showed considerable ability, and was twice called before the curtain by the audience. Mr. W. H. Lytell, as "Moses Jewell," the cunning, ready-witted, unscrupulous villian, acted the part to perfection. It is not often that a villian in such a play amuses an audience, yet every appearance, and almost every act and word of "Moses" caused laughter. Mr. L. F. Spencer sustained the part of "Harry Huntingford" creditably, as did also Miss Mortimer the part of "Mabel." The other parts were well taken, and where a play is so well acted throughout there is no need of criticism. The Company will present "The Galley Slave" this evening.

McFADDEN'S FURNITURE BUSINESS.

Another of Peterborough's Most Important Industries—How Enterprise and Industry are Rewarded.

Time and again we are called upon to notice some of the many industries that are already established or springing into existence in our town—which afford a livelihood to the skilled and mechanical labor constantly in demand in Peterborough. The above establishment is by no means one of the least important, as a visit to either the store or factory will establish.

On the right of the store, as one enters, are to be found a very large and varied assortment of handsomely designed sideboards in marble and wood finish, together with rich and luxurious parlour suites in silk and plush. On the left of the store there are placed on exhibition a number of elegant walnut bedroom sets, hall racks in new patterns, and cabinet ware in great variety.

The ceiling is used for the purpose of displaying the large stock of dining and rocking chairs. The stock is well assorted and the styles varied, while the tasty manner in which they are arranged shews them to good advantage. A neat and useful line of rockers, finished in a superior yet not expensive manner, are on view, and with the different patterns of Tapestry, Brussels and other carpets displayed, present to the eye a very pleasing sight.

Mr. McFadden has lately given an order to a New York house for a supply of Camping Utensils, consisting of Cots, Spring Beds, Seats, Stools, etc., which, no doubt, will be a boon to many who are contemplating a trip to the lakes. They will be sold at a price that will put them within the reach ot all.

Another important branch of this establishment is the fitting up of offices and hotels. The Blakely House, Lakefield, has just had a handsome bar placed in it by Mr. McFadden, and a shipment has also been made to the Brennan House, Norwood, while almost daily large consignments of goods are shipped to different places in the Midland counties. It is evident that Mr. McFadden's reputation is growing larger with his business.

Mr. McFadden is a practical workman himself, and of course superintends all his own business, which requires his constant attention. He started for himself only eight years ago, in much smaller warerooms than he now occupies. But though beginning at a time when it was uphill work for most people, Mr. McFadden, by hard work and industry, has met with success. His trade gradually expanded year by year, and he was induced to add a hearse and general undertaking department. In 1882 he enlarged his premises on Hunter street, giving him a warerooom 85 x 24. The second story of this building is used as a finishing shop and for storing unfinished work as it comes from the factory; the third story, which extends over the whole building, is used as a show room for caskets, coffins and undertaking goods, and for storing surplus goods. The factory was also enlarged to four times its original size. It is situated on the Otonabee race, and is constantly kept busy manufacturing furniture that is afterwards brought to the finishing rooms situated over the store. The upholstering department is in the rear of the store and is well adapted for the purpose.

A staff of skilled and competent workmen are constantly employed, and the result is that Mr. McFadden's business has been very steadily increasing, so that he has at present one of the largest and most amply equipped furniture establishments in Central Ontario. A visit to his store will repay one even if they don't want to buy, and the obliging and courteous proprietor will be pleased to show his wares and explain in his good business manner, reasons why he can sell furniture both to the advantage of the buyer and himself. Read the advertisemeat in another column.

Mr. McFadden's warerooms are lighted up at night with electric light, and is the only establishment of the kind in Peterborough which has introduced this brilliant light. It has attracted buyers into the place at night, who find it as satisfactory as daylight in examining the furniture.

Bodega.

Fine Spanish wines, Ports and Sherries drawn from the wood, at William Chamberlain's Restaurant.

The Festival.

In the notice of the social festival in the Separate School grounds we inadvertently omitted the names of three ladies who assisted at the refreshment tables, viz., Mrs. T. Kelly, Mrs. D. Donohue and Mrs. M. Giroux. The ladies wish to return thanks to the Fire Brigade Band for furnishing the music.

Lovely Spot.

No more charming lake could be selected for a day's recreation than Lake Couchiching. On the wharves every facility is given for fishing, boating and general rusticating. For a pleasant day's outing, with the assurance of pecfect arrangements being made for the comfort of passengers, accompany the Foresters' excursion to Orillia on Thursday, July 24th. Return fare, good for two days, one dollar.

St. John's Sunday School.

The annual excursion of the Sunday School of St. John's Church was held on Wednesday. The pupils accompanied by teachers, parents and friends, in all numbering about 350, went down on the Grand Junction train to Hastings. The weather was very favourable, and the party enjoyed themselves during the day in Johnston's Grove. It was a very pleasant pic-nic, and the excursionists arrived home at about seven o'clock well satisfied.

An Interesting Match.

The Fire Brigade Band will be present during the lacrosse match to-morrow, between the Checkers of Beaverton and the Peterboroughs for the championship of Central Ontario. The Checkers have had such success this year that they feel that they can win the championship, and the Peterboroughs are determined not to loose it. A lively contest and an interesting match will be the result. The ball will be faced at 3 o'clock.

Grand Lacrosse Match.

Remember the Grand Lacrosse Match, Orillia vs. Poterborough, on Thursday, 24th July, in Orillia. Return fare, good for two days, one dollar.

Personal.

Mr. E. C. Hill has returned home from a business tour through some of the principal cities of the United States, including New York and Philadelphia. We have to thank him for a number of papers kindly forwarded from these cities.

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!

Is the heading of the poster now in the printers' hands announcing the Foresters' annual picnic to Orillia on Thursday, the 24th of July. As the return fare is placed at a price within the reach of all, one dollar, there is no doubt the excursion will be a great success.

Summer Underclothing in Merino, Gauze, Balbriggan, Lisle Thread and Cotton (all sizes) at Habiliment Hall.

Lake Couchiching.

Being translated means "Lake of Many Winds," and is without doubt one of the prettiest lakes in western Ontario, it being 750 feet above Lake Ontario and almost 400 feet above Superior. To feel the exhilaration of a high latitude, don't fail to accompany the Foresters' excursion on Thursday, 24th of July. Return fare, good for two days, one dollar.

Improvements.

As we previously stated, large improvements will be made in the block at the corner of George and Hunter streets, including a mansard roof. The block on Hunter street, west of the corner, will be raised a story, and the lane will be built over. A new plate glass front will be put in Mr. Erskine's store. In consequence of these changes, and to prepare for them, Mr. Erskine will, as will be seen by his advertisement in another column, hold a clearing sale of his stock.

Excursion from Toronto.

At noon to-day a special train arrived from Toronto on the Ontario and Quebec Railway with a large excursion party. There were about six hundred persons on the train. The excursion was held by the Sunday School of the Yonge Street Methodist Church. A number of the excursionists pic-nicked on Burnham's Point, and the remainder—the larger number—patronized the hotels. The afternoon was spent in viewing the sights about the town and watching the cricket match between the Torontos and Peterboroughs.

Excursion on the O. & Q.

The first excursion on the Ontario and Quebec Railway from Peterborough will be held on Tuesday next, to the village of Norwood, and it will also be the first excursion from this town to Norwood. It is the annual excursion of the Sunday School of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the annual pic-nic will be held in a grove at Norwood. The train will leave the station her at 11 o'clock a.m., and return early in the evening. The excursion should be, and no doubt will be, well patronized, and arrangements will be made or that all may have ample opportunity for enjoyment.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

THE DRIVING PARK.

The Half-Mile Race Track—Lacrosse Grounds Being Prepared.

The track in the driving park having been completed, and people invited to drive upon it, a notice of the park as it is and will be may not prove uninteresting.

First, as to where it is located. It is in Monaghan, on the southern boundary of the town. If George street were opened to the boundary there would be a straight road to it, and the distance would be shorter, but at present the way to go to the park is to follow the road to the Little Lake Cemetery as far as Crescent street, then south on Locks street to the boundary (Mr. S. Paine's corner), and a few steps west on the boundary brings one to the Driving Park.

The Driving Park Company have leased thirty acres of land from Mr. R. A. Morrow. The western part of the lot—sixteen acres—is set apart for the driving park, in which a track has been built. This track is exactly half a mile long, and is fifty-five feet wide. It will make a fine course for races, either horse races or foot races, and already events are booked to take place upon it.

A contract has been entered into with Mr. Thos. Rutherford for fencing the park. The fence that is at present on three sides of it will be removed and replaced with a board fence ten feet high. This fence will be placed around the sixteen acres used for the driving park. On the north side of the park, near the west end, a grand stand will be erected at once, large enough to seat 1,500 people. The winning post will be directly opposite this stand. A smaller fence will be built on the inside of the race track.

The Lacrosse Club have decided on having a ground on which to play matches in this park, and for this purpose they have secured the ground in the center of the race track. On Wednesday of this week the lacrosse ground was laid out by the President of the club and others, and the work of preparing the ground was given to Mr. A. Williams. When this ground is ready there will be no more complaints of a small field from visiting clubs or the home players. There will be room for placing the goals 150 yards apart and the grounds will be wide enough to give plenty of space for field play. The field is, in one sense, very level, and what is required is the levelling of knolls. It is expected that the grounds will be ready for playing on in time for a tournament for the Brown Cup in September. Besides the seats on the grand stand, there will be plenty of space for spectators to witness matches, and in addition, persons could drive comfortably around the race track while the matches were in progress. The club are receiving liberal assistance from citizens in preparing this ground.

The driving park is now open for driving on, and the company invite all who wish to drive on it to enter freely upon the grounds. The track needs driving on to bring it into good condition for races, and with that object in view the park is opened to all. When the park is formally opened for events it will no doubt be of benefit to the livery stables, and if the proprietors of these stables can now assist in bringing the track into shape, it will be their own interest to do so.

The southern portion of the field leased by the Driving Park Company, comprising 15 acres, has been reserved for a circus ground, etc.

It is proposed to have a grand opening of the park on the 6th of September. On that day Hamly, of Port Hope, and A. Williamson, of Midland, are to run a half mile race in it, and there will be match race for $10 a side between E. Brown's "Fanny B" and McGregor's (Norwood) bay mare. There will also be other events of this kind, and the lacrosse tournament for the championship cup presented to the Peterborough Club by Mr. E. Brown, in all making two days of sport.

This driving park will supply a want in Peterborough, and it is largely owing to the efforts and enterprise of Mr. Ed. Brown, the manager of the Company, that the park is now an established fact.

THE GREELY EXPEDITION.

The Lieutenant Himself Rescued and Seven of His Comrades.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The Acting Secretary of the Navy has just received a telegram from St. John's stating that the Greely relief expedition has found the survivors of Lieut. Greely's party, eight men in all.

Capt. Sabine, in Smith's Sound, with the Thetis and Bear, rescued alive Lieut. A. W. Greely, Sergeant Brainard, Sergeant Fredericks, Sergeant Long, Hospital steward Beiderback, Private Connell and Sergeant Ellison, the only survivors of the Lady Franklin Bay expedition. Sergeant Ellison had lost both hands and feet by frost bite, and died July 6th at Goodhaven, three days after amputation, which had become imperative. Seventeen of the 25 men composing the expedition perished by starvation at the point where they were found. One was drowned while sealing to procure food. Twelve bodies of the dead were rescued, and are now on board the Thetis and Bear.

THEIR SUCCESSES.

Gen. Hazen has received the following from ollowing from Lieut. Greley:—For the first time in three centuries England yields the honor of the fathest village north. Lieut. Lockwood and Sergeant Brainerd, on May 13th reached Lockwood Island, latitude 83° 24 longitude 44° 5. They saw from 2,000 feet elevation no land north or north-west, but to the north-east Greeland and Cape Robert Lincoln Latitude 83° 35, Longitude 38°.

DETAILS OF THE RESCUE.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., July 17.—Commander Scheley says that on June 22nd while lying in the drift ice off Cape Sabine they sighted signals of distress at a distance of seven miles. It was about nine p.m. The sun was shining brightly but it was bitterly cold. After considerable trouble they steamed towards the pack-ice upon which the survivors were. They were crying like children, and hugging each other frantically. They seemed frantic with joy. Scheley put off in the cutter and after great difficulty they reached them. He first imagined that they were crazy. They seized each of the men in the boats hugged them, kissed their hands, and did everything one could imagine to show their gratitude. Ellison could not move, as he was so badly frozen. He lay on the ground and moaned. Others of the party also were frostbitten, but seemed to forget their sufferings. They were, however, very feeble and looked as though they could not live five hours. As soon as Greeley and his men were taken aboard the relief ships the expedition returned.

Importation of Rags.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The Treasury Department has been imformed that paper rags, supposed to have been collected in cholera-infected districts of Europe, are being imported into the United States through Canadian ports. A Boston despatch says great excitement was caused there by the report that the steamer Marathon had landed a quantity of rags, which came from cholera-infected ports of France. An investigation showed that the rags came from the North of France and had been duly inspected.

Insult to the German Flag.

BERLIN, July 15.- The French ambassador has been instructed to express to the German government the regret of his government at the action of the Alastian students, who tore down and burned the German flag in Paris, and to state that owing to the quickness with which the accident happened the police were unable to interfere in time to prevent it. The newspapers urge the German government to demand reparation for the offence and the punishment of the students.

Sacrificing Her Life.

MOBILE, Ala., July 15.—Near Bolling, Ala., last evening, a north bound train on the Mobile and Montgomory Road ran over an aged woman named Spence, killing her instantly. Walking along the roadside with her little adopted daughter, the latter became frightened at the approaching train, and ran on the track. The old lady rushed to the rescue, seized the child, and threw it clear off the track. While in the act the train ran her down, killing her instantly and throwing her body over upon the little girl seriously injuring the latter.

Labor Demonstration to Awe the Lords.

LONDON, July 17.—The trades committee is making arrangements to have a procession of 200,000 people during the demonstration at Hyde Park on Monday to awe the lords into passing the franchise bill. The majority of workshops in London will close. The enthusiasm over the movement for the abolition of the lords is at high pressure. In consequence of Lord Churchill's supporting the plan for a compromise on the franchise bill, the ultras in the national conservative union are making a movement to have him displaced from the chairmanship.

Quebec—Gentilly, Mrs. J. Demers, general store, assigned in trust; Montreal, A. Blumenthal, clothing, assigned in trust, Nova Scotia—Guysborough, William Hart, general store, assigned in trust; Yarmouth, Jos. T. Crosby, manfacturer of boots and shoes, assigned in trust. There were 15 failures in Canada reported to Bradstreet's during the past week, against 19 in the preceding week, and 26, 9 and 1 in the corresponding weeks of 1883 1882 and 1881.

The Cotton Operatives' Strike.

LONDON, July 17.—The strike of the cotton operatives at Burnley, Lancashire, was supposed to be at an end when the operatives expressed their willingness to accept an increase of wages amounting to five per cent. to which the mill owners were prepared to agree. But at a mass meeting held this morning the agreement of last night was annulled, and the operatives are still on strike.

SENTENCED FOR OUTRAGE.

NEW YORK, July 16.—John Burns was convicted to-day of outraging Mrs. Mary Crowley, while she was visiting her father's grave in Calvary Cemetery, and sentenced to 15 years and 10 months in the states prison at hard labour. He was one of a gang of seven that committed the outrage.

LABOR TROUBLES.

NEW YORK, July 17.—It is probable that on Monday next there will be a general strike in building trades here, necessitating the shutting out of over 2,000 men. The trouble is over the nine hour demand, the men wanting this concession from their employers. If the strike takes place it will paralyze the whole building trade of New York.

SCHOOL GIRL'S SUICIDE.

PITTSBURG, July 17.—Lizzie Emmecich, aged 20, shot and killed herself in Franklin township yesterday, because she was unable to keep up with other scholars at school.

The Electro-Motor.

It may certainly be said that for pumping, sawing, and such like operations of a large country house, an electro-motor, actuated by the dynamo which lit the house at night, would be cheaper and quite as effective as a steam engine. Sir William Armstrong, at his house near Newcastle, has utilized a water-fall in his grounds to light his house by night and to supply it with power by day. The waterfall is 1,500 yards from the house. It actuates a turbine, which it connects by a belt to a dynamo electric converter, capable of transmitting about five horse-power into a current of electricity. The current is conveyed by a suitable conductor to the house where it works forty Swan lamps. In daylight it works a saw mill. Sir William Siemens, at his country seat near Tunbridge Wells, uses a steam engine, the waste steam of which warms the hot-houses. During the night the primary machines actuate two powerful electric lights, which are employed in forcing the growth of various fruits and plants which live, as it were, in perpetual sunlight—or its equivalent. During daylight one of the machines is used to work a chaff-cutter and the other machine is at the farm a quarter of a mile away; the other does the pumping of the establishment. At night, of course, they are employed for light.—Nineteenth Century.

OTTAWA July 17.—The quantity of lumber which passed through the Government works so far this year has been much smaller than for several seasons past, partly owing to low water, and partly owing to the large reduction of the cut last year.

MR. MOWAT'S FAILURE.

The leading Reform journal, now that the Boundary Award has been declared by the highest judicial authority to be invalid and not binding, treats the award as a matter of no moment, and says:—"The question was one on which there was always a difference of opinion amongst leading lawyers." We are not aware that any leading lawyer ever held a different opinion from that of the Privy Council. We know that Mr. Mowat professed to do so, but we always set it down to trickery and a desire to make political capital dishonestly rather than to ignorance. But whether through dishonesty or ignorance it is certain that Mr. Mowat, his colleagues and supporters, the Globe and its satellites have clamoured for the award, have denounced as robbers those who denied the validity of the award, and have vilified as violators of pledges those who said that it was not binding. The Privy Council is not likely to have sided with robbers and breakers of pledges. It was for the award that Mowat & Co. avowed themselves ready to undertake a civil war—it was on the strength of the award that they undertook a filibustering expedition at the expense of the people of Ontario, when an election in Algoma made it expedient to hire an army of ruffians (with their votes). By clamouring for the award—for nothing but the award—Mr. Mowat and his friends have for years kept the people of Ontario from legally obtaining their full rights by declining to go to the courts.

And now with their usual slipperiness the Reform journals, finding that they are proved utterly in the wrong as to the award, shift their ground, and say that only one point has been decided against them, but that Ontario may still get her rights. A more impudent pretence was never put forth than this claim that the Reformers are the champions of Ontario's rights in this matter. Why, they have been willing all along to defer and even to sacrifice those rights, if thereby they could secure a political advantage for themselves. We and many other Conservatives have contended all along against the unauthorized and unconstitutional agreement between Mr. Mowat and Mr. Mackenzie, resulting in the award of the arbitrators, because it did not give us all to which we are probably entitled, and gave us no good title even to what it allowed us. It was Mr. Laurier, the leader of the Quebec Reformers, who supported the award because Ontario would probably obtain its rights to a fuller extent from the Privy Council. It is the Reformers not the Conservatives who have selfishly and dishonestly prejudiced our just claims.

We have full confidence that the Privy Council will do us justice, but we must confess we would have more confidence in our success if our case were in better hands than those of Mr. Mowat, who had already shown himself willing to sacrifice our interests to his own advantage.

A COMPARISON.

The Reform journal at the Dominion capital remarks that Mr. Mowat has been continuously in his present office since 1872 and Sir John Macdonald only since 1878.

This is very true so far as it goes, but to make a fair comparison the very important matter of the previous record of the two leaders should be taken into consideration.

Sir John Macdonald became a member of an administration more than thirty seven years ago. He has been in fact the master mind in the administration of Canada for a period extending over the last thirty years with some breaks, and even then as leader of the opposition he left his marks upon our history. It was under his leadership that confederation was brought about, and as first premier of the Dominion of Canada he established and consolidated our country. His services are too well known to require a detailed account.

Mr. Mowat's record is rather different. He was in 1858 for two days a member of an administration, having obtained this short-lived office by repudiating the award of Her Majesty Queen Victoria expressly invited by Parliament, as to the site of the capital of Canada. And after thus insulting his sovereign and a lady, and thus repudiating the pledge of the Parliament of Canada, he has been howling for an invalid award made by an arrangement between him and Mr. Mackenzie. Again he was for a few month's a member of the Macdonald-Dorion Ministry till its feeble existence was termination by resignation. Still again he came into the coalition ministry in 1864 under Mr. George Brown's wing, and remained in it for less than half a year, without waiting to take part in the great work of confederation. In 1872 he fell heir to the trickery and corruption by which Mr. Blake ousted Mr. John Sandfield Macdonald from the Premiership of Ontario. He has maintained himself in that position by the use of the surplus accumulated under Sandfield Macdonald, and now that it is dissipated he is borrowing money for the same purpose.

Mr. Mowat has very little chance of remaining in power till he rivals Sir John in length of office. He can never equal him in the value of his services to this country.

FROM AN OLD CORRESPONDENT.

A Sea Voyage From New York to Gasgow—by the State Line of Steamships.

On Thursday, the 19th day of June I and my wife went on board the S.S. State of Nebraska, A. G. Braes commander, at the company's wharf in New York, at 2 o'clock p.m., having purchased our tickets from Mr. Chas. Cameron, the agent in Peterborough, and I may here state before I commence my description of things in general, that everything was up to the mark and just what Mr. Cameron represented re state room accommodation, meals and courtesy from all on board. The afternoon we sailed was a very hot day indeed, and glad I was to get away from such a hot place as New York—money would not coax me to stay in such hot regions. We had on board 134 cabin and over 100 steerage passengers and about 100 of a ship's crew from the commander downwards. She is a very fine vessel—the latest built one of the line. She is 425 feet in length and 55 feet wide, and is a fine steady vessel to take a sea voyage in. Of course the steamers of the company are not the fastest that cross and re-cross the Atlantic, but they are the safest in the long run. We took ten days to reach our destination. Very few passengers were sick, the sea was grand and as calm as Clear Lake on a fine day. After a few days at sea passengers as a rule begin to know each other and an intimacy springs up. Little spats occur, and what I have never seen fail yet—lots of grumblers—belonging to both sexes from especially the female portion, and Americans as a rule. I do, from the bottom of my heart, pity the stewardesses and stewards, they receive shameful abuse and put up with it seemingly. On the 26th of June a good-hearted Irishman from Pittsburg, Pa., a commercial traveller, who told us his mother lived in the last house in Ireland (he was a great wit), lost a purse and nineteen gold sovereigns. In it, after getting pretty freely supplied with several good horns of Scotch whiskey from the steward in our cabin, he took a stroll aft to the steerage, and after imbibing some more in that part of the vessel he arrived home rather late to his apartments, and next morning was a sadder and wiser man. After he found out what he had lost (we all felt sorry for him) he informed the Captain and Purser, but it would be like hunting a needle in a hay stack as to try and recover it, as some rogue was the richer of that amount. Several large whales were seen on nearing the coast of Ireland. We anchored of Greenock, as the state of the tide would not permit us to go to Glasgow until morning. A steam tender came along with the Custom House officials, so they set to work to examine every passenger's baggage, and I can assure you that they are rigid, and if any O'Donovan Rossa rascals are on board with any infernal machines or dynamite pity them. It is an English dungeon for the remainder of their natural lives (if not hanged). There were no such rascals on board of our ship. Lots of detectives lurking about, they know their men and spot them. I found the weather in Glasgow very sultry, they have had no rain for over two months. Still the crops look very well. Business is very quiet, and has been for some time, but merchants look to the future with hopes. I have an old friend in the cotton spinning business who is very anxious I should make Glasgow my home, and must say I have not as yet made up my mind to remain in this country, having (as I was told by several of my Young's Point and Peterborough friends) I would not remain here over three months. I must admit that I have a strong feeling towards Canada, where I have many warm friends and always received the very best of treatment at their hands. The watch I received from my Young's Point friends on leaving I prize very highly, and as a matter of course show it to all my friends, and have got an inscription engraved on the back of it. I left Glasgow for Liverpool on the 2nd of July, where I spent a period of six years in the head office of the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co., now 14 years ago, and find there are still a great number of my late fellow clerks still in the Company's service, and right glad they are to see me in this country. They stick pretty close to their situations, not so changeable as we are in America (going to pastures new). I find a marked change in Liverpool for the better—it is a fine city, and a great Tory centre, and long may it be so. The grand old man Gladstone and his blundering ministry will, I have not the least doubt, be very soon a thing of the past to be long remembered as the worst that has ruled the destinies of a great nation like Great Britain towards keeping up his dignity and honor at home and abroad. I return again to Glasgow again next week en route to Edinburgh, then to Melrose to visit the scene of my childhood. I will see lots of changes that have taken place since 30 years, then I go to Aberdeen and the North, and again return to Glasgow, and would like very much to visit Ireland. I now beg to conclude with kindest wishes to all my friends in and around Peterborough.

THE MOWAT & CO. PLOT

THE ENQUIRY BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF THREE JUDGES.

The Reform Members Bolting—Mr. Lyon's Timber Resolution—No Corrupt Offers—The Telegrams Destroyed.

The Commission resumed on Wednesday morning, July 16th.

THE TELEGRAMS.

Mr. Dwight, General Manager of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co. gave evidence that he had destroyed the telegrams in accordance with their practice of keeping secret their customers' business.

NO KNOWLEDGE OF CORRUPTION.

Mr. Hudson, M.P.P., Mr. Ross, M.P.P., Mr. Monk, M.P.P., Mr. McCallum, M.P.P., and Mr. Broder, M.P.P. all testified that they knew nothing of any attempts to corrupt the Grit members.

ONE OF THE DISCONTENTED.

Mr. Baskerville, M.P.P., also knew nothing as to the charges. Dr. Dowling had confessed to him that he was discontented with his party, and he advised him to vote as he thought right after hearing the debates.

WILKINSON'S APPOINTMENT.

Mr. D. H. Michael, of Cobourg, testified that Mr. Wilkinson had spoken to him last summer of having obtained an appointment in the North-West. He had last seen Wilkinson three or four weeks ago.

NO MONEY OFFERED.

Mr. Gibson, M.P.P., said that he had heard of advances being made to some of the Reform members. It had been suggested to him by a member of the Opposition that it would be well if some of the Government members would join Mr. Meredith. Mr. Bunting had argued in favour of this course. Mr. Kirkland had endeavoured to interest him in a change of the timber policy, but had offered him no money. He had not been asked by members of the Government to lead Kirkland and others on, and would not have consented to do so.

REFORM MEMBERS BOLTING.

Mr. Sills, M.P.P., said that a Conservative constituent had advised him to vote with the Opposition, as a sufficient number of Government supporters to defeat it would vote against it.

LYON'S RESOLUTION.

Mr. Caldwell, M.P.P., said Mr. Kirkland had endeavoured to obtain his support for a change in the timber policy, but had not approached him improperly. M. Lyon, M.P.P., also spoke to him about such a change, showing him a resolution prepared to carry it out.

The Commission then adjourned.

Every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use accordingly, and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by J. D. Tully.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The "Cantata of Undine" has been composed by a gifted and fashionable amateur, and was performed by young people who belonged to le beau monde, consequently at an early hour on Friday evening, the house was crowded to witness the appearance of a constellation of amateurs, among whom Regina shone resplendent When after the opening chorus, she came first upon the stage, and stood watching the baton of the leader, a hum of admiration rose from the audience.

The costume was of some silvery gauze that hung like mist around her slender figure, and was encrusted here and there with the fragile white water-lilies that matched the spray which twined across her head, and strayed down among the unbound hair now floating free, far below her waist.

Very pale but calm, she began her solo, at first a little tremulously, but by degrees the the rich voice gained its strength, asserted its spell, and nobly fulfilled the promise of Professor Hurtzsel, that New York should hear that night its finest contralto.

Startled by the burst of applause that succeeded her song, she looked for the first time at the audience, and saw her guardian's tall conspicuous figure leaning against a column, near the spot where Mrs. Carew sat.

Very grave, coldly critical, and quite preoccupied he certainly looked, and none would would have dreamed that the slight motion of his mute lips, meant "My Lily."

Twice she sang alone, and finally in a duo which admirably displayed the compass and timbre of her very peculiar voice, and the floral hurricane that assailed her, attested her complete triumph.

The unaffected simplicity of her bearing, as contrasted with the aplomb and artificial manner of the other young ladies who were performers, —the angelic purity and delicacy of the sweet girlish face, with a lingering trace of sadness in the superb eyes, which only deepened their velvet violet,—excited the earnest interest of all present, and many curious inquiries ran through the audience.

At the close of the Cantata, Mrs. Palma drew Regina away from the strangers who passed forward to offer their congratulations, and throwing a fur cloak around her, kissed her cheek.

Mrs. Palma hurried Regina through a side entrance and down to the carriage, and, ere long, having seen her enter the hall at home, bade her good-night and drove back for Mrs. Carew and Mr. Palma.

It was only a little after ten o'clock, and Regina went into the library, her favourite haunt. She had converted the overskirt of her dress into an apron—now filled with bouquets from among the number showered upon her ; and selecting one composed of pelargoniums and heliotropes,—she placed it in a vase beneath her mother's picture, and laid the remainder in a circle around it.

"Ah mother ! they praised your child ; but your voice was missing. Would you, too, have been proud of me? Oh ! if I could feel your lips on mine,—and hear you whisper once more, —as of old,—' My baby ! my precious baby !"

Gazing at the portrait she spoke with a passionate fervour very unusual in her composed, reserved nature ; and unshed tears gathered and glorified her eyes.

The house was silent and deserted, save by the servants, and by Mrs. Carew's child and nurse, and throwing off her cloak Regina remained standing in front of the portrait, while her thought wandered into gray dreary wastes.

Since the day of Mrs. Carew's arrival she had not exchanged a syllable with her guardian, nor had she for an instant seen him alone, for the early breakfasts had been discontinued, and in honour of his guest and client Mr. Palma took his with the assembled family.

He never even accidentally glanced at her, and patiently watching his immobile cold face, sparkling only with intelligence, as he endeavoured to entertain his exacting and imperious guest, Regina began to realize the vast distance that divided her from him.

During the last three days, left to the companionship of her own sad thoughts, and unable to see Olga alone even for a moment, more than one painful and unutterably bitter discovery had been made. She felt that indeed her childhood had flown forever, that the sacred mysterious charm of womanhood had been poured upon her young heart.

Until forced to observe the marked admiration which, in his own house, Mr. Palma evinced when conversing with Mrs. Carew, Regina had been conscious only of a profound respect for him, of a deeply grateful appreciation of his protecting care ; and even when he interrogated her with reference to her affection for Mr. Lindsay, she had truthfully asserted her conviction that her heart was wholly disengaged.

But sternly honest in dealing with her own soul, subsequent events had painfully shocked her into a realization of the feeling that first manifested itself as she watched Mr. Palma and Mrs. Carew at the dinner table.

Although conscience acquitted her of any intentional weakness, her womanly pride and delicacy bled at every pore, when she arraigned herself for being guilty of this emotion towards one who regarded her as a child, who merely pitied her forlorn isolation ; and whose eyes would fill with fiery scorn could he dream of her presumptuous, her unfeminine policy.

Despite the chronic sneers with which Olga always referred to his character and habitual conduct, Regina could not withhold a reverence for his opinion, and an earnest admiration of his grave, dignified, yet polished deportment in his household.

By degrees her early dread and repulsion had melted away ; confidence and respect had usurped their place ; and gradually he had grown and heightened in her estimation, until suddenly opening her eyes wide she saw that Erle Palma filled all the horizon of her hopes.

During three sleepless nights she had kept her eyes riveted upon this unexpected and mournful fact, and while deeply humiliated by the discovery, she proudly resolved to uproot and cast out of her heart the alien growth, which she felt could prove only the ups of her future.

Tree Moving.

A Sarnia architect, Mr. Blaker, has done a notable thing in tree-moving. He transplanted a handsome maple, which was one foot in diameter and 30 feet high, from one part of the town to another, hauling it by means of a capstan. It used to be thought a preposterous idea to move trees of such dimensions, but it is now found to be the easiest, quickest and cheapest mode of establishing shade trees in parks and boulevards. The large trees which were transplanted in Victoria park three years ago are thriving well.

LITTLE BOYS earn from one dollar to a dollar and a half a week selling THE EVENING REVIEW.

Treatment of Tree Wounds.

Valuable trees that have been wounded or mutilated are often sacrificed for lack of the discreet surgery which would repair the injury they have suffered ; and Professor C.A. Sargent, of the Bussey institution, has done good service to farmers, fruit-raisers, and landscape gardeners, by translating from the French the following practical hints, which we give with slight abridgement :

Bark once injured or loosened can never attach itself again to the trunk ; and whenever wounds, abrasures, or sections of loose bark exist on the trunk of a tree, the damaged part should be cut away cleanly, as far as the injury extends. Careful persons have been known to nail to a tree a piece of loosened bark, in hope of inducing it to grow again, or at least of retaining on the young wood its natural covering. Unfortunately the result produced by this operation is exactly opposite to that intended. The decaying wood and bark attract thousands of insects, which find here safe shelter, and abundant food, and, increasingly rapidly, hasten the death of the tree. In such cases instead of refastening the loosened bark on the tree, it should be entirely cut away, care being taken to give the cut a regular outline, especially on the lower side ; for if a portion of the bark, even if adhering to the wood, is left without direct communication with the leaves, it must die and decay. A coating of coal-tar should be applied to such wounds.—Prairie Farmer.

The company sustained the favorable opinion formed regarding their acting on the previous evening, and Mr. Gilmore was again called before the curtain by the delighted audience at the conclusion of the fourth act. The audience appeared to be well pleased with the performance.

Warm Weather Ties in great variety at Andrew McNeil's.

A Railway Bridge Partly Burned.

The railway bridge over McLaren's Creek, on the Victoria branch of the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway, was partly destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning. Communication was not interruptad, as the passengers and freight on the trains were transferred, and material has been ordered to rebuild the burned part of the bridge.

Dr. Barnado's Home.

A detachment of children with those in charge numbering about 150, from the Home in London, is expected to arrive on Tuesday, July 22d. Splendid Arrangements.

A committee of two Foresters and one of the Lacrosse members visited Orillia on Thursday and concluded arrangements for the successful carrying out of the Forester's Picnic to Orillia on Thursday next, July 24th. A beautiful Grove adjoining the Lacrosse ground has been secured. All the hotels were to charge the uniform price of 25c. for dinner and for those who prefer carrying their own provisions the Agricultural Hall, a handsome structure the interior of which is at present decorated with festoons, Chinese lanterns, and eighty-three large flags by actual count, has been rented by the committee. Along the sides are dining tables and seats. The centre floor being reserved for dancing. The end rooms will be utilised for cooking, where good spring and hot water can be procured free of charge. No admission will be charged to the hall to those accompanying the excursion. Orillia is to have a half holiday that day and the Northern Railway are issueing tickets along the line at one and a third fare. Orillianites are looking forward to the 24th as a gala day, and from present appearances parties accompanying the Forester's excursion on Thursday July 24th, cannot fail to enjoy themselves. Return fare $1 good for two days.

CRICKET MATCH.

The Peterboroughs and Torontos—The Home Team Defeated.

On Thursday afternoon the Peterborough Cricket Club met the Toronto club, one of the best in the Province. The match was played on the Ashburnham cricket grounds. The match resulted in the defeat of the home team, but they have no cause to feel the defeat keenly, considering the strength of the team opposing them. However, if the Peterborough players had shown more "pluck," and been more courageous in facing the Toronto men, the result might have been different, or at least they would not have been so badly defeated, as their team comprises several good players. For the Peterboroughs, Grundy and W. A. Stratton alone made double figures in the first innings, the former adding 22 to the score, not out, and the latter making ten. In the second innings Rogers went first to the bat and was the last man to go out, making the score of 33. Grundy scored a double figure in this innings also, making ten runs. For the Torontos Boyd made the best score of the match in the second innings, namely 67.

The following was the sure of the match:—

POLICE COURT.

EFFECTS OF EVIL COMPANY.

FRIDAY, July 18.—Robert Watson was charged with having been drunk on Thursday. He pleaded guilty. "Why do you get drunk?" asked the Magistrate, and the prisoner told the old story of having met friends. He was allowed to go.

VAGRANCY.

John McLeod, who, about two months ago, sprained his ankles by falling off a platform while drunk, and was sent to gaol, limped into the court this morning and asked to be sent back to the castle, as he was not able to work. He was committed for a month as a vagrant.

THE STABBING AFFRAY.

The Italian navvy, Joseph Maffier, was brought up on remand, charged with having stabbed Peter Scarpion. The evidence of Scarpion and three others, besides Dr. Clarke, who attended the wounded man, was heard, and the prisoner was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison. When told his sentence by the interpreter, Maffeir asked to be allowed to serve his time in the county goal, but the request was refused, and he went out the court crying and pulling his hair.

Norwood.

Remember the excursion to Norwood via the O. & Q. R. on Tuesday next. The train will leave the station, George street, at 11 o'clock a. m., and return, leaving Norwood at 7 p. m

A Runaway.

A horse ran away this afternoon from the corner of Water and Simcoe streets. The buggy struck a post soon after it started and a shaft was broken. The animal was caught after running a block.

A Close Call.

As the express train was moving out from the Ontario & Quebec station on Thursday night, a boy who tried to get on slipped and fell between the cars. Those who saw him fall feared that he must have been injured, but he got up safe and sound, having fallen outside of the rail. It was a narrow escape, however.

Personal.

Among those who came to Peterborough on the excursion from Toronto on Thursday was Mr. Thos. Hazelhurst, one of the pioneer printers of this town. Mr. Hazelhurst's brother published a paper here many years ago, and Tom believes that he was the first boy that regularly delivered papers on a route in Peterborough. He saw many changes in town, as his last previous visit was paid to Peterborough fourteen years ago.

Mr. W. B. Campbell, manager of The Budget, Toronto, called on us on Thursday.

Lacrosse Match.

Several of the members of the Checker Lacrosse Club, of Beaverton, arrived last night, and the remainder of the team came at noon today. They are registered at the Grand Central. The match with the Peterboroughs, for the championship of Central Ontario, is being played this afternoon. The Peterborough twelve went into the field weakened by the absence of Ab. Yelland and Kit Rutherford, the former of whom has not recovered the free use of his limbs since the Belleville match, and the latter injured his foot playing ball and will not be able to play to-day. It is expected that they will be able to play with Orillia on Thursday.—The match to-day was won by the Peterboroughs, they taking the first, third and fourth games. Particulars to-morrow.

Current Events.

A son of Mr T. White, M.P., for Cardwell, has been appointed a draughtsman in the new architects branch of the militia department.

In Boston, Charles E. Brown has been arrested, charged with buying English shillings pieces, gilding them, and passing them for sovereigns.

TORONTO, July 15.—An inquest on the body of the boy Martin, alleged to have been kicked to death by two boys named Thompson and Read during a fight over a lacrosse match, was held last night and to-night a number of witnesses were examined, and at 10.30 o'clock the jury retired and returned, about midnight stating that they could not agree upon a verdict. They were then discharged and the boys released. It is understood ten were for committal and five for acquittal. The case will now be referred to the Queen's Bench.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Can't Be Beaten.

It is a fact that Nerviline cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure. Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to Ormond & Walsh's drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25 cts.

THE concentrated power and curative virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla render it the most reliable and economical medicine that can be used. It contains no dangerous or harmful ingredients and may be safely administered to patients of all ages. When you are sick, the best medicine that can be obtained is none too good, and is the cheapest, whatever its cost.

IN no other medicinal preparation have the results of the most intelligent study and scientific inquiry been so steadily and progressively utilized as in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases.

4. Where are the most conveniences?

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

W. Fairweather & Co.,

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

Soon Lost.

When the fourth game of the Lacrosse match was commenced on Friday afternoon, a young man, who resides in this town, bet five dollars that the Peterboroughs would not win it. The stakeholder had just taken the money and was putting it in his pocket when the game was won, as it only lasted about half a minute altogether. The better was not kept long in suspense.

Wedding Presents.

No store in Peterborough offers as large a variety of Wedding Presents as China Hall and all at reasonable prices. Almost every article in the large establishment is suitable for a present and the stock in point of newest and elegance of design is equal to that of any store in Canada. A Novel Proposal.

By the ordinary passer-by on George street last evening, might have been seen a homely young man walking by the side of a pretty girl with a heart pulsating to the will of a mind filled with something stronger than ordinary commonplace love. It was quite evident he had a proposal to make, but on account of their short acquaintance, he was afraid of making it, for fear of getting the "mitten". At lest he braced up, looked heavenward, then at her and gulped out. "My dear Mary I can't keep it any longer." The "secret" aroused Mary's curiosity and he at last asked her to accompany him on Thursday next to Orillia, promising a good day's recreation. Said he. "You may bet your boots that when the Foresters run an excursion they don't do it by halves; every detail is considered for the comfort of the passengers." Mary wilted at once and promised to go. John's heart beat quicker, and as he sauntered home, the thought uppermost in his mind was "Won't we have a heavenly time."

CHAMPIONSHIP LACROSSE MATCH.

The Peterboroughs Defeat the Checkers of Beaverton by Three to One.

A lacrosse match was played on Friday afternoon of the Ashburnham cricket grounds between the Peterboroughs and the Checkers of Beaverton for the championsip of Central Ontario, which championship is held by the Peterborough Club. The members of the teams assembled at the Grand Central hotel and marched over to the grounds to the splendid music of the Fire Brigade Band. There was a large attendance of spectators.

Mr. G. Thomson, Vice-President of the Orillia Lacrosse Club, was chosen referee. At a few minutes after 3 o'clock the players took their position on the field, as follows: –

| Peterboroughs. | | Checkers. |
|---|---|---|
| J. Giroux..... | Goal | ... F. McCrea |
| P. Myles..... | Point | ..... D. McKinnon |
| M. Tierney..... | Cover Point | ... K. Davidson |
| J. Henderson.... | Defence Field | ....E. McMillan |
| J. Howden ..... | " " | .....S. Weeks |
| R. H. Fortye.... | " " | ....C. Campbell |
| J. Sheehy..... | Centre Field | .....A. Ross |
| R. Kelly..... | Home Field | ..M. C. Cameron |
| W. J. Scott.... | " " | ...A.K. Cameron |
| M. Halpin ..... | " " | ...A. Cameron |
| W. Rudkins..... | 2nd Home | .....J. Birchard |
| G. Giroux..... | 1st Home | ....A. F. Birchard |
| J. Coughlin.... | Field Captain | ....L. J. Cameron |
| J. Simpson .... .. | Umpire | .....G. Rolling |

The ball was faced by Sheehy and Ross. Sheehy drew the ball out, and there was a scuffle for it in the centre of the field. Howden got the rubber and threw it towards the Checker goal and Halpin made a shot on the flags, but it passed over them. The ball was then dropped in front of the goal, and the home men made some nice play, Scott making an ineffectual throw on the flags. A Checker defence man secured the rubber and by a good throw sent it over the field, but Henderson returned it. Again the ball made its way towards the Peterborough side, and Tierney and Howden showed up well. Myles got the ball on his stick, and, making a good run, threw it towards the Checkers' goal. The home men, Rudkins and Giroux, endeavored to get it through, but it again travelled back to the Peterborough side and there was a shot on goal, but it was stopped. A tussle took place behind the goal, and the ball come near Henderson, when it again went down the field, giving the Peterborough home and Checker defence men something to do. The next time the rubber crossed the centre towards the Peterborough side Myles got it, and made a good run down the side of the field. He made a shot on the goal, and Campbell stopped it, Scott got the ball and scored the first game for Peterborough. Time, seven minutes.

The second game commenced the same as the first, with play in the centre. Fortye ran the ball to the Checkers goal, but it was thrown out to centre. Sheehy then dropped it in front of goal, but it was knocked out and sent to the other side of the field, Henderson returned it, and Kelly dropped it in front of the Checkers goal again. It almost went through, many giving vent to a cheer, believing the game to be won, but it was not so. A succession of drop shots were made on the Checkers' goal, and each time it looked as though the game was over, but out the ball would come again. Then the ball went to the other side of the field and was returned, and in this manner the play continued for twenty-five minutes. The Checkers were on the defence the greater part of the time but the Peterborough defence were also given some work. Finally Sandy Birchard got the ball, in front of the Peterborough goal, and passed it through, winning the game for the Beavertons.

The third game was shorter even than the first. The play was lively, each team doing their prettiest, but finally Kelly got the ball out near centre field. He threw it across the field to Howden, who made a shot on the goal. Rudkins got the rubber and passed it between the stakes, winning the game for Peterborough. Time, six minutes.

The fourth game was still shorter. Sheehy, in the face, drew the ball out to Kelly. Kelly ran a few steps and tipped it to Sheehy, who, being closely checked, returned it to Kelly. The latter ran to the south side of the field and threw it at the goal. Halpin got the rubber and made a shot on the goal. Rudkin's dropped it in front of the stakes (one of his pretty drops) and G. Giroux passed it through. Time, 40 seconds. The Peterboroughs had thus won the match by three games to one.

The usual cheers were then given, and the clubs and the land (the latter played eight pieces during the match) marched back to town. The Beaverton boys left on the 4.40 train and were accompanied to the station by the Peterborough players and given a rousing cheer as the train moved off, which they heartily returned.

The match, though a brief one, was very well played, but the Checkers were plainly overmatched. They are plucky, however, and the field captain said they would at once forward a challenge for a match to take place in four weeks, when they would again try for the championship.

THE REAL CONSPIRATORS.

We are taken to task by the Lindsay Post for describing the matter, into which the Royal Commission at Toronto is now making enquiry as "The Mowat Conspiracy." In doing so and in calling it "The Plot of Mowat & Co," we have followed no one's lead, but have formed our own judgment from the evidence and statements of those concerned. We will give our reasons for the conclusions at which we have arrived,

A charge of conspiracy to bribe members of the Legislature has been brought against Messrs. Kirkland, Bunting, Meek and Wilkinson. As to Mr. Kirkland the witnesses for the prosecution testify that he was not buying votes to overturn the Government, but was urging a change of our timber policy, which he thought had operated to his disadvantage. He seemed to wish to bring this about by discussion, and, in fact, had persuaded several of the Reform members that his views were correct. As to Mr. Bunting it is sworn that he was endeavoring to persuade some Reform members to come over and form a coalition, a scheme as to which we may hereafter express an opinion, but which certainly is not criminal. Mr. Meek appears to have been a party to this plan to form a coalition. Mr. Wilkinson, who has been hounded and vilified by the Reformers ever since he exposed the corruption of those lights of the party Mr. George Brown and Mr. Simpson, was obviously trying to overthrow his personal as well as political enemies, and naturally felt very bitter against them. Several of them are accused of wrong acts, but it must be remembered that the witnesses against them are men of bad characters, and of such a reputation that it would not be fair to hang a pilfering dog on their evidence. So far there is no evidence of any conspiracy to commit a corrupt act by these four. Still more complete has been the failure to find a tittle of evidence that the Conservative leaders, either at Ottawa or Toronto, were implicated in anything improper, and this is the chief object of the Reform plot to procure bribery. When any Conservative is proved guilty we shall not hesitate to condemn him.

But with the real conspirators the case is very different—we have their own confessions of their guilt. It appears from the evidence that several Reform members, discontented with the policy or the treatment of the Government, had determined to vote against it. This came to the knowledge of members of the Administration and finding that they were upon a mine they determined to try a countermine. They employed and paid some of the more disreputable of their followers to act as decoys and informers—to invite and take bribes, and to prepare a theatrical exposure of the corruption they were to solicit. Thus it was hoped that the bolting members would be brought back, that sympathy for the moribund Administration would be excited, and that above all the investigation into the rascally transaction of themselves and their tools in Algoma would be burked. Now this is not mere supposition. Several members of the Administration with shameless effrontery avowed that they employed the informers to entrap somebody that could be connected with the Conservative party into an act of bribery. The informers and decoys themselves not only testified to the same thing, but detailed with the hardihood of abandoned characters the way in which they had run after and pestered those who they thought might be persuaded to buy them. Special efforts were thus made by several of them to implicate Mr. Bunting. One of the spies concocted his evidence with a member of the Government. As we have said before we attach little credit to the evidence of these hired decoys and informers, with their previous bad record, but it is not probable that even they are committing perjury when they testify against themselves.

And now as to Mr. Mowat's share in these transactions. It is true that there is no direct evidence of his having taken an active part in suborning these base tools. It is, however, very improbable that when several of his colleagues were thus disgracing themselves he should have had no knowledge of their plans at the time. It is certain that he assented to them and became a party to them afterwards. He helped to pay two of the tools by confirming them in their corruptly acquired seats by a most disgraceful Act of the Legislature. He took a leading part in the coup de theatre in the House, and availed himself of the opportunity to utter slanderous falsehoods in regard to the Hon. Mr. Macpherson. As premier he was chiefly responsible for the shape of the prosecution in the Courts, by which, through a charge of conspiracy, the mouths of those accused were closed; and also for such instructions being given to the Royal Commissioners as precluded them from thoroughly investigating the misdeeds of his own colleagues and tools.

For these reasons we believe that the real conspirators are Mr. Mowat, his colleagues and their tools, and we shall continue so to believe unless some future evidence before the Commission or the Courts puts a very different aspect upon the matter.

This affair is a disgrace to Ontario and we hope that the culprits will get their deserts. The only gleam of consolation is that the attempt to secure a coalition has failed. We rejoice that the Conservative party is spared the disgrace of an alliance with such knaves.

THE MOWAT & CO. PLOT

THE ENQUIRY BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF THREE JUDGES.

Decoys and their Employers—Mr. Meredith's Indignant Repudiation—McKim Touting for a Bolt.

The commision resumed on Thursday morning.

HIRERS AND HIRED.

Informer Dowling gave his own evidence. In cross-examination it was elicited that two Reform members, Messrs. McKim and Bishop first spoke to him about the matter and invited him to see Wilkinson. Messrs. Pardee and Fraser pressed him to go to Mr. Bunting. Subsequently they told him to take any money that was offered. He had told Mr. Baskerville that the Government might have spent some money in his constituency as well as in Algoma.

INFORMER McKIM AGAIN.

Mr. Bishop, M.P.P., testified to going with McKim to Dowling, who looked scared and white. McKim had first told him what was going on.

STILL TIMBER.

Mr. Ferris, M.P.P., said Mr. Kirkland had endeavoured to impress upon him his views as to the timber policy, but had made no improper advances to him.

DOMINION MINISTERS.

The Hon. J. H. Pope, minister of Agriculture, was examined and knew nothing about any attempts to bring over Reform members.

The Hon. J. Carling, Post Master General, was equally innocent of any knowledge of the case.

MEREDITH'S INDIGNATION.

Mr. Merrick, M.P.P., said that he told Mr. Meredith of the rumours that Reform members were being approached. The conservative leader expressed much disapprobation and annoyance, saying he would not accept power under such circumstances and from disgraceful deserters. It was Dr. Cascaden who told him he had been approached.

MORE OF McKIM.

Mr. Lyon, fraudulently sitting for Algoma, gave his evidence. McKim first approached him about a change in the timber policy, on which witness said he would vote against the government. McKim took him to see Mr. Meek and Mr. Wilkinson who advocated a coalition and talked about with drawing the protest against him. Kirkland had talked to him about the timber policy and Wilkinson about money for votes.

The commission then adjourned.

Fire at Alliston.

Alliston, July 17.—The most destructive fire that ever visited this place occurred this morning. The fire was seen issuing from Knight and Wilson's foundry buildings about 5.30, and a speedy alarm was given, which brought to the scene hundreds of willing hands, but notwithstanding their untiring efforts the foundry and extensive machine shop attached were soon reduced to ashes. The flames soon reached the fine brick block in front and entirely gutted them, and only for a providential turn in the wind there would have been a repetition of the Port Perry disaster. In all there were eight stores, besides the foundry destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $80,000 for the foundry firm, who carried an insurance of about $20,000. Among the other sufferers the most serious was that of the Herald newspaper, two presses and stock; slight insurance. A hand engine was kindly despatched from Allandale, but arrived too late to be of any service.

Mono Mills, July 17.—J. F. McLaughlin's flouring mills were burned yesterday morning, about an hour after commencing work for the day. As there was no fire about the mill at the time, it is supposed that some of the machinery must have become heated.

Rev. J. D. McColl.

Beverley, Ont., July 17.—A council of Baptist Churches met in the church in Beverley lately to consider certain charges made against the moral character of their late pastor, Rev. J. D. McColl. After devotional exercises several hours were spent in examining into the case, and at the close the following preamble and resolutions were passed unanimously:—

Whereas the council having heard the evidence in support of the grave charges brought against the Rev. J. D. McColl, and being convinced that the said charges have been well sustained by the evidence, and that his conduct had been both wicked and a disgrace to the Christian ministry. Resolved, That we withdraw from him the right hand of friendship, and depose him from the Christian ministry, and that he is hereby deposed.

Gen. Butler's Ambition.

Information has been received in Chicago from close friends of Gen. Butler by Mr. B. L. Shively, Secretary of the anti-monopolist committee, dispelling all doubts regarding General Butler's candidacy for the Presidency on the Independent ticket and stating definitely and positively that he will run. Mr. Shively expressed the almost absolute certainity that Gen. Butler would be a candidate with the endorsement of the greenbackers, anti-monopolists and probably the laboring men. Gen. Butler's refusal at present to make a public statement, Mr. Shively says, is prompted by a desire to first see what can be done by a convention of labor representatives to be held in Chicago on July 30th.

Railway Accident.

Quebec, July 17.—A horrible accident which appears to have occurred yesterday on the Intercolonial Railway near Riviere du Loup has only been reported to-day. The down express going at full speed collided with a hand-car upon which were three men, knocking two of them into the air and badly injuring and crushing the other to death in the most sickening manner, portions of his flesh adhering to the locomotive wheels. The wife of the unfortunate victim was, pitiable to say, on the train at the time, and a collection was taken up for them among the passengers.

That is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave, truly is Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure guaranteed. There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists, 50 cents.

After Years of patient research among the flora of his native land, Dr. Van Buren discovered a little plant that is fast making his name famous on both sides of the Atlantic. From its health-giving sap he has given to the world a preparation now known as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure, which promptly relieves, and permanently cures all kidney diseases.

Borrowing Trouble.

Luffman, a Napanee man, got his wife fined $40 for improper conduct and then ran around town and raised the amount and released her.

California's Crops.

San Francisco, July 15.—Reports from the state show the loss by June rains to wheat is 135,000 tons, Barley 80,000 tons. The loss on wheat is equivalent to 7½ per cent. of the gross yield estimated in May at 180,000 tons. Barley will be about 12 per cent. on the May estimate. Farmers will incur additional loss by increased expenses of harvesting lodged grain.

A Constable Sentenced.

Dublin, July 16.—Michael Muldowney, ex-constable, has been sentenced to death at Sligo for assisting in the murder of Doherty, a farmer, in 1881, while the latter was guarding the residence of the Under-Secretary for Ireland, and for having joined secret societies. Muldowney protested his innocence, and charged the Crown with attempting to suborn witnesses from America.

Swallowing a Broomstick.

Mr. John Bumstead, of Langford, has a cow which had a carrot stick in her throat about two weeks ago. Thinking to relieve her some one passed a broomstick into the animal's mouth, but becoming restive she broke away, striking the end of the broom on the ground and breaking off about eighteen inches of it, which she swallowed. Mr. C. E. Thompson, V.S., performed an operation eight days later, cutting the stick out of the cow's side and she is now doing well.—News Letter.

Attempt to Drown Three Children.

St. Catharines, Jula 17.—News reached the Police Office about eleven this morning, of a woman being drowned near Lock No. 2. On enquiry it was learned that Mrs. G. Roszel, wife Constable Roszel, residing on Welland avenue, with her three young children, went down near Lock No. 2 this morning, and after looking about for some time she threw the children into the canal below the lock and plunged in herself. The children are all of tender years. The mad act, however, was seen, and assistance was speedily rendered. The children were rescued alive, but the woman perished. The body was soon afterwards recovered. Mrs. Roszel is known to have for some years back been occasionally insane, but in other respects was a harmless woman.

THE O. & Q. STATION AT TORONTO.

The Building in Course of Construction—The Freight House and Yard.

A few hundred feet west of Yonge street and just south of Cottingham street, a new stone building is erected, 111 feet long and forty feet deep. This, when finished, will be the passenger station of the road for North Toronto. The structure will be a very handsome one, being built of brown Credit Valley stone with grey sandstone trimmings on all window and door jambs and all corners. The rooms inside will be eighteen feet high and will consist of a general waiting room in the east end 48x40 feet; offices for agent, operators and ticket clerks 14 x40 feet, ladies' waiting room 24x40 feet, and baggage room 24x40 feet in the west end of the station. The interior work will be very handsomly finished, the ceilings frescoed and the furniture of the most comfortable if not luxurious designs. The upper part of the windows will be of stained glass of various colors. There will be four gable windows, one facing the track to enable the operator to see up and down the line, one in front of the station, and one at each end. The main entrance will face a new street which is being built from Marlborough avenue, so as to avoid any crossing of the tracks. The platform will be 18 feet wide and 275 feet long on the north side of the station and for 180 feet of its length will be covered by a verandah. The whole station will be covered by a slate roof so as to prevent any possibility of fire. The cost of construction will be in the neighborhood of $12,000, Mr. C. S. Boom being the contractor and Mr. H. M. Thayer forman of the masonry work. At present the business of the station is transacted in a small wooden shed, with a little enclosed room in which Mr. John N. Suther the station agent, keeps his tickets, and Mr. J. D. Smith, the operator, works. This, however, will soon be taken down, as the whole station will be ready for occupation in about a month.

THE FREIGHT HOUSE AND YARD.

On the east side of Yonge street is a rectangular piece of land 1,600 feet long by 350 wide, which has been purchased by the company for a freight yard. About the centre of this they have erected a freight shed 140 feet long and 50 feet wide, with a platform and verandah running along each side. The building is a very substantial frame one, and, like all other buildings on the road, will be painted olive. Every convenience for the transaction of a large freight business is being supplied to the building, and it has been so constructed as to allow of its being enlarged almost indefinitely if required. The yard is now being laid out, and will at present contain about twelve or fourteen loading and shunting tracks carefully arranged so as to give the greatest accommodation with the least expenditure of space.—Globe.

SETTLLED AT LAST.

The Ross-Wigg Difficulty—A Satisfactory Arrangement.

In March last Mr. S. P. Wigg was arrested while about to start for Europe, on a warrant sworn out by James G. Ross of Quebec, charging him with attempting to leave the state with the intention of defrauding his creditors. His bail was fixed at $20,000 but was subsequently reduced one-half. Mr. Wigg made no effort to secure bondsmen, preferring to remain in jail. The case has been in the courts since. No less than half a dozen different actions having been commenced, and it was only last week that a disturbance occurred at the wharf in the new harbor over the removal of a quantity of Lakefield lumber in which both Wigg and Ross were interested. While matters pertaining to the business have been before the courts almost daily, a movement was quietly set on foot to settle the trouble without further recourse to the courts, and in this succeeded.

Upon the request of Mr. Wigg, Mr. Ross sent John Scott, Esq., of Toronto, a mutual friend, to visit Wigg. He arrived in this city on Friday last and had an interview with Mr. Wigg, which resulted in his executing offers of judgments in each of the actions brought against him by Mr. Ross for the full amounts claimed, and also a stipulation that an order may be entered, dismissing the appeal to the general team from judge Churchill's order denying the motion to vacate the warrant of attachment, and the order of arrest in the action first brought.

The following is a copy of a letter written by Mr. Wigg to Mr. Ross:

OSWEGO. N.Y., July 12, 1884.

James G. Ross, Esq., Quebec:

"DEAR SIR.—Having looked carefully into the statement in the actions at your instance against me at present depending in the supreme court, I am satisged that I could not dispute my liability for the sums sued for; and I therefore consent to judgment being taken against me in my said actions for the amounts therein set forth, and I am instructing my lawyers to carry this out, and so have all this litigetion ended."

I am yours truly,

SAM. P. WIGG,

This terminates a long protracted litigation to the satisfaction of all parties concerned. Mr. Wigg was released from jail to-day.

It is said that the bookeepers who have been at work on the books for some time past, have succeeded in tracing every dollar received by Mr. Wigg, and that Mr. Ross is satsfied that there was no fraud or intent to defraud, but that Mr. Wigg acted a little injudiciously. An accounting will next be had, after which business will probably be resumed, with Mr. Wigg in charge.—Oswego Palladium, July 14.

A Field of Corns.

Thomas Sabin, of Eglinton, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns.

Another Victory.

A Startling important discovery was made when, after long and patient experiments, the combination of Nerviline was reached. A grand victory indeed, for the suffering have an ever ready, prompt, efficient, and cheap remedy at hand. Do you know that for 10 cents you can buy a trial bottle of Polson's Nerviline and test its great power over pain of every description? Polson's Nerviline cures chills, pain in the stomach, side and back, rheumatism; in fact all pain. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

Truth Bible Competition

NO. ELEVEN.

THE FINAL ONE!

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by any Publisher.

RESIDENTS OF TORONTO INADMISSABLE.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER!

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable other Valuable Rewards

DON'T DELAY SENDING IN YOUR ANSWERS.

At the solicitation of many friends Truth announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Any one residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. We hope the publisher of Truth will meet with the success his enterprise so richly merits. Everything he has offered in previous Bible Competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. We most heartily commend the paper to our readers. They will find it all it is represented to be. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in Truth the week following the close of each competition. There will be no chance, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is Gold first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was only one language and one speech on the whole earth?

3.—When is Inn first referred to in the Bible? by the word inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment, commonly known now as an hotel).

Everyone competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months subscription to Truth. And aside from the rewards themselves they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. Truth is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, as you will get Truth for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided you answers are correct, and reach Truth office in time. Don't delay.

Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of Truth that gets number one in these consolation rewards. The offer is open only to the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the post mark, where mailed, of the date of 15th September, it will take its place in the order received at Truth office. Fifteen days after date of closing will be allowed for letters from distant points to reach Toronto, but don't forget your letter must not bear a later post mark than September 15. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six months' subscription to Truth, which will be sent to any desired address for the twelve months. Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now, and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaing a valuable reward in addition to Truth,

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50 each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid rolled gold brooch, new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopedia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact every Province was represented in the last, not excepting British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. Truth directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value. This we think exceedingly fair, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, as Truth says, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph or in any way but through the post-office or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S. Frank Wilson, Truth office, 33 and 35 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

NORWOOD.

THE BOYNE ANNIVERSARY.—The anniversary of the battle of the Boyne was celebrated in Norwood by the Orangemen of the Norwood, Blairton, and Percy Districts. We learn from the Register that three beautiful arches were erected at the intersection of Colborne and Peterborough streets and one on Colborne street opposite the Commercial House, and many residences were gaily decorated. At about one o'clock the procession was formed by Marshals W. H. Hutchinson and George Kirk, and was composed of the following:—Norwood Brass Band, eighteen strong, and L. O. L., No. 34, Norwood; Norwood District, composed of five lodges, each headed with a fife and drum band; Blairton District, composed of three lodges, each headed with a fife and drum band; Percy District, composed of three lodges, each headed with a fife and drum band. The procession, which was a magnificent one, marched through the principal streets to the grove, where addresses were delivered dy the Rev. Mr. Fleming, Dummer; Rev. J. Carmichael, Norwood; Mr. A. Smith, County Master; Mr. A. R. Anderson, Past County Master, Norwood; Mr. J. Crough, Dummer; and Mr. J. P. Brown, Norwood. The chair was occupied in a very creditable manner by W. H. Hutchinson, Esq., Norwood. In the intervals between the speeches the Norwood Brass Band, under the able leadership of Mr. Stickle, rendered in first-class style some beautiful selections. The procession returned to Colborne street, where it was dismissed at about 4 o'clock. The number of strangers who were in the village ranged between five and six thousand.

THE ONLY ONE PRICE STORE.

A JEALOUS HUSBANDS REVENGE.

OMAHA, July 14.—M. Boussand, a wealthy cattle owner, whose herds range in the unorganized territory of North-Western Nebraska, has just retured from the annual "round up" in that region, and relates a tale of the plains that is, in some respects, a counterpart of the orthodox Mazeppa. When Boussand reached his ranch about the middle of June, he found his cowboy nursing a young man, whom they had rescued from the back of a broncho. When discovered the modern Mazeppa was lashed to the horse, entirely naked and unconscious. The animal was almost broken down, as if from long running, and was easily lassoed by the cowboys, who cut the thongs and released the strange captive. This happened about two weeks before Boussand's arrival, and during all that time the stranger had lain in a stupor. A few days before Bousand started on his return journey to Omaha, having a little medical knowledge, he succeeded in restoring the patient to consciousness, and his recovery was rapid.

When able to walk he said his name was Henry Burbank; that he was an Englishman, thirty-four years of age. About three years ago at Falmouth, England, he formed a partnership with a friend, Thomas Wilson, some years his senior, and with him came to America to embark in the cattle business. They cast about for a while and finally settled in North-Western Nebraska, where the range was unlimited and herders few and far apart. They built a comfortable ranch by a little stream, where Wilson's young wife reigned as housekeeper, attended by two or three domestics. Burbank, who is a handsome young fellow, found it agreeable, while Wilson was absent riding about the range, to make love to the latter's wife. This continued for some months, until in the latter part of May one of the cowboys, who had a grievance against Burbank, reported the fact to the woman's husband, whose jealousy had already been aroused.

That night Burbank was captured while asleep in bed by Wilson and three of his men and bound before he had a chance to make any resistance. Wilson had him stripped of every bit of clothing and bound on the back of a wild broncho, which was started off by a vigorous lashing. Before morning Burband became unconscious, and was therefore unable to tell about his terrible trip. He thinks that the outrage was committed on the night of May 27, and he was rescued on the morning of June 3, which would make seven days he had been travelling about the plains on the horse's back, without food or drink, and exposed to the sun and wind. Wilson's ranch is about 200 miles from the spot where Burbank was found, but it is barbly probable that the broncho took a direct course, and therefore must have covered many more miles in his wild journey.

When fully restored to health, Burbank proposes to make a visit of retaliation on Wilson and in this he will be backed by Boussand's men and those of the Ogallala Land and Cattle Company, whose range is near Boussand's.

The New Orleans Exhibition.

The buildings for this gigantic exhibition are now being rapidly pushed forward. The exhibition promises to surpass in size that of the Great London Exhibition of 1862, as well as the recent Centennial Exhibition, in the number of its exhibits. The London buildings of 1862, which up to that time was the largest exposition structure ever erected, contained 1,400,000 square feet. But the main building at New Orleans will contain 1,656,000 square feet, requiring 9,000,000 feet of lumber, 4,500 kegs of nails, and 5,000 boxes of glass, in its construction. It will be 60 ft. high, with a tower 115 feet, and it will have a music hall in the centre with a seating capacity of 11,000. To light the building there will be 15,000 incandescent lamps, and the steam required for the whole structure will be upwards of 3,000 horse-power. The horticultural hall is a handsome structure, 600 feet long by 104 feet wide, with glass roof and glass tower 60 feet high. This will form the largest conservatory in the wor d. It is intended to arrange around the sides specimens of the choicest plants from Mexico, Central America, Florida, California and all parts of the United States and Canada, and a special commissioner will visit Europe for the purpose of securing specimens of fruits and plants in order to make this display international in character. The centre of the hall will be devoted to an international fruit display, presenting 20,000 varieties. This is nearly double the quantity of any previous fruit exhibit. There will also be an art gallery. About 1,000 men are engaged on the work of the main buildings, which will be ready for the reception of exhibits in August next.—London Times.

A Strong Money Box.

Mr. William H. Vanderbilt's treasure vault, in which it is said he recently stowed away some $100,000,000 in securities, is one of the most redoubtable works of defence on the American continent, though you may not be entirely certain of that by surveying his mansion from the outside. Its foundations were blasted out of the rock; the front wall is 5 ft. in thickness, and the side and rear walls 3 ft., the material used being pressed brick with brown stone trimmings. The beams, girders, and main pillars are iron, incased in fire proof material. The doors, window frames, and minor partitions are iron, marble, and glass. No wood is to be found in the structure. The great vault is 36x42 ft., of wrought iron, steel, and Franklinite iron, is imposing in strength and proportions, and is situated on the ground floor. Its four outer doors weigh 8,200 pounds each, and have every effective and known improvement in defensive devices. A massive wall of masonry surrounds the iron work. A vault, which is burglar, fire and water proof, constitutes a distinct building in itself.—Scientific American.

Stagnation in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The Herald's financial article says:—"It begins to look as though half holidays on 'change would not be limited to Saturdays, but be extended to other working days of the weeks, so extricated is business and so devoid of interest are transactions. One day the bulls have their innings, an another the bears, but as they are all simply board-room traders and represent no public interest of moment it matters little which scores a victory. One cause of the stagnation is the fear that the course of the banks in refusing to discount single named commercial paper will push some of the weaker houses to the wall and lead a serious trouble before the fall trade is over. Meanwhile bank stocks are regarded with more favor, as evidenced by the increased demand at advancing prices.

Death of a Valuable Jersey Cow.

The celebrated Jersey cow Bomba, No. 10,330, died last Saturday of milk fever at the farm of her breeder and owner, A. B. Darling, near Ramseys, N.J. Two offers of $15,000 each had been made for this cow, but the owner would not part with her. One of the calves, Bomba's Daughter, an eight months heifer, brought $5,200 at auction last May, and a second calf was sold at private sale for a similar sum.

THE PUMP OF THE PERIOD.

I NOW DESIRE TO CALL THE ATTENTION OF THE PUBLIC TO MY NEW PATENT
Model Force and Lift Pump

which this cut represents. I believe it to be the BEST COMBINED PUMP IN THE WORLD. It differs from all others in having the sectional stock or head, with its many advantages, and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments. The intermittent or detachable packing is only used in actual forcing, and it is at all other times (say 95 per cent. of the service of the pump), unfreezable an unwearable.

THE HOSE COUPLING

is very convenient and effective. It can be adjusted in a few seconds, thus quickly changing an ordinary service pump into a Force Pump.

All orders promptly attended to, by mail or otherwise, and repairing done on the shortest notice.

A VALUABLE TESTIMONIAL.

MR. HENRY OWENS,

DEAR SIR,—In reply to yours, regarding your "Model Pump," I am satisfied that it will give the best satisfaction of any pump that I have seen.

Its combination for an ordinary and Force Pump augments its value in various ways and at a cost that any person who can afford any Pump can avail themselves.

It will afford fire protection, irigation, and carrying water through Pipes or Hose any distance from wells to where it is required at very moderate expense.

How I intend to apply mine for irrigation is, by attaching the pipe above the cylinder and distributing the pipes where I require the water. With a short hose attached to a hydrant, I can irrigate without handling long hose at less expense.

Farmers could attach wind mills to the Pumps and distribute water in the same way to their yards and stables, or watering places in pasture fields, at very moderate cost and great saving of labor.

The perfect arrangement of the Air Chamber and Cylinder in the Pump is such that the Pump may be run with any power attached for deep wells, supply of tanks, and the same as any metal Pumps.

I mention some of the advantages of your "Combination Pump" that occur to m . that perhaps you and your patrons have not thought of, and that at a that price I consider cheap.

Yours truly,
G. W. RANNEY C.E.,

We, the undersigned, having examined Mr. H. Owens' New Model Force Pump, take pleasure in stating that we consider it a great improvement on pumps formerly in use. In our opinion it is one of the best pumps ever introduced to the public, being quickly turned into a pump for fire protection. It is powerful, durable, convenient and easy to work, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it as a first-class article in every way.

CHAPTER XXIV—CONTINUED.

Poleg Peterson's daughter,—or else "Nobody's Child,"—daring to lift her eyes to the lordly form of Erle Palma.

As this bitter thought taunted and stung her, she uttered a low cry of anguish and shame.

"What is the matter? Don't cry; it will spoil your pretty eyes."

Regina turned quickly, and saw little Llora Carew standing near, and arrayed only in her long white night dress, and pink rosetted slippers.

"Llora, how came you out of bed? You ought to have been asleep three hours ago."

"So I was. But I waked up, an I felt so lonesoms. Mammie has gone off and left me, and, hunting for somebody, I came here. Won't you please let me stay awhile. I can't go to sleep."

"But you will catch cold."

"No, the room is warm,—and I have my slippers. Oh! what a pretty dress! And your arms and neck are like snow,—whiter even than my mamma's. Please do sing something for me Your voice is sweeter than my musical box,—and then I'm going away to-morrow."

She had curled herself like a pet kitten on the rug, and looking down at her soft dusky eyes, and rosy cheeks, Regina sighed.

"I am so tired—dear. I have no voice left."

"If you could sing before all the people at the Cantata, you might just one song,—for little me."

"Well pet,—I know I ought not to be selfish, and I will try. Come kiss me. My mother is so far away, and I have nobody to love me. Hug me tight."

There was a door leading from Mr. Palma's sleeping room, to the curtained alcove behind the writing desk, and having quietly entered by that passage soon after Regina came home, the master of the house sat on a lounge veiled by damask and lace curtains, and holding the drapery slightly aside, watched what passed in the library.

He was rising to declare his presence, when Llora came in, and somewhat vexed at the contretemps he waited the result.

As Regina knelt on the rug and opened her arms, the pretty child sprang into them, kissed her cheeks, and assured her repeatedly that she loved her very dearly,—that she was the loveliest girl she ever saw,—especially in that gauze dress. Particularly fond of children, Regina toyed with, and caressed her for some minutes, then rose, and said:

"Now I will sing you a little song to put you to sleep. Sit here by the hearth, but be sure not to nod and fall into the fire."

She opened the organ, and although partly beyond the range of Mr. Palma's vision, he heard every syllable of the sweet mellow English words of Kucken's "Schlummerlied,"—with its soothing refrain:

'Oh, hush thee now, in slumber mild,
While watch I keep, oh sleep my child.'

She sang it with strange pathos, thinking of her own far distant mother, whom fate had denied the privilege of chanting lullabies over her lonely blue-eyed child.

Ending, she came back to the hearth, and Llora clasped her little hands, and chirped:

"Oh—so sweet! When you get to heaven, don't you reckon you will sit in the choir? Once more,—oh! do—please."

"What a hungry little beggar you are! Come sit in my lap,—and I will hum you a dear little tune. Then you must positively scamper away to bed, or your mamma will scold us both,—and your mammie also."

A tall yellow woman with a white handkerchief wound turban-style around her head, came stealthily forward, and said:

"Miss, give her to me. I went down stairs for a drink of water, and when I got back, I missed her. Come baby let me carry you to bed, or you will have the croup, and the doctors might cut your throat."

"Wait mammie, till she sings that little tune she promised; then I will go."

Regina sat down in a low cushioned chair, took the little girl on her lap, and while the curly head nestled on her shoulder, and one arm clasped her neck, she rested her chin upon the brown hair, and sang in a very sweet subdued tone,—that most soothing of all lullaby strains,—Wallace's "Cradle Song."

As she proceeded, the turbaned head of the nurse kept time, swaying to and fro in the background, and a sweeter picture never adorned canvas, than that which Mr. Palma watched in front of his library fire,—and which photographed itself indelibly upon his memory.

Singer and child occupied very much the same position as the figures in the Madonna della Sedia, and no more lovely woman and child ever sat for its painter.

As Mr. Palma's fastidiously critical eyes rested on the sad perfect face of Regina, with the long black lashes veiling her eyes, and the bare arms and shoulders gleaming above the silver gauze of her drapery, he silently admitted that her beauty seemed strangely sanctified, and more spirituelle than ever before. Contrasting that sweet white figure, over whose delicate lips floated the dreamy rhythm of the cradle chant,—with the hundreds of handsome, accomplished, witty and brilliant women who thronged the ball-room he had just left, this man of the world confessed that his proud ambitious heart was hopelessly in bondage to the fair young singer.

"Sleep my little one, sleep,—
Sleep my pretty one,—sleep."

At that moment he was powerfully tempted to delay no longer,—to take her to his bosom forever; and it cost him a struggle to sit patiently while every fibre of his strong frame was thrilling with a depth and fervor of feeling that threatened to bear away all dictates of discretion. Ah! what a divine melody seemed to ring through all his future, as he leaned eagerly forward, and listened to the closing words, softly reiterated:

"Sleep my little one, sleep,—
Sleep my pretty one,—sleep,

For the first time within his recollection, he distrusted his power of self-restraint, and rising passed quickly into his own room,—and thence after some moments, out into the hall. Near the stairs he met the mulatto nurse, carrying Llora in her arms.

"Does Mrs. Carew permit that child to sit up so late?"

"Oh no Sir! She has been asleep; but Miss Regina pets her a good deal, and had her in the library, singing to her."

"Mr. Palma shall I kiss you good-night?" asked the pretty creole, lifting her curley head from her Mammie's shoulder.

"Good-night Llora. Such tender birds should have been in their nests long before this. I shall go and scold Miss Orme for keeping you awake so late.

He merely patted her rosy round cheek, and went to the library.

Hearing his unmistakable step, Regina conjectured that he had escorted the ladies home, much earlier than they were accustomed to return, and longing to avoid the possibility of a tete-a-tete with him, she would gladly have escaped before his entrance, had it been practicable.

He closed the door, and came forward, and leaning back in the chair where she still sat, her hands closed tightly over each other.

"I fear my ward is learning to keep late hours. It is after eleven o'clock, and you should be dreaming of the cool, beryl, aquatic abodes you have been frequenting as Undine; for indeed you look a very weary naiad."

Was he pleased with her success, and would he deign to give her a morsel of commendation?

MEDICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

How to Escape Nervousness.—The first prescription is an ample supply of pure, fresh and cool air. The nerves will always be weak if the greater part of the day and night be passed in close, ill-ventilated and over-heated apartments. The nerves, more than the rest of the body, to be properly nourished require a full supply of oxygen. They will not endure vitiated air, whether the impurities come from sewers, gaslights, subterranean furnaces or the individual's own person, without making an energetic protest. A gas burner consuming four cubic feet an hour produces more carbonic acid in a given time than is evolved from the respiration of eight human beings. Bear this in mind, you who suffer nervousness, that when you have shut yourselves up in your rooms and lighted an argand burner (which consumes about twelve cubic feet of gas per hour) you are to all intents and purposes immured with twenty-three other persons, all taking oxygen from the atmosphere. Is it a wonder that several hours' exposure to the depraved air your nerves should rebel, as far as their weak state permits, and that your head should ache, your hands tremble, and that your daughter's playing on the piano every day almost drives you wild? An overheated apartment always enervates its occupants. It is no uncommon thing to find rooms heated in winter by an underground furnace up to ninety degrees. Fights and murders are more numerous in hot than in cold weather, and the artificially heated air that rushes into our rooms, deprived as it is of its natural moisture by the baking it has undergone, is ever more productive of vicious passions. It is no surprising circumstance, therefore, to find the woman who swelters all day in such temperature, and adds to it at night by superfluous bed clothing, cross and dissatisfied from little every day troubles that would scarcely ruffle her temper if she kept her room at sixty-five degrees and opened windows now and then.—Our Continent.

Gordon From a Medical Point of View.—General Gordon is, indeed, as the Premier said, a distinguished personality. His life is as great a mystery as his character. His physical endurance in the desert would be difficult to understand in a strong man; but in a man with angina pectoris, and with a horror of meals, it is simply a kind of miracle. As far back as November 15, 1878, and in that very Khartoum on which the eyes of all Christian nations are turned he writes:—"I There are nine Europeans in the Soudan and they vegetate and do not live. Can you conceive what it is not to have any desire to eat. That is my case. I hate the operation. * * * My angina pectoris has not troubled me lately. According to medical books it is not known what occasions this. It is heart disease, and makes you think you are on the brink of death. A rush of blood takes place to the heart, and you think all is over. I may say I have died suddenly over a hundred times." We can only find encouragement in such facts to go on hoping that against all human and medical probabilities Gordon will again emerge from the Soudan, and long continue to show the world what can be done by men with grave disease, with faith in their own mission and in God's providence.

A Cat and a Doll Spreading Diphtheria.—It may be remembered that a good deal of prominence was given last fall in the papers to the occurrence of diphtheria in a family in Amsterdam N.Y. Two chidren died at intervals of several months, and a third was taken sick. The Board of Health appointed a committee to investigate, which examined the house and its surroundings, and obtained a statement from the attending physician. They have recently made their report, finding that there were no bad conditions existing in or about the house sufficient to explain the the appearance of the disease, and they conclude that it came from a cat which was fondled by the child which first fell ill. This cat was found at the time to have a swollen throat and to be suffering from a discharge from month and nostrils. It died a few days afterwards. Three days after the death of the cat the child fell sick with malignant diphtheria and died in about a week. During its illness it played with a doll, which was afterward given to a younger child, as it was supposed to be properly fumigated with sulphur fumes. This child died shortly after being allowed to play with the doll, of diphtheria. The third child also played with the doll and fell ill, but recovered. The Board of Health, therefore, traces the reappearance of the disease in the family, after the death of the first child, to the doll.—Sanitary Engineer.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the exterial covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

A DARING BURGLARY.

$3,000 STOLEN FROM THE PETERBOROUGH POST OFFICE.

A Door Forced and the Safe Blown Open —Registered Letters Carried Away— Money and Stamps Stolen.

Some time during Friday night or this morning the post office was entered by burglars and everything of value that they could lay their hands on was carried away.

When Mr. Burritt, the chief clerk, went to the office at about six o'clock this morning he was surprised to find the front door open, and on entering he saw a sledge and other tools lying on the floor. The safe door was open, and the evidences of a visit from burglars were plentiful. Mr. Burritt called a gentleman in to watch the premises while he notified Col. H. Rogers, Postmaster, of the occurrence.

THE EXACT EXTENT OF THE LOSS

cannot be ascertained, as it is not known what sums were contained in the registered letters, but it is believed that the burglars must have obtained, in money and stamps, at least $3,000. There was in the safe $412 dollars received as deposits and for money orders on Friday afternoon after the banks were closed, and Colonel Rogers had $150 in cash in the safe. Other sums raised the amount of cash in the safe to $600. A stock of stamps, $1,000 worth, had been received on Friday and there was between $300 and $400 worth of stamps in the office besides. These were all taken, there being only two dollars worth left in the office. The registered letters were kept in the safe, in a small cabinet, together with the books containing the records. Some of these letters were opened, and the envelopes were left on the floor of the safe, but the cabinet was carried away with the remaining letters and books. A deposit slip found on the floor showed that one letter from Lakefield had contained $436, which had been sent to be deposited in the Bank of Montreal. It was received in the Lakefield mail after the close of the bank and thus became part of the spoils of the burglars.

THE TOOLS USED

by the burglars, or a portion of them at least, were stolen from Messrs. Porter Bros.' carriage factory. The cracksmen had first entered this factory and secured a sledge, brace and bit, two chisels, a coal chisel, a punch and two hammers. They got these from the blacksmith and woodworking shops, evidently unlocking one door and passing out through another, which was secured on the inside by a button.

THE PLAN OF ENTRANCE.

The burglars entered the post office through the door in the rear. This door opens into a small enclosed yard. It was forced open by a "jimmy" or chisel, and when inside the thieves opened the front door and the door leading into Col. Rogers' office. The other doors were evidently opened so that if they were disturbed while at the work they would have more than one way of exit. The front door was forced open and then held shut by paper stuffed under it, and the other one was evidently opened with a key.

The handle of the combination lock in the safe was broken off. A small hole was drilled into the iron door and through this a charge of some explosive was inserted into the lock and with it

THE LOCK OF THE SAFE WAS BROKEN.

Apparently the door would not open then, for a second hole was drilled through the iron directly over one of the bolts. By this means the bolts were worked back with a sharp pointed instrument and the robbers had access to the contents of the safe. The explosion forced out the movable iron which formed the keybole, and that made the third small hole in the door. Two persons sleeping in the Little Windsor Hotel at about two or half-past two o'clock in the morning, but neither of them thought anything of it until they learned of the robbery.

There was about a dollar in change in the till at the general delivery, and it was taken, with the exception of ten cents. A watch, nickel case, which was in the safe, was not taken, although the box containing it was opened. Two pieces of jewellery in a small box, addressed to Mr. R. W. Muncaster, were also left behind. The burglars evidently wanted valuables easier handled.

The tools stolen from Porters' shop were identified by Mr. Chas. Porter. It was remarked as a peculiar coincidence that two chisels, belonging to a workman in Porters' shop, were used in the post office robbery at Millbrook some months ago, the same workman being then engaged in a carriage factory in that village from which the tools for that job were stolen.

Turnbull has just sorted up his stock of Lisle Thread and Silk Gloves. You can get almost anything you wish in price, color or quantity.

"A Burning Question".

The burning question of the present hour is "Are you going to the Foresters' picnic to Orillia on Thursday, July 24th". Return fare, $1. Be wise and don't miss it.

A Fine Band.

On Friday evening the Peterborough Fire Brigade Band delighted their hearers in the Court House Park with an unusually fine programme of classical and operatic music. The "Kyrie" from Mozart's Twelfth Mass was rendered with much spirit and superior taste, as were also several of the other selections of music, among which we may mention the vocal waltzes, "Dream Faces." The band have had their numbers augmented by two new players, and we understand that they are still further to be reinforced by the addition of another musician who has had years of experience in organizations of this kind. We hope the park will be thrown open to the public at once, as the season is getting advanced. It is not at all pleasant to be on the outside of the fence, as the band is so far away that the effect of the music, especially in piano parts, is partially lost to the ear of the anxious listeners. This is particularly noticeable when the vocal pieces are rendered.

As it Sounded in Other Ears.

The Sentinel-Star, in its notice of the Orangemen's celebration in Cobourg, says:—

"Besides the Cobourg band, there was one from Peterborough, an excellent one, one from Port Hope, and one from Bethany."

The Civic Holiday

Peterborough's civic holiday will be observed on Tuesday, August 12th, the Mayor having, in accordance with a request signed by a number of merchants and others, proclaimed that day a holiday.

Bicycling.

"Messrs. Max Dennistoun and Chas. Haultain, two Peterborough Bicyclists, rolled into Newtonville on Friday afternoon. They were on a trip to a point near the Falls. Mr. Dennistoun was thrown from his wheel while going up a hill this side of Newcastle, and had his back-bone badly broken. The voyageurs returned to Peterborough by the morning train."

Some choice Black Dress Goods just received at Turnbull's in Ottoman Cord and Crepe Goods. See them.

Lacrosse at Millbrook.

The Independants, a junior lacrosse club, played a match at Millbrook with the club of that village on Thursday. The Independents were a little surprised when they saw their opponents, for they were older and larger than they expected, as they thought they were to meet a junior club. However, they played pluckily and succeeded in taking one game, but the Millbrook club won the match, taking the first, second and fourth games.

"'Tis True."

Yes, 'tis true, and no one can deny the following four lines of one of our most eminent poets:

"What is man? a foolish baby,
Vainly strives, and fights and frets,
Demanding all; deserving nothing,
One small grave is what he gets."

Think of the above lines, man of the world, and accompany the Foresters' Excursion to Orillia on Thursday, July 24th. Return fare, $1.00, good for two days.

Fruit Jars.

Every person putting up fruit should give the the jars the first attention; without a perfect sealing jar, it is useless going to the expense and trouble of canning fruit, China Hall is the only store in Peterborough selling the improved perfect fitting "Crown Jar" in firsts. Every jar warranted. It costs no more to have the best as the enormous quantities, we handle enables us to sell our jars as low as any house in the trade and give a better jar, Stone Jars and Jelly Cans all sizes at CHINA HALL.

OF COMMON SENSE IS WORTH A BUSHEL OF ADVERTISING.

In laying out money for Goods stop long enough to consider these four things:—

1. Where ought the Best Stock to be?
2. Where can you be guaranteed on Price and Quality?
3. Where are the Goods returnable should your messenger make a mistake, and the Goods sent you are not to your liking?
4. Where are the most conveniences?

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

POLICE COURT.

A CHARGE OF THEFT.

MONDAY, July 21.—George Read was charged by Joseph Curtin with having stolen clothing belonging to him. Mr. C. W. Sawers appeared for the prisoner. A linen collar and a handkerchief, claimed by the complainant, were produced. Some evidence was heard, the case was enlarged until Wednesday.

P. B. C.

A meeting of the Peterborough Boating Club will be held at eight o'clock this evening.

A Drive.

A large drive of logs belonging to Messrs. Ulyott, Saddler & Co. is now passing down the Ontonabee River.

Foresters' Meeting.

The pic-nic committee of Court Peterborough, No. 29, C.O.F. will meet at the usual place this Monday evening at 7.30 p.m. sharp.

A deputation from the "Painters Nine" has requested us to say that they are anxious to play a game with any club in the county of Peterborough.

Lakefield Regatta.

The train will leave Peterborough for Lakefield to-morrow at 11.45 a.m., and a special train will leave Lakefield for here 10.30 p.m. The sports at Lakefield include a cricket match between the Peterborough and Lakefield clubs, a regatta and an illuminated canoe parade, concluding with a pyrotechnic display.

St. John's Church.

The Rev. J. Brown, who has charge of this parish during the absence of the Rector in the old country, preached two excellent sermons on Sunday in St. John's Church. Mr. Brown is residing at Mrs. G. E. Shaw's, where he may be seen by any of the parishoners who may desire an interview with him.

Valuable Goods

Selling at a great sacrifice, Rich Dress Silks, Brocaded Satins, Damask Silks, Black Satins, Three Mantle Lengths of Rich Black Silk Velvet Brocade, to be sold at half price. Real Thread and Silk Laces, Rich Sash Ribbons and Ostrich Feathers to be cleared out at a tremendous sacrifice. Ladies are crowding Fairweather & Co's Store every day purchasing bargains.

Delayed.

The steamer Golden-Eye was delayed at the locks bridge by logs this morning. The boom at the Cemetery Point was opened, and when the steamer was passing through the logs the boom at the bridge, which kept the boat's channel clear, gave way. The men engaged in the drive worked hard to clear the passage, and the steamer got safely through after a delay of about two hours.

Picnic at Savigney's Point.

Our readers should not forget the picnic at 2 o'clock sharp to-morrow afternoon by the Golden Eye to Savigney's Point, for which all the arrangements have been completed to make it a thorough success. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral. The Fire Brigade Band will be in attendance, and a scow will accompany the steamer. Refreshments can be obtained on the grounds.

A Large Camping Party.

A camping party went north to Stony Lake this morning to spend ten days in rest and pleasure. There were twenty-eight persons in the party, including Mr. W. Paterson, jr., wife and members of family, the Misses Menzies, Miss Hardy, Messrs. Jas. Menzies, Ed. Dawson, A. D. Russell, W. Saulter and others from Peterborough, and contingents from Port Hope and Toronto. They will pitch their tent on Gin Island.

GEN. MOWATS' OFFICER.

ONE OF THE FILIBUSTERING ARMY AGAIN DISTINGUISHES HIMSELF.

Mr. Edward, alias "Boston," O'Brien is Bound over to Keep the Peace for Threats of Violence.

At the Police Court this morning, before the stipendiary magistrate, Edward, alias "Boston," O'Brien was charged on a warrant with threatening to inflict bodily harm upon the person of the editor of the Sentinel. The evidence went to show that in consequence of the report of the Police Court proceedings which appeared in these columns on the evening of Tuesday last O'Brien entered the office of the paper and created a disturbance and ordered the correction of certain statements which were made. The following evening a report of the interview was printed, but the objectionable part of the evidence printed was neither "taken back" nor was any apology made for it. Yesterday morning the following communication was received by Mr. C. J. Stilwell:

port Arthur July the 9th 1884.

mister edeter of the sentenil paper you have been riting stuf about some frends that i want you to take back or you will be sorry for you had not better Show up at night or you will not be able to get home for their is a big gang of us and we mean Bisness we are going to break both your legs and chop of your finger and cut of your nose slit your ere and ficks you so your frends won't now you so you look out as we meen what we say stick to one another yours in blud skull and crossbones.

Mr. George Huffman testified that on Wednesday he was in company with a friend when O'Brien came up to him and stated that it was his intention to "lay out" the prosecutor. He (O'Brien) stated that the worst punishment he could get was six months in gaol and that he would willingly undergo that so long as he had satisfaction first.

Last night the footsteps of the prosecutor were dodged from place to place, and as the conduct of the prisoner was menacing a warrant was procured and the man was arrested.

The bench considered the case a serious one and the prisoner was bound over to keep the peace in bonds of $500—two sureties of $200 and himself in $100.

Mr. Wink appeared for the prosecution.—Port Arthur Sentinel.

LACROSSE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Montrealers Wrest the Championship from the Torontos.

The long-worked-for championship match between the Montrealers and Torontos was played in Toronto on Saturday afternoon. It was apparent that the teams were closely matched and an exciting game was anticipated. This was fulfilled, for the championship hung on a single game, each team securing two games.

The first was won by the home team in ten minutes; the second by the Montrealers in sixteen minutes; the third also by them after a hard struggle of forty-nine minutes; the fourth by the Torontos in eighteen minutes; and the fifth and deciding one by the visiting team in a single minute.

Children for the Home.

The first fruits of the establishment of the Hazel Brae branch of Dr. Barnardo's Homes in Peterborough arrived on the noon train to-day. The children were not expected until to-morrow, and when a telegram was received in the morning stating that they were coming, those in charge of the home and the committees had a busy time preparing for them. The party numbered one hundred and thirty, all girls, ranging from about six to thirteen or fourteen years of age. They were at once taken to the Home and cared for.

Just What You Want.

A day free from labor, business or anxiety is something to be desired; a day of enjoyment with pleasant company is something to be earnestly wished for. A pleasant excursion which includes both these, and a visit to a beautiful town as well, is a "consummation devoutly to be wished." An opportunity for such an enjoyable outing is provided by the Foresters' excursion to Orillia on Thursday next. The arrangements made at that town are such as will guarantee the comfort of all who attend with the intention of picnicking, while for those who do not wish to take baskets, there is ample hotel accommodation. The lacrosse match will be well worth seeing, and altogether a pleasanter day could scarcely be had in any other way.

Personal.

Mr. Allan Huffman, of Belleville, formerly of the Huffman House, Peterborough, is in town.

Herbert Braden, son of Mr. John Braden, died this morning of heart disease. He was between eleven and twelve years of age.

Mrs. Robertson, mother of Mr. W. H. Robertson, of the Times, died at about 11 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Robertson's death is the fourth bereavement the family has been called upon to bear inside of two years, two of her daughters and one son having passed away from this world within that time. The remaining members of the family have the sympathy of the community.

The Rev. Mr. McCrea, of Cobourg, and the Rev. E. F. Torrance, M.A., of St. Paul's Church, exchanged pulpits on Sunday.

The Rev. H. Edmison, M.A., of Rothsay, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church on Sunday.

Ontario and Quebec Sink-hole.

The Montreal correspondent of the Mail says: "The swamp on the Ontario and Quebec railway is giving all the trouble then predicted, there seeming to be no bottom, as when a hole is filled up the least weight going over it opens the chasm again. The time of opening through passenger traffic from here to Toronto and the west over the Canada Pacific Railway has been therefore postponed again until the end of the month, and it is doubtful if the work will be accomplished by that time."

A PARK WANTED.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—The unprecedented progress of the city of Toronto is largely due to its press, followed by its Council and heartily supported by leading citizens, and the writer confidently appeals to the press of Peterborough, satisfied our Council and leading citizens will promptly co-operate in carrying out any place or plans for Parks and general improvements that may be agreed upon. Burnham's Point ought to be at once secured and put in order for picnics. Peterborough would then soon become the picnic centre of Ontario. Will the press start the ball, and oblige,

AN UNSETTLED POINT.

In the endeavour to create a diversion from the ridicule which is falling upon Mr. Mowat and his filibustering friends one account of the exposure of their ignorance in upholding the invalid boundary award as binding, the Belleville Ontario perpetrates the following:—

"The Privy Council having decided that the Ontario Liquor Act is constitutional the question arises: What does Sir John Macdonald, who claimed on the stump that it was not, know about law?"

The Privy Council has not yet decided that the Ontario Liquor Act is constitutional, but probably that will yet have to give judgment on the point. So far the Privy Council has decided that Dominion Legislation passed under the Mackenzie Administration, viz. the Scott Act, is valid, and it has also decided that, in the absence of Dominion Legislation, Provincial regulations of matters of police, viz. some portion of the Crooks Act, are valid. Thus the ultimate court of appeal has held that both the Dominion and the Provinces may to some extent legislate as to the liquor traffic, but it has not yet defined the limit of their respective jurisdictions, as to which opinions differ. The Privy Council has not decided that the Crooks Act is valid as a whole, nor whether it is so at all as against Dominion legislation.

IS IT MORAL?

In its efforts to mitigate the effect of the blow which it and its friends have experienced by the boundary award, on which they laid such stress, being pronounced invalid by the highest court of the realm, the Globe says:—

"Of the moral obligation devolving upon the present Government to give effect to the award there can be no question."

In the first place we cannot see how there can be any "moral obligation" on anyone in regard to an illegal and invalid award. There can be no moral obligation to break the law or to assist others to do so.

And as to any obligation, moral or otherwise, upon the present Government, such a pretension is absurd. If the Macdonald Administration endeavoured to force the acceptance of the award they would have been guilty of as immoral an act as the Mackenzie Administration, for they would have been usurping power not given to them by the constitution. In the written constitution of the Dominion of Canada such matters are left, not as in the Mother Country, to the Executive, but to Parliament. It would, therefore, be worse than an impertinence for anyone, even a Premier of Canada, to pretend to bind the Parliament of the Dominion in regard to a boundary question. Self-styled Reformers may be in favour of settling such matters by an agreement between two premiers wishing to make political capital for their party, but Conservatives are too loyal to the constitution thus to usurp the privilege of the people to decide such matters through their chosen representatives.

Again, we cannot see that there was any obligation upon a friend of Ontario and a lover of justice to accept an irregular award which apparently did this Province scant justice. Mr. Mowat claimed a far larger territory and only abandoned the claim because by sacrificing the rights of Ontario he hoped to make political capital for his own benefit. Mr. Laurier, the Rouge leader, urged the acceptance of the award expressly on the ground that he feared the Courts would find us entitled to more territory than the award gave us.

Even if he had the constitutional or moral right to interfere, why should Sir John Macdonald aid these Reform leaders in making capital by the sacrifice of Ontario's rights?

The Marquis and Princess.

LONDON, July 17.—The Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise visited the Canadian representatives at Wimbledon. The Marquis expressed the hope that Canada would always be represented at Wimbledon. Their visit implied that if an emergency arose 20,000 Canadians would spring to arms to assist the mother country. The team has not come for prizes, but to manifest the unity of feeling in the British Empire.

THE MOWAT & CO. PLOT

THE ENQUIRY BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF THREE JUDGES.

Adjournment to September 1st—Protests by Kirkland and Meek—Witnesses to be Called.

The Commission resumed on Friday morning.

THE ROUND ROBIN.

Mr. LYON was further examined, but told little in addition. He said that he signed the round robin at the request of Kirkland.

THE TIMBER POLICY.

Mr. THOS. MARKS, Reeve of Port Arthur, said that he was in Toronto during the session about the incorporation of his town. Mr. Kirkland spoke to him as to a change of the timber policy, and as he favoured the change he said he would speak to some of the Conservative members about it, but he omitted to do so.

ANONYMOUS LETTER.

Mr. BLAKE then submitted the following anonymous letter:—

"Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot:

MY DEAR SIR,—As I have no doubt you are desirous of obtaining all the facts in connection with the bribery case, I would strongly advise you to summon Dr. Jas. McMahon, member for North Wentworth."

Yours, &c.,
VERITAS."

The Court decided to call Dr. McMahon as a witness.

AN ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. S. H. BLAKE said he wished to call other witnesses who had either just been served or not at all.

Mr. MEEK declined to call his witnesses till the case for the prosecution was completed.

Justice PROUDFOOT adjourned the enquiry till the 1st September, when the Crown would have an opportunity of completing their case.

PROTESTS.

A long protest was then lodged by counsel on behalf of Kirkland, giving several grounds why the Commission should not be held. Meek also lodged a protest and suggested the names of witnesses to be examined, including the Hon. Messrs. Mowat, Pardee, Hardy, Fraser, and G. W. Ross; Mr. Gilmor, Clerk of the House, Mr. Notman, Queen's Printer, Messrs. Baxter, Graham, Awrey, McCraney, Ferris, Hart, and others.

ROUGE SLANDERS REFUTED.

THE attempt that is being made by Mr. Mercier to implicate Mr. Mousseau in some alleged corrupt transactions as to a contract are completely breaking down. We quote from the report of the independent Montreal Star the following evidence of Mr. Charlebois before the Royal Commissioners at Quebec:—

Being asked to explain the words "At the suggestion of our first friend, I have sent $300 to B.," in the letter of the 2nd July, 1883, Mr. Charlebois said: "They are very easily explained. On the 2nd of July, the same date as the letter, while at Quebec, Mr. Mousseau sent for me to come to his office. I went immediately and asked to see Mr. Mousseau. He was engaged at the time in finishing his private and official correspondence, and I waited in the office ten or fifteen minutes. Having finished, he asked his private secretary to withdraw and we remained alone. Then Mr. Mousseau asked me if it had been the case that I had given notes to Mr. De Beaufort or placed notes in the latter's hands. I replied that I had not directly placed the notes in the hands of Mr. De Beaufort, but that I had bound myself by notes for a sum of $10,000 which were in the hands of Mr. I. Durocher, and which were to be given to Mr. De Beaufort when I authorized it. On this Mr. Mousseau said: You have done a very wrong thing, and if I had known before that you had done so you would never have received the contract. I endeavored to explain to Mr. Mousseau the circumstances of the matter, but he would not listen to me. He (Mr. Mousseau) expressed himself as highly displeased with such proceedings and repeated that if he had known of it I would not have got the contract. He asked me whether I knew that the notes were in De Beaufort's hands. At my expressing surprise, Mr. Mousseau said: I must tell you that those notes have passed into other hands, and it has been reported to me. I replied that I did not doubt that he had heard the report, but I could not believe that the notes had passed out of the hands of Mr. Durocher. Mr. Mousseau then said that it had been so reported to him, that he had received from Montreal a letter from a friend saying that the notes had passed from Mr. Durocher into other hands, and, thinking him (Mr. Mousseau) to be an interested party, had sent him word. Mr. Mousseau had expressed the greatest surprise and displeasure at the whole thing. He (Mr. Mousseau) then said to me that if I owed Mr. Bergeron anything I should pay it, but his advice would be that if I did not think I owed him it I had better tell him so. It was upon this, therefore, that I wrote the letter in question, and this explains the words: "At the suggestion of our 'premier ami,' I have sent $300 to B."

Marriage Aid Association.

Mr. B. B. Osler, Q.C., appeared on Tuesday morning at Osgoode hall before Mr. Justice Rose and moved for writs of habeas corpus and certiorari for the purpose of obtaining the discharge from custody of Mr. Duff, the president of the Marriage Aid Association, who is now in gaol at Napanee under the eighty-fifth section of the Larceny Act. The story is somewhat old now, how Mr. Duff has been repeatedly brought up before different police magistrates charged with having prompted an article in a newspaper called the "Marriage Aid," in which the commercial soundness of the Marriage Aid Association was favourably commented upon, whereas, in fact, a receiver was appointed about a month afterwards. Duff has at last been convicted, and applies now to a superior court for relief. The learned judge granted the writs, remarking that the validity of the conviction was certainly quite a question for discussion.

Important Meeting of Freight Agents.

PITTSBURG, July 18.—A meeting of freight agents and railroad representatives was held to-day for the purpose of making rates and classification to Canada and New York State from points which heretofore were unclassified. The roads represented were the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Pittsburg and Lake Erie, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, Pennsylvania, Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia, Rochester and Pittsburg, Allegheny Valley and Pittsburg, and Western. Perfect unanimity prevails. A scale is prepared to New York points based on the New York City rate to Pittsburg. This was adopted, as also a rate to Canada based upon the Buffalo rates.

AFTER YEARS of patient research among the flora of his native land, Dr. Van Buren discovered a little plant that is fast making his name famous on both sides of the Atlantic. From its health-giving sap he has given to the world a preparation now known as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure, which promptly relieves and permanently cures all kidney diseases.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHILDREN ATTACKED.

Curious Mob Violence in Belfast—Sunday-School Children in Danger—Arrests.

Unfortunately, the passing of some of the Sunday-school excursions through the town on Saturday was attended by disturbances, which might have assumed serious proportions but for the arrangements that were made by the police authorities. The various processions left town without being interfered with in any way; but when returning home attacks were made on one of them at different parts of the route. While St. Enoch's Sunday-school scholars were coming from the Great Northern Railway terminus on their way to the church large numbers of people gathered along the line of march, and considerable excitement prevailed. When the procession reached the entrance to Royal Avenue a slight disturbance took place, and cheers were given and returned. However, the excursionists were allowed to pass on without further molestation at this point. The aspect of affairs became somewhat threatening at the junction of Royal Avenue and North Street, and stones were thrown by crowds that had assembled on each side of the street. It was with the greatest difficulty that the police were able to keep the parties separate. Some of the windows of the establishment known as the "Gin Palace" were broken by the stones. While passing through the other portion of Royal Avenue, stones came thickly from almost every direction, several coming over from tops of houses and from back streets. None of the excursionists were injured, but constable McCaffrey was struck on the forehead by a large stone, which inflicted a serious wound, that rendered it necessary for him to be taken to the Royal Hospital, where he received medical treatment. Eight members of the mounted police at once charged the crowds, dispersing them, so that the excursionists were allowed to proceed. The only place at which a recurrence of the attack was anticipated was Carrick Hill, and here, when the procession had got about half way past, a determined effort was made by a mob to force their way through the police for the purpose of making an onslaught on the children and those who accompanied them. However, the admirable police arrangements prevented this, and those who were showering stones were dispersed by a number of the mounted constabulary who had headed the procession from the railway station. One or two of the horses were slightly injured with stones, but nothing serious occurred. The windows in Mr. McKeown's pawn office were broken with stones, as well as those in Mr. Donnelly's establishment at the corner of Union Street. This house was broken in and some bottles of brandy carried away. There were some narrow escapes from the missiles. Colonel Forbes, who was present on duty, had his walking stick knocked out of his hand by a stone thrown from Carrick Hill. Mr. MacCarthy, R.M., was also in attendance during the evening, and the police arrangements were under the superintendence of Town Inspector Cullen and District Inspector Townsend. A number of persons have been arrested on the charge of stone-throwing. Last evening some disturbance took place in the vicinity of Boundary street, and stones were thrown. The police made two arrests.—Belfast Weekly News.

CHAPTER XXIV—CONTINUED.

A moment after, she knew that he entertained no such purpose, and felt that she ought to rejoice; that it was far best he should not,—for praise from his lips would be dangerously sweet.

Glancing at the floral tribute laid before her mother's portrait, he said:

"You certainly are a faithful devotee at your mother's shrine, and no wonder poor Roscoe is so desperately savage at his failure to engage a portion of your regard. Did you have a satisfactory interview with him on Tuesday last? I invited him for that purpose, as he vowed himself dissatisfied with my efforts as proxy, and demanded the privilege of pleading his own cause. Permit me to hope that he successfully improved the opportunity which I provided, by requesting him to escort you to dinner."

Standing upon the rug, and immediately in front of her, he spoke with cool indifference, and though the words seemed to her a cruel mockery, they proved a wonderful tonic, bringing the grim comfort that at least her presumptuous madness was not suspected.

"I had very little conversation with Mr. Roscoe, as I declined to renew the discussion of a topic which was painful and embarrassing to me, and I fear I have entirely forfeited his friendship."

"Then after mature deliberation you still peremptorily refuse to become more closely related to me? Once there appeared a rosy possibility that you might one day call me cousin."

With a sudden resolution she looked straight at him, for the first time since his entrance, and answered quietly:

"You will be my kind faithful guardian a little while longer—until I can hear from mother; but we shall never be any more closely related."

The reply was not exactly what he expected and desired, but with his chill, out-door conventional smile, he added:

"Poor Roscoe! his heart frequently outstrips his reason."

Looking at him, she felt assured that no one could ever justly make that charge against him; and, unwilling to prolong the interview, she rose.

"Pardod me, if not withstanding the lateness of the hour, I detain you a few minutes from your Undine dreams. Be so good as to resume your seat."

There was an ominous pause, and reluctantly she was forced to look up.

He was regarding her very sternly, and as his eyes caught and held hers, he put his fingers in his vest pocket, drawing therefrom a narrow strip of paper, folded carefully. Holding it out, he asked:

"Did you ever see this?"

Before she opened it, she knew it contained the address she had given to Peleg Peterson on Tuesday, and a shiver crept over her. Mechanically glancing at it, she sighed—a sigh that was almost a moan.

"Regina, have the courtesy to answer my question."

"Of course I have seen it before.. You know it is my hand-writing."

"Did you furnish that address with the expectation of conducting a clandestine correspondence?"

An increasing pallor overspread her features, but in a very firm decided voice, she replied:

"Yes, sir."

"Knowing that your legal guardian would forbid such an interchange of letters, you directed them enclosed under cover to Mrs. Mason?"

"I did."

The slip of paper fluttered to the floor, and her fingers locked each other.

"A gentleman picked up that piece of paper in one of the squares located far up town, and recognizing the name of my ward, very directly placed it in the possession of her guardian."

"Mr. Palma, were you not in a carriage at that square on Tuesday?"

"I was not. My time is rather too valuable to be wasted in a rendezvous at out-of the way squares, while a snow storm is in full blast. What possible attraction do you imagine such folly could offer me?"

"I met you not very far from that square, and I thought"

"Pray take time, and conclude your sentence."

She shook her head.

"Some important business connected with my profession, and involving a case long placed in my hands, called me, despite the unfavourable weather, to that section of the city. Having particularly desired and instructed you to come home as soon as the rehearsal at Mrs. Brompton's ended, I certainly had no right to suppose you intended to disobey me."

He paused, but she remained a pale image of silent sorrow.

"A few evenings since you asked me to trust you, and in defiance of my judgment I reluctantly promised to do so. Have you not forfeited your guardian's confidence?"

"Perhaps so; but it was unavoidable."

"Unavoidable that you should systematically deceive me?" he demanded very sternly.

"I have not deceived you."

"My duty as your guardian forces me to deal plainly with you. With whom have you arranged this disgraceful clandestine correspondence?"

Her gaze swept quick past him, ascended to the pitying brown eyes in her mother's portrait; and though she grew white as her Undine vesture, and he saw her shudder, her voice was unshaken.

"I cannot tell you."

"Representing your mother's authority, I demand an answer."

After an instant she said:

"Though you were twenty times my guardian, I shall not tell you, sir."

She seemed like some marble statue, which one might hack and hew in twain, without extorting a confession.

"Then you force me to a very shocking and shameful conclusion."

Was there, she wondered, any conclusion so shameful as the truth—which at all hazard she was resolved for her mother's sake to hide?

"You are secretly meeting, and arranging to correspond with some vagrant lover, whom you blush to acknowledge."

"Lover! Oh merciful God! When I need a father, and a father's protecting name; when I am heart-sick for my mother, and her shielding healing love, how can you cruelly talk to me of a lover? What right has a nameless, homeless waif to think of love. God grant me a father and a mother, a stainless name, and I shall never need, never wish, never tolerate a lover! Do you not insult my misery."

She lifted her clenched hands almost menacingly, and her passionate vehemence startled her companion, who could scarcely recognize in the glittering defiant gaze that met his, the velvet violet eyes over which the silken fringes had hung with such tender Madonna grace, but a half hour before.

"Regina, how could you deceive me so shamefully?"

"I did not intend to do so. I am innocent of the disgraceful motives you impute to me; but I cannot explain what you condemn so severely. In all that I have done I have been impelled by a stern, painful sense of duty, and my conscience acquits me; but I shall not give you any explanation. To no human being except my mother will I confess the whole matter. Oh send me at once to her! I asked you to trust me, and you believe me utterly unworthy—think I have forfeited your confidence, even your respect. It is hard, very hard, for I hoped to possess always your good opinion. But it must be borne; and now, at least, holding me so low in your esteem, you will not keep me under your roof—you will gladly send me to mother. Let me go. Oh! do let me go—at once—to-morrow."

She seemed inexplicably transformed into a woeful desperate woman, and the man's heart yearned to fold her closely in his arms, sheltering her forever.

Drawing nearer, he spoke in a wholly altered voice.

"When you asked me to trust you I did so. Now, will you grant me a similar boon? Lily, trust me."

His tone had never seemed so low, almost pleading before, and it thrilled her with an overmastering grief that when he who was wont to command condescended to sue for her confidence, she was forced to withhold it.

"Oh, Mr. Palma, do not ask me! I cannot."

He took her hands, unwinding the cold fingers, and in his peculiar magnetic way softly folded them in his warm palms;—but she struggled to withdraw them, and he saw the purple shadows deepening under the large eyes.

"Little girl, I would not betray your secret. Give it to my safe keeping. Show me your heart."

As if fearful he might read it, she involuntarily closed her eyes, and her answer was almost a sob.

"It is not my secret, it involves others, and I would rather die to-morrow, to-night, than have it known. Oh! let me go away at once, and forever."

Accustomed to compel compliance with his wishes it was difficult for him to patiently endure defiance and defeat from that fair young creature, whom he began to perceive he could neither overawe or persuade.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A portable folding parlor bowling alley has been patented by Mr. Wm. M. Goodenough, of Newark, N.J. It is formed of a series of sections hinged or otherwise attached to each other, with a folding box at one end adapted to receive the balls that have been rolled at the pins.

A corkscrew has been patented by Mr. Wm. E. Alvord, of Appleton, Wis. The corkscrew is formed on the lower end of a rod contained in an externally threaded tube, which in turn is contained in an internally threaded tube, the object being to so construct the corkscrew that the cork can be extracted without requiring the operator to pull on the corkscrew.

A propeller for small boats has been patented by Mr. John B. Kibler, of Minneapolis, Minn. A bottomless socket, with an upright post adjustably secured therein, is attached to the side of the boat, and this is made to sustain a paddle bar to be operated by a crank within the boat, by which the latter may be propelled in any desired direction.

A clasp for holding stockings, shirt sleeves, etc., has been patented by Messrs. Charles F. and Wm. J. Walters, of Gang Mills, N.Y. It is formed of a U-shaped frame, with bends in the shanks, to the inner free ends of which a V-shaped frame is pivoted, apapted to be pressed between the shanks of the other. The same inventors have also patented a stocking supporter and garter, being a device for holding the stocking from a waste belt or corset or other article of clothing. An improved garter has likewise been patented by the same inventors, one which does not cut into the skin or bind on the same, does not tear the clothes, and holds the hose securely.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.

Decide whether to dispose of surplus and inferior fruit, by making it into vinegar or by drying or evaporating it. Trees will be broken by careless pickers; saw off all injured limbs. The Appleworm may be diminished by picking up and destroying fallen fruit, or allowing the pigs to do it. Bands of carpet, bagging, or other fabrics, fastened around the trunks of apple trees with a single long tack, will catch many Apple-worms. Examine weekly and kill. If the trees set last spring suffer from drought, mulch them, or keep the soil loose. The Fall Web-worm spins its nest in summer also. At its first appearance, cut away the twig to which the nest is attached, and crush the worms. Young trees may have their shape controlled by pinching the end of shoots that grow too vigorously. When the Blackberry and Raspberry crops are off, cut away the canes that have borne fruit. The new stems of Blackberries should be stopped when five feet high, those of Raspberries at three or four feet. Keep strawberry beds free of weeds. Plant new beds with plants rooted in pots. Whitish spots on the underside of grape leaves are mildew. Dust sulphur, with a sulphur-bellows at once. Large caterpillars and beetles must be handpicked. Continue to pinch caterals.—American Agriculturist.

MR. L. A. Senecal, President of the North Shore Railway, has entered an action in the Superior Court at Montreal, for $100,000 damages, against Mr. Henry Desrosiers, merchant at Soral, for perjury, in swearing that the plaintiff was on the verge of insolvency and also was engaged in concealing his assets.

The cattle traders of Montreal are becoming agitated over the proposition to let American shippers bring stock from Montana to this port. It is well known that the fatal foot-and-mouth disease prevails in the Western States, and fears are awakened if the stock is brought into Montreal and that disease is developed when they arrive in England that the Dominion would at once be scheduled.

James Brayley, Hamilton, says:—"I read the testimonials for McGregor's Speedy Cure and found that I had not to go to New York, Philadelphia, Louisiana or Texas to find living witnesses of its value, we had plenty of persons right here to prove its merits. I got a bottle and it helped me right away. I was as bad with bilious fever and indigestion as I think one could be, I have taken three bottles and am nearly well and can eat any kind of food without it hurting me. ### A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does not stick deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Cheap Excursion to Toronto.

An excursion to Toronto and return over the Ontario and Quebec Road, will take place on Peterborough's Civic Holiday, August 12th. The rate is a low one and people should wait for it. Fuller particulars soon.

To the Thousand Islands.

The "Peterborough Pilgrims," a party of five young men, started for a pleasure trip to the Thousand Islands this morning. The "Pilgrims" are Messrs. John Miller, Arthur Turner, E. Clegg, Harry Stock and H. Dawson.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—North-westerly to south-westerly winds, fine, warm weather.

A Handsome Addition.

The Post of last week contains the following paragraph:—

"The fleet of the Lindsay Canoe Club has received an addition. On Saturday last the express brought in a handsome canoe for Mr. J. G. Edwards, the captain of the club. The canoe was built at the factory of the Ontario Canoe Co. of Peterborough and is of the Juniper model and fitted for sailing. The canoe is an excellent specimen of the superior work turned out from the Ontario Canoe Co's factory."

Sudden Death.

Mr. John B. Bailey died at an early hour on Sunday morning. He had been ill for a couple of days, and at about one o'clock he suddenly became worse. The physician was sent for, but before he arrived Mr. Bailey had expired. The disease was paralysis of the heart. The funeral took place to the Midland Railway station this morning, the body being taken to Rochester for burial.

A Rich Musical Treat.

As will be seen by advertisement in another column, Madame C. C. Rossiter, the renowned authoress, orator and musician, will appear in Bradburn's Hall in a varied and very superior programme of high art music on Friday evening, August 1st. The Quebec Chronicle has the following:—

"With admirable readiness and capacity Madame Rossiter did a prodigious night's work, which greatly pleased and really astonished her audience."

Norwood.

The annual excursion of the St. Andrew's Sunday School takes place to-morrow on the Ontario and Quebec Railway to Norwood. The train leaves Peterborough at eleven a.m., for Norwood, returning, at seven p.m. The people of Norwood have prepared a fine grove within a short distance of the station for the use of pic nic parties, and tea and hot water will be provided. Those not wishing to take baskets will find good accommodation in the village. Return tickets 50 cents; children under 15 years 25 cents.

A Fire.

A frame building on the shore of the river, near Simcoe street, was burned at about eight o'clock this morning. The building was owned by Mr. Wm. Mills, of Ashburnham, and was used by Mr. James Campbell, who had a quantity of pressed hay stored in it. The hay was consumed, and also a pair of bob sleighs belonged to Mr. Campbell. The firemen turned out promptly, but the building burned so rapidly that they could not check the flames. Mr. Campbell had $150 insurance on the hay, which will cover his loss. The building was worth about $180.

THE POST OFFICE ROBBERY.

The Envelopes of the Letters Found—Bank Cheques not Taken.

The cabinet in which the registered letters and books were kept, which was believed to have been carried away, was found in one corner of the safe, where, in the confusion, it was not noticed until an examination of what was left in the safe by the burglars was being made.

The letters had all been opened and the money which they contained was stolen. The envelopes and letters were dropped on the floor of the safe. There were nineteen registered letters.

Some of the letters contained bank cheques, but these the robbers did not take. Five were found lying on the floor of the safe. In the letter mentioned as containing over $400 in money, a cheque for $15 was also enclosed, but the cracksmen did not take it.

The box addressed to Mr. R. W. Muncaster, which was opened, contained a silver watch, two gold rings, a plated brooch and a silver earing. The more valuable goods were taken, but the plated brooch and earing were left. The burglars evidently were experts in estimating the value of jewellery, for another watch, a less valuable one, which was in the safe, was also allowed to remain there.

The sound of the explosion, when the lock of the safe was broken, was heard by persons in the little Windsor Hotel and the Commercial House, and one man in the former went down stairs, but hearing nothing more, returned to bed.

It might be mentioned that several post offices in Ontario were burglarized last week, including the offices at Cornwall, Aurora and Lyn. The plan of the robbers appears to have been the same in each case—the tools were stolen from a blacksmith shop, the door was forced and the safe blown open.

In reference to the Peterborough burglary, it would be desirable to ascertain whether, on the morning of Saturday last, 19th July, any team was hired from any livery in this town, by parties unknown to livery keepers, for travel to Port Hope or to any other place on the front. Further, was any team hired that day from farmers or others living in our vicinity? If this burglary was committed, as is probable, by strangers to Peterborough, how did they effect their departure from our town? They may have feared to do so by railway, in view of the risk of instructions having been wired to examine passengers, and they may thus have escaped by hiring a team in the way above suggested. Any one in a position to throw light on this point should communicate with our Postmaster, Col. H. C. Rogers. Again, hotel keepers of towns on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway to the front of Peterborough are asked to give any information they can touching strangers who may on Saturday or Sunday have reached their houses by team or otherwise, if it occur to them that these strangers may possibly have been implicated in this burglary.

Notice.

The business hitherto carried on by Bailey Bros. will be continued by Mr. James Bailey, who is at present in Rochester, and the store will be open to-morrow and afterwards for the sale of perishable stock such as fruit, &c.

Reservoir Lemon Squeezers.

This is a good common sense article. Everyone gives it the preference over all others. Buy one of our handy fly traps and rid your house of those pests.—ADAM HALL, Giant T. Store, George Street.

Notice to the Ladies of Peterborough.

Mr. D. VanBuren, of Toronto, formerly of New York, will be at the Grand Central hotel for one week, commencing Monday, July 21st, 1884, teaching the art of cutting ladies' and children's dresses by a perfect tailor system of cutting. Any ladies desirous of a knowledge of the art will do well to call and investigate, as it is within the reach of all. The only system in the world that is one small piece.

The Tournament.

Arrangements have been made with the Grand Trunk and Canada Pacific Railways to facilitate the visit of outside lacrosse players and others to Peterborough on the occasion of the lacrosse tournament for the "Idyl Wild Championship Cup" and the "H. Calcutt Brewery Cup," which takes place on July 31st and Aug. 1st. Outside clubs will doubtless enter the contest and no doubt the local club will will compete for the championship cup.

An Incurable Patient.

Dr. B—— on Saturday last received the visit of a stranger, well dressed and choice in his language, but looking very much depressed. He complained that he was subject to an ailment against which all remedies proved powerless. "How do you feel?" inquired the doctor, "I feel very melancholy." "Melancholy often arises from blighted hopes." "That is not my case," answered the patient. "From disappointments in love?" continued the doctor. The patient shook his head, adding, "I am dreadfully dull and low spirited." "In that case you should order the best wine procurable and use it in moderation." "Doctor, I have the best wines in my cellar; they won't avail against my complaint." "Then you must hear good music." "I hear it every day; it makes no difference; my complaint grows worse at night. Then in that case as a last resort I would recommend you to visit a higher latitude where you will receive a cool invigorating breeze in the hotest day in summer, where the very air seems to make the blood flow freer in your veins." The patient saw the feasibility of the argument and asked the doctor what place he could recommend. "Well, said the doctor, I would recommend Orillia, and if you can wait till next Thursday and accompany the Foresters excursion to Orillia on that day, I will guarantee that health will be perfectly restored, as the committee have studied the comfort of the passengers to the very letter, and I feel sanguine the programme laid down will be successfully carried out." "I will take your advice doctor. By the way, what is the fare to Orillia." "One dollar, return, good for two days."

who has been received with such marvellous enthusiasm since her arrival in this country from London, England, in the Allan Steamer Peruvian, will give her unique Entertainment in this place, introducing her surprising feats on the Pianoforte, which have gained for her already the reputation of being the finest lady pianiste ever introduced in America.

One of the most astonishing features of this entertainment is Madame Rossiter's performance on an English Concertina (costing $125.00). On this difficult instrument she is universally acknowledged to be the most skilful player living.

The programme will be varied with Comic and Tragic Dramatic Recitations.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

Daily Evening Review

TUESDAY, JULY 22, 1884.

THE CHOLERA IN FRANCE.

THE DISEASE IN PARIS.

PARIS, July 19.—Three cases of cholera reported here to-day; two fatal. There have been five deaths from the disease in the Department of the Lower Alps. Fumigation of the railway stations at Toulon, Marseilles and Paris have been discontinued, as it has proved a useless precaution.

TEN CURED.

MARSEILLES, July 19.—Ten patients suffering with the disease have been cured and have left the hospital. The public officials have become panic-stricken because of their failure to check the cholera and are fleeing. Six deaths from cholera at Arles yesterday. For day ending at 8 this evening there were 57 deaths. The Chamber of Commerce has voted an appropriation of 10,000 francs for the relief of the sufferers. Three deaths occurred at Brignolles today.

UNIVERSAL PANIC.

TOULON, July 19.—Shopkeepers are closing their establishments. The flight of residents is universal. The men stationed at the arsenal are leaving. In the full day ending at 6 this evening there were forty-six deaths at the same time and 121 cases were received at the hospital. The refusal of the municipal authorities to allow a procession of women in the streets offering prayers for the cessation of the scourge has created a bad impression among the populace.

MORE CASES AT PARIS.

PARIS, July 21.—Two fresh sporadic cases of cholera are reported. There is a noticeable fall in the temperature to-day, which is regarded as the best safeguard against the disease becoming epidemic.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

QUEBEC, July 19.—In reply to an anxious enquiry by telegraph whether the Government had issued stringent quarantine regulations against cholera at Halifax, Father Point and Port of Quebec, the President of the Quebec Board of Trade has received the following despatch from the Department at Ottawa:—"Grosse Island is the first quarantine station on the St. Lawrence. The other points you mention are all quarantine stations and the utmost vigilance is used."

Cholera Germs.

The Canada Lancet contains a translation made by Dr. Workman of Prof. Koch's report on Asiatic cholera in Calcutta. Prof. Koch, and those engaged with him, had every opportunity afforded them to make their researches fully and carefully. One of the principal results achieved is the determination of the nature of the microbes developed in cases of cholera. At least it is determined that they are not of the nature of those in cases of pneumonia, dysentery, phthisis, and kidney disease, or those developed in a number of different animals and substances in which bacteria abound. This is believed to be an important step towards solving the problem of prevention of cholera by inoculation.

Another fact of great importance is that whereas in Calcutta, before there was an efficient system of water supply, the death rate from cholera was 10.1 per thousand of the population, the rate since there has been pure water and plenty of it, is 3 per thousand. This fact would tend to strengthen hope in many places in Canada where waterworks have been established, but it is a solemn warning to those people who in crowded places continue to use water from tainted wells. It is a warning also to those in small towns and in the country who must use wells to see that there is no chance of the water being polluted from cesspools or imperfectly drained yards.—Globe.

Unwholesome Cherries.

The common red cherries now being offered for sale are almost unfit for use. Their growth is imperfect, and as soon as picked they begin to decay. They nearly all contain a small white worm, and buyers cannot be too careful in making a selection of their cherries. So says a gentleman who has had many years' experience in fruit culture.—Toronto News.

A New Galatea.

LONDON, July 17.—Miss Adelaide Detchon is studying the part of Galatea, and her friends predict that she will eclipse Miss Mary Anderson as a statuesque stage beauty.—Mail.

RESPECT OLD AGE.—An old favorite is the remedy known as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Thirty years reliable for cholera morbus, diarrhœa and summer complaints.

NO SUCH WORD AS FAIL.—A failure to relieve or cure summer complaints can never be truthfully applied to Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All dealers sell it.

THE R. C. NECROPOLIS.

Improving and Beautifying the Cemetery—New Monuments.

Last fall we noticed improvements which had been made in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, and the work of putting it in good order and improving its appearance has been continued this summer with good results. The cemetery has been placed in charge of Mr. Joseph Cowett, who had five years' experience in this kind of work with Mr. John Kelly at the Little Lake Cemetery.

SODDING THE LOTS.

Mr. Cowett, when engaged as Superintendent this spring, went to work with a will, and, supplied with assistance by the church authorities, has made quite a change in the lots and grounds. A large number of the lots have been levelled and sodded, and this work alone has made a large improvement. He is still engaged in sodding the lots, and will soon have forty-three more neatly covered.

THE WALKS.

The walks through the cemetery have also been cleaned up and kept in good order. One walk, near the entrance gate, has been extended further to the south, and another further on has also been extended in the same direction. This was necessitated by lots being taken up, and, as it increases the size of the portion cleared and laid out, it assists the other work in enhancing the appearance of the cemetery.

THE MAIN SQUARE.

At the main square, in the centre of the cemetery, a large wooden crucifix was erected last fall. At the foot of this cross a diamond flower bed was prepared this spring and in it now bright flowers are growing. The corners of this square are being sodded, and it is intended to plant shade trees on the corners and to place seats under the shade thus formed. The square looks neat and pretty now, and when the work is completed it will be beautiful.

LEVELLING THE GROUNDS.

Another piece of work which has improved the cemetery is the levelling of places that were a little high and the filling in of the lower places. The earth removed from the walks, and from the lots when they were being prepared for sod, has been utilized in filling low places.

FLORAL DECORATION.

The owners of lots in the cemetery have, the Superintendent informs us, taken a deep interest this year in keeping fresh flowers on the graves of departed friends, and on the occasion of our visit many of the lots looked very pretty, indeed.

NEW MONUMENTS.

Two handsome monuments have been placed in this cemetery this year. One was erected by Mr. James McNamara on the grave of his father, Mr. Patrick McNamara. It was purchased from Mr. James Byrne, and is a square monument of blue stone. A similar monument, though a little smaller, has been placed on the grave of the wife of Mr. Samuel Anglesyc, also by Mr. Byrne, and these stones are also of advantage to the general appearance of the cemetery. A third monument, which has been ordered by Mr. M. O'Brien, is to be erected in the cemetery this week.

ENLARGING THE CEMETERY.

It is intended to lay out and grade a number of new lots in the southern and western portions of the cemetery this year.

A NEAT CEMETERY.

A neat necropolis, sylvan beauty and floral fragrance soften the pangs of parting on entering a burial place, and a tastily kept and ornamented cemetery shows a respect for the dead that is worthy of commendation. The church authorities deserve credit for their efforts in beautifying this cemetery, and the Superintendent should receive his meed of praise for the manner in which he has carried out his instructions.

Personal.

The many friends in this neighborhood of the Misses Rogers, who recently left Peterborough for Australia, will be pleased to learn that news was to-day received of their safe arrival in that country after a voyage of four weeks, all but two days, from San Francisco. Advices from Australia, via Great Britain dated 10th June, and via San Francisco dated 18th June, both reached here this morning. As some interested may be unacquainted with the postal arrangements for that distant part of the world, we may say that the New Zealand and Australian mails close in San Francisco on 2nd August next, and every four weeks thereafter.

Mr. R. L. Benson, son of the late Thomas Benson, the first Mayor of Peterborough and brother of Judge Benson of Port Hope, is in town visiting Mr. J. H. Barber, chief engineer of construction of the Ontario and Quebec Railway. Mr. R. L. Benson is an old Peterborough school-boy; he practiced law in Lindsay for a while, and was for a number of years in the Sheriff's office in Cobourg, but retired with Sheriff Waddell.

Mr. J. Frith Jeffers has been appointed Inspector of the Canada Life Insurance Company for Eastern Ontario. We are pleased to learn that Mr Jeffers has received this appointment and that he will remain a citizen of Peterborough.

Mr. E. J. Sailsbury has been appointed express agent on the Ontario & Quebec Railway at Montreal. There a large number of applications for the situation. We extend congratulations to Mr. Sailsbury, but regret that his appointment necessitated his removal from town.

Mr. R. J. Sailsbury has arrived in town and has succeeded his brother in charge of the business of Messrs. Sailsbury & Co. At a meeting of the Silver Star Base Ball Club held on Monday night, he was elected Vice President, a position formerly occupied by Mr. Ed. J. Sailsbury.

AN UNFAIR CONTEST.

According to our constitution the election that is now pending in Muskoka should be for the purpose of a free and fair choice of their representative in the Provincial Legislature by the voters of that district. According to our constitution, Mr. Mowat and his colleagues being entrusted with the administration of the Province, are bound by their duty to see that such a fair election is carried out. They have certain powers entrusting to them for that purpose, but they dishonestly use them to procure the election of a man chosen by themselves and not by the majority of the electors.

The hurrying out of the writ immediately after the vacancy was declared, because they hoped thus to gain an advantage over their opponents, who have not the assistance of standing official electioneerers, was but a small matter, (most of their actions are small) but contrasted with their long postponement in other cases when they wanted time to make preparations, it showed their animus.

A more important and more corrupt breach of their trust is their deliberate arrangements for bribing the voters with moneys taken from the Provincial treasury, that is from Conservatives as well as Reformers. The whole of the constituency is now swarming with road inspectors, bridge-builders and so forth, many of whom have been purchased themselves, and all of whom are now busy hiring voters and votes. Preparation was expressly made for this corruption by the appropriation of an unusually large sum this year, avowedly for colonization roads, but really for corrupting the constituency, and this bribery fund was kept ready for use when wanted, which is now that the canvass is proceeding. This is no new device, for since Mr. Mowat has been in power there has been a small sum expended under the head of "colonization works" every year when no election took place, and a large sum every year when there was an election. In this county (as in many others) we need not explain how this bribery fund is used, for every one of our readers knows that it is used with impudent effrontery, with hardly a pretence of concealment, for the purpose of securing votes. And it must be remembered that Mr. Mowat and his colleagues make it impossible to expose authoritatively the details of this misappropriation of trust funds, by disobeying year after year the orders of the House to bring down returns of this expenditure.

But in this election they are using a new trick which is perhaps even more disgraceful and cowardly than corrupting the electors by means of embezzled money. By the most shameless legislation at the very end of last session, they gave to their chosen tools, the deputy returning officers, the right to decide who are to be the electors, in other words to decide who is to be elected as far as the unorganized districts are concerned. By this iniquitous measure they enacted :—

XIX.—(1) Where there is no voters' list, the deputy returning officer shall not receive or enter the vote of any person who, to the knowledge of such deputy returning officer, is not entitled to vote.

How this power to reject or accept votes at the pleasure of the deputy returning officer is to be used we have been taught by past experience. In Muskoka and Algoma, the tools of the Mowat administration knew that conservative electors had not votes and knew that Reform elector had votes, when the qualification was the same. The guilt of one of the scoundrels employed by Mr. Mowat and his colleagues to disfranchise conservatives was established in the law courts and he suffered his deserved penalty. Others of these corrupt tools would have shared the same fate had not Mr. Mowat and his purchased majority snatched them from the hands of the law and shielded them from the consequences of robbing men of their franchise because they were conservatives. To save trouble in future they have legislated the deputy returning officers into the position of sole electors for the unorganized districts, for no man can vote there without their consent.

There are the circumstances under which alone a corrupt, tricky and cowardly administration ventures to face the electors of Muskoka.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

EXHAUSTED REFORMERS.

There is no reactionary like the exhausted Reformer. For the osthodox Grits the clock stopped at "Rep. by Pop." Here their wicked adversary has the advantage.—The Week (Indep.)

CORRUPTION EXCUSED.

Even Mr. Dill himself, who will owe one-half his vote to patronage, admits there is room for censuring the Government's manipulation of road money, and stated at the nomination that the Government carried on these reprehensible methods because of ignorance of the true state of affairs. A pretty excuse !—Muskoka Herald.

FOR DISRUPTION.

After years of uncessing, tireless effort to array province against province, to create discontent, to incite to rebellion, the Globe now pretends to regret that anywhere in the Dominion there should be the least feeling against Confederation. It has prostituted its energies and abilities to stir up such a feeling, preferring rather that the union should break in pieces than that the credit of building it up strong and prosperous should go to the Conservative party.—Winnipeg Times.

DISAPPOINTED FISHERMEN.

The prosecution in the commission went out of the way in summoning two members of the Dominion Government. The questions asked them were merely fishing ones, which elicited nothing. No ground was disclosed for subpœnaing the ministers ; without some such ground regard for their office and their trust ought to have left them alone.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

A DIRECT REBUFF.

This is the worst and most direct rebuff from his followers that Mr. Blake has yet received. Hitherto he has been attended with reasonable success in keeping the party well in hand ; his devious ways and erratic flashes of opacity have puzzled his followers at times, but they continued fairly obedient. But the adjournment of the West Ontario convention without making the desired nomination is an act of open revolt against the leader.—Winnipeg Times.

TO MAKE POLITICAL CAPITAL.

Opinions are divided as to the wisdom of the step taken by the Ontario Government in appointing a royal commission to investigate the the charges of bribery and conspiracy made against certain persons now under indictment in the courts. The object is clearly to make political capital. It would have been better if the subject had been left for the courts to deal with. * * * There is a great deal of force in the objection taken to the accused persons being put on trial before two tribunals. To compel them to testify now would be to compel them to disclose the defence upon which they intend to rely when they are brought before the courts. This would be manifestly unjust.—Toronto Telegram. (Indep.)

REFORM TACTICS.

The position on which Lord Salisbury has fallen back in his resistance to the Franchise Bill seems to be in itself not only strategically strong but politically sound. Taking up the amendment brought forward by Mr. Albert Grey in the Commons he demands that the Franchise Bill, instead of being passed by itself shall be accompanied by the Redistribution Bill, so that the scheme of Reform can be considered as a whole. In this he has reason on his side. * * * Lord Salisbury is right in refusing to consent to the extension of the franchise until the whole plan is before him.—The Week (Indep.)

DICTATOR BLAKE.

WE republish from that staunch Reform journal the Whitby Chronicle the letter written by the Hon. Edward Blake in furtherance of the plot between him and Mr. Mowat to purchase a seat for Mr. Edgar. It will be seen that the Reform leader admits that Mr. Wheler had been given "an office of emolument," thereby directly contradicting the falsehood of the Globe in denying it :—

Toronto, July 2nd, 1884.

MY DEAR SIR :—I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of 30th June.

The vacancy in West Ontario has been occasioned by the acceptance by Mr. Wheler of an office of emolument which renders it necessary for him to resign his seat. It will be for the Reformers of West Ontario to choose the candidate. I have no right to dictate to them and my only anxiety is that the best choice may be made in the interest of the whole Liberal party of Canada. To those who have done me the honor of consulting me on the subject I have replied that I have no hesitation in saying that they can render to the party and its unworthy standard bearer, great and signal service by electing to Parliament Mr. J. D. Edgar, of whose services we are urgently in need during the period between this time and the next election, in order to complete the party organization and parliamentary arrangements which are essential to a vigorous and I hope successful struggle at the polls.

Trusting that this suggestion will be received in the spirit in which it is made, and wish every good wish for the cause and yourself personally.

I am faithfully yours,
EDWARD BLAKE.

JOSEPH GOULD, Esq., Uxbridge.

CRIMINATING FIGURES.

The Grits claim the suffrages of the electors on the grounds of liberal expenditures on colonization roads. But why do they make these expenditures? To corrupt the electorate, as the following figures show. We give the expenditures on colonization roads since 1872, the figures for the last four years including the amounts expended over and above the Estimates, which over-expenditures aggregated nearly $36,000 for the four years in question :—

|---|---|
| 1872 | $ 75,699 |
| 1873 | 145,950 |
| 1874 | 90,762 |
| 1875 | 103,511 |
| 1876 | 85,931 |
| 1877 | 77,300 |
| 1878 | 85,612 |
| 1879 | 114,564 |
| 1880 | 102,195 |
| 1881 | 101,957 |
| 1882 | 120,989 |
| 1883 | 139,728 |

We direct attention to the amounts expended in the years 1873, 1875, 1879, 1882 and 1883, years of general elections or bye-elections in the Free Grant Districts. The figures are eloquent, and speak of corruption in comparison with which the bribery charged against the Conservative party is purity itself.—Muskoka Herald.

AFTER YEARS of patient research among the flora of his native land, Dr. Van Buren discovered a little plant that is fast making his name famous on both sides of the Atlantic. From its health-giving sap he has given to the world a preparation now known as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure, which promptly relieves and permanently cures all kidney diseases.

IT ISN'T Extravagant to claim that Zopesa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

TELEGRAPH UNION.

The Rivals of the Western Union Consolidated.

The New York correspondent of the Mail, writing under date July 18th, says :—"The alliance between the Baltimore and Ohio, the Postal, and the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Cumpanies has been completed and the details were determined on yesterday. The agreement will take effect on July 31, and will practically consolidate the three rivals of the Western Union into one great enterprise. Under the contract a pooling arrangement is made to last 25 years, each company to receive an equal percentage of the earnings. The individual organization of each company will be maintained, but the offices and working wires are to be consolidated, and the management to be in the hands of an Executive Committee of the three companies. John W. Mackay, Robt. Garrett, James Gordon Bennett and other capitalists will be on the Joint Executive Board ; D. H. Bates, President of the B. & O. Company, will be the executive manager, and G. S. Mott, of the Bankers' and Merchants', the general manager. This union

BRINGS UNDER ONE CONTROL

16,000 miles of pole line, and 120,000 miles of wire, connecting all the principal cities east of the Missouri river and south as far as Galveston. The mileage of wire is about one-third that of the Western Union, omitting railroad wires, but this one-third reaches about 80 per cent. of the entire paying telegraph business of the country. There will be five lines between New York and Chicago, having in the aggregate 50 wires, including the telegraph lines of the West Shore and Nickel Plate railroad. It is said that provision has been made by each company to raise all of the money required to finish their several extensons. The actual cash cost of the property embraced in the consolidated system is about $18,000,000.

How to Make Candy.

This book gives full directions for making all kinds of plain and fancy candy. The receipts for making caramels, chocolate drops, French mixed and all other kinds of candies contained in this book are the same as used by the leading city confectioners. Any one can have these candies at home at less than one third the usual cost. Sent post paid for 50 cents (no stamps taken). Address, ROCHESTER PUBLISHING Co., 32, 33 & 33½ Osburn Block, Rochester, N.Y.

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.

If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Swayne's ointment is a pleasant cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt-Rheum, Scald-Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all scaly, crusty skin diseases. Box, by mail, 50 cts.; 4 for $1.25. Address, Dr. Swayne & Son., Phila., Pa. To most children the bare suggestion of a dose of castor oil is nauseating. Why not then, when physic is necessary for the little ones, use Ayer's Cathartic Pills? They combine every essential and valuable principle of a cathartic medicine, and being sugar coated are easily taken.

OH ! how tired and weak I feel I dont believe I will ever get through the Spring house-cleaning ? Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

AS HAPPY AS A KING.

A Tramp's Off-hand Replies to a Catechism of Pointed Questions.

A browsy-headed, elderly-looking, sun-browned man was lying sleeping under a tree by the roadside on a Pennsylvania highway. Near him was his black slouch hat, a heavy cane, and his greasy-looking black knapsack. He was a tramp.

"Bang" went a gun, and a pigeon dropped at a hunter's feet. The tramp was awakened by the noise.

"Beg pardon for disturbing you," said the gunner.

"No matter; no matter I'm through," said the tramp, sitting up.

The gunner put his pigeon in his game bag, sat on a rock, and the following talk took place:

"On a tramp?"
"Yes."
"How long?"
"Ten years or more."
"How's that?"
"Because I don't like to work."
"Do without work!"
"Certainly."
"How do you get food?"
"Beg it."
"From women?"
"Always from men."
"Why not women?"
"They frighten too easily."
"Do men ever refuse?"
"Very seldom."
"Do you ever ask for money?"
"Never."
"Ever get any?"
"Sometimes, when I ask men for bread."
"How's that?"
"Men melt easy."
"Men not as close as women?"
"Not when I touch 'em."
"Touch 'em where?"
"Their hearts, by asking for bread."
"That's a scheme, is it?"
"A successful racket."
"Do you drink?"
"All tramps do—when they can."
"When?"
"Only at night."
"Why at night?"
"Nothing else to do."
"Why not drink in the day?"
"It don't pay."
"How's that?"
"Strong breath kills the business."
"Explain?"
"No one gives to a man who smells of rum."
"That's why you drink at night?"
"Yes; it wears off by morning."
"Clothes?"
"They're easier getting than grub."
"What's the hardest to get?"
"Boots to fit."
"The easiest?"
"Old hats."
"What is the best way to win women?"
"Beg for soap."
"How's that?"
"They'll think you're poor, but clean."
"Catches them?"
"Every time."
"Do you sleep in barns?"
"Never."
"Why?"
"If one burns you're blamed for it."
"Where do you sleep?"
"Near iron furnaces in winter, woods in summer."
"Do you bathe?"
"Always—in summer."
"In winter?"
"Skip that."
"Are trams happy?"
"Yes, as the world goes."
"Contented?"
"Certainly not."
"Are you well informed?"
"Only in matters that concern tramps."
"That is—"
"Crime, tramp laws, and arrests."
"Do you have any fun?"
"Once or twice a month."
"How?"
"There's a lot o' German tramps get money from home regularly."
"Do they spend it?"
"To the bottom copppr."
"Many of that kind?"
"Quite some."
"Do you follow them up?"
"Every successful tramp does."
"Have a good time?"
"Best that money can buy."
"Feast, then fast?"
"Feast then beg."
"Do you ever rob?"
"None but a fool will steal."
"How so?"
"Chances all against a thief. You'll go to jail, sure."
"And then?"
"Some one else will have a good time with our German friends who get money from home."
"How many such do you know?"
"Five solid young fellows, who hear from home monthly. They were young deserters."
"What do you most hate?"
"Regular thieves."
"Why?"
"We get blamed for what they do."
"Would you wear new shoes?"
"Never."
"New clothes?"
"No, sir, even if I got 'em honest."
"New hat?"
"No."
"Why not?"
"I'd be arrested for a thief the first store robbed."
"What does a tramp most want?"
"To be left alone."
"Do you consider that the world owes you a living?"
"Oh, no."
"Why not?"
"Wouldn't be any fun getting it."
"How do you consider it?"
"The world owes no man anything, but the smartest gets the most the easiest."
"Suppose the world did owe each man a living?"
"Why, then, we'd have ten times more tramps.'
"Bad for you?"
"I should smile."
"Any body worse off than tramps?"
"Plenty."
"Who?"
"American slaves. Men who work for the pittance a foreign pauper gets."
"Is that worse than begging?"
"Yes. I'd rather be a free beggar than a hypocrite and a fool."
"Why a hypocrite?"
"Because I'd know it wasn't right to work for seventy-five cents a day, and I'd be a coward to do it, also a hypocrite and fool."
"Can't deceive yourself?"
"You're shouting."
"What becomes of tramps?"
"They get old if they're not killed."
"Never die?"
"Not natural deaths."
"How is that?"
"A healthy tramp's dirty and contracts no disease Besides, he's no wear and tear of brain."
"Filth a prevention of disease?"
"Certainly. Did you ever see a dirty sick man."
"Are they scarce?"
"As dead mules."
"How are tramps made?"
"In two ways."
"First?"
"The American becomes a tramp first generally through misfortune. It is never deliberate."
"And then?"
"In a few years he gets so used to it that he wouldn't do without it."
"The second way?"
"Disappointed foreigners. They get to America thinking they'll find gold in the street. They slip up, and then drift about the country with the crows."
"What gives them their original idea?"
"When at home they saw some honest German-Americans who left the vaterland poor, worked hard in America, saved money, and then visited their old homes like rich men."
"That stirred up those at home?"
"Certainly! The visitors spent money freely, and made the boys at home believe America was flooded with gold. The boys came to America, and found it tough and rough, and they got left."
"What of your future?"
"I'll live long on the tramp, and finally die happy."
"And then?"
"Why, I'll be a volunteer for some dissecting table."
"For science?"
"Yes, I'll be of some service, anyhow."
"You said tramps never die."
"So I did. I meant they never died young. Generally they are killed on the railroad, or smothered in iron furnaces, or near limekilns."
"Do tramps lie?"
"Do marines, or Jews, or showmen, or newspapers?"
"Do you pray?"
"As much as any other except preachers."
"What do you pray for?"
"For gold by the waggon load, for diamonds big as houses, for as many green backs as we could tread down in a hay waggon."
"Never pray for better things?"
"What's the use?"
"Always for big game?"
"Certainly; it don't cost any more."
"And results?"
"About the same."
"Do you believe in prayer?"
"Tramps don't, of course not; I never heard of one of their prayers being answered."
"Did you ever read about tramps getting fortunes left to them?"
"Yes, but that don't count. They never pan out."
"Lies?"
"Every time."
"Nothing to do with prayer?"
"Not a bit."
"Do you ever go to church?"
"Look at my wardrobe."
"Did you ever hear a sermon?"
"Yes, in jail, five years ago."
"Do you any good?"
"Well I'm a tramp yet, but am out of jail."
"Do you smoke?"
"Yes, when I get any thing to smoke."
"Cigar?"
"Why, thanks, certinly."
The browsy-headed, cool-as-a-cucumber tramp lit his cigar and enjoyed it with all the ease and contentment of a millionaire, and the last the hunter saw of him as he turned for the last time was the tramp in a wreath of smoke curling above his head, happy as a king.

THE GREELY EXPEDIPION.

Stories of Suffering—How the Artist Rice Lost His Life.

St. John's, Nfld., July 18.—Sergeant Long, of the Greely party, says he and Brainerd were the first to hear the whistles of the rescuing steamers. They helped each other crawl out of the tent. When Long got clear of the entanglement of the tent, which had been swept to the ground, he rose with great difficulty and succeeded in clambering up to a rock that gave the most extensive view in that neighborhood. Long recognized the approach of the rescuers. He came down, went toward the camp, raised the flag-pole and flag, which had been blown down during the gale and held it for about two minutes, until his strength gave out and it was blown once more to the ground. He than advanced tottering in the direction of the little steamer, and in a few minutes the hand of Capt. Ash had grasped his. Maurice Connell, who is still excessively weak, stated that for some days after his rescue he had no recollection of any thing that occurred. He did not hear the awakening scream of the whistle. When his comrades shook him up from his prostrate position in camp and told him that succor was at hand, he wildly exclaimed, "For God's sake let me die in peace." A teaspoonful of brandy called back the fleeting life-spark, for Connell could not have survived more than a few hours. He was by far the weakest of the seven men, and the strongest must have succumbed within forty-eight hours. The story told by Connell from his recollection of their starving experience is simply heartrending; how they burned the hair off their sealskin coats and cut them into strips, boiled them into a stew and ate voraciously of them, till their stomachs rebelled and nausea and weakness ensued. In several cases nature gave no call for twelve, fifteen and even eighteen days, and then a bloody hemorrhage and consequent weakness ensued, prostrating the victims for several days. The difficulty of keeping heat in the body was very great. The rule of the camp was to permit no one to sleep longer than two hours. He was awakened roughly and called upon to shake himself, beat his hands and pound his feet until he restored circulation. This was found absolutely necessary to prevent torpor and possible death. The survivors are all doing well, but are still weak from nervous prostration. Sergt. Frederick relates mournfully the tragic story of the sad death on the snow-covered ground of G. Rice, the artist of the expedition. Rice and Frederick volunteered to leave the camp and proceed twenty-five miles for meat cached near Cape Isabella. They had a sled, a rifle and a hatchet and provisions for five days. They travelled three days, but failed to find the cache. On the way towards the camp Rice became weak, and finally gave up. He was interred in an ice grave by his companion. Frederick camped that night under the fragment of the boat, and next day re-visited his companion to pay the last tribute to his remains. Frederick retained sufficient strength to drag back the sled to camp where he encountered more woe in the shape of the death of Lieut. Lockwood and another of the party. The cached meat Frederick and Rice was in search of was brought by them on April 6th from Cape Isabella, and abandoned next day in order to drag Ellison, one of their party, who had been frozen, into camp.

THE DEAD AND DYING.

Washington, July 18.—Secretary Chandler received a despatch from Commander Schley this afternoon, stating that iron caskets for the dead will be delivered July 25th. As soon as the remains are transferred to them the ships will sail for New York. The week of rest for officers and men after the incessant labour and peril of the past sixty days is most grateful to them. In respect to the memory of the dead on board the flags of the ships will fly at half mast during their stay at St. John's. The survivors will probably be brought to Portland, Me., where they can remain until better prepared to stand the change of climate.

A WIDOW'S SORROW.

Marysville, Mo., July 18.—Mrs. L. Pavey, wife of Dr. Pavey, of the Greely expedition, was much overcome by the news of her husband's death, but is more composed to-day. She has resided here with her uncle for the past eight months and has taught a select school here for young ladies.

WORK FOR AUGUST.

Act.
Think.
Consult.
Experiment.
Make repairs.
Carry a note book.
Watch the market.
Favor the seed-corn hills.
Manure the back fields.
Keep up the flow of milk.
Make repairs in spare hours.
Superior work pays us the best.
Above all things avoid foul seed.
Gas lime should not be used fresh.
Idle land is the weeds' opportunity.
Fowls profit by a run in the stubble.
Wheat after oats is a faulty practice.
Whitewash will cleanse and sweeten.
August pigs make holiday small pork.
Do not let your insurance policy expire.
The damage by rats exceed that by fire.
Sow white turnip seed for fine fall fodder.
Wash the horse's feet and legs every night.
Success is largely a matter of small details.
Roll the ground before and not after seeding.
Good seed and good soil is a good beginning.
Farm animals well summered are half wintered.
Help out the dried up pastures with green fodder.
Thinning the root crops means more tons to the acre.
Clean, oil, and store all the implements not in use.
Get out the year's supply of muck while the beds are dry.
Build temporary pasture shelter in airy parts of the fields.
Weeds when they go to seed curse the land that grew them.
The general purpose animal is superior only in its versatility.
Let the bumble bees live and thus increase the yield of clover seed.
A drain to be a profitable investment must be a permanent improvement.
Fall fallowing cleans the land and brings it into fine condition for spring crops.
Neglected fence rows are like a leaden weight upon the neck of clean field culture.
A farmer's bank account may grow at the expense of his manure heap and grain crops.
A clean, cool, ventilated stable, free from flies, is a suitable lodging for the tired work horse.
The possibilities of a farm are measured by the quantity and quality of brains which run it.
Amid all the toil of midsummer, do not forget to do a little careful work for the coming county fair.
Superior pork made from freshly fallen wormy apples is very cleansing to an insect-infested orchard.
A root crop is very humble, but as a foundation for a judicious rotation it will support the symmetrical superstructure of profitable mixed farming.—American Agriculturist.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.

Decide whether to dispose of surplus and inferior fruit, by making it into vinegar or by drying or evaporating it. Trees will be broken by careless pickers; saw off all injured limbs. The Appleworm may be diminished by picking up and destroying fallen fruit, or allowing the pigs to do it. Bands of carpet, bagging, or other fabrics, fastened around the trunks of apple trees with a single long tack, will catch many Apple-worms. Examine weekly and kill. If the trees set last spring suffer from drought, mulch them, or keep the soil loose. The Fall Web-worm spins its nest in summer also. At its first appearance, cut away the twig to which the nest is attached, and crush the worms. Young trees may have their shape controlled by pinching the end of shoots that grow too vigorously. When the Blackberry and Raspberry crops are off, cut away the canes that have borne fruit. The new stems of Blackberries should be stopped when five feet high, those of Raspberries at three or four feet. Keep strawberry beds free of weeds. Plant new beds with plants rooted in pots. Whitish spots on the underside of grape leaves are mildew. Dust sulphur, with a sulphur-bellows at once. Large caterpillars and beetles must be handpicked. Continue to pinch caterals.—American Agriculturist.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

LOST AN ARM.

Terrible Accident at a Saw Mill—Caught in a Belt.

Daniel McCabe, a boy about thirteen years of age, son of Mr. James McCabe, who resides on Lake street, Ashburnham, met with a terrible accident in Mr. Hazlitt's saw mill at about nine o'clock this morning, through which he was deprived of one arm.

While walking under the mill, among shafting, he felt his hat move, and raised his left hand to hold it. As he did so his arm got caught in a belt and he was drawn to a rapidly revolving shaft. Exactly what followed is not known, but the lad must have been swung over the shaft. His arm was torn off at the elbow, exposing the remaining portion of the humerus.

No one saw the accident. One man was working not far from him, but the noise caused by the machinery is great, and he heard no unusual sound. Mr. Wm. Davidson, coming down to that part of the mill, found the boy leaning against a post with his mutilated arm. Mr. Davidson called Mr. Hazlitt and they removed the sufferer to his home, at the same time sending for Dr. Halliday.

It was found necessary to amputate the arm close to the shoulder. The operation was performed by Dr. Halliday, Dr. Bell and Dr. O'Shea. The boy bore the operation well, and when last heard from was as well as could be expected.

A Fearful Way.

Alice —— wrote a letter yesterday to the Chairman of the Foresters' Picnic Committee, stating that she is now twenty-two years of age, and alas! not engaged, and quotes the poet's complaint:—

"Are all thy shafts, fair Cupid, spent?
Not one for beauty or virtue lent?
The days of love are past, 'tis plain,
Since girls for husbands sigh in vain."

The Chairman not being a matrimonial agent replied to that effect, and promised a good opportunity of securing a husband by attending the picnic to Orillia on the 24th July. Return fare, $1.

The Ross-Wigg Case.

We have already given, from the Oswego Palladium, the account of the amicable arrangement of the Ross-Wigg case. The Oswego Times and Express, which has now come to hand, gives much the same account, one paragraph being as follows:—

"Mr. Scott, who has a power of attorney from Mr. James G. Ross, of Quebec, has been in the city and at once opened negotiations looking to a settlement of the unfortunate controversy between Messrs. Ross and Wigg. Without going into details it is enough to say that Mr. Ross is satisfied from an inspection of the books that Mr. S. P. Wigg had no intention of committing a fraud and although he may have shown bad judgment in some particulars it was without intent to wrong any one."

It will be satisfactory to the friends of Mr. Wigg to learn that he is thus completely exonerated from any charge of improper conduct. H1m of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be addnced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

St. Andrew's Picnic.

The annual excursion of St. Andrew's Sunday School was held on Tuesday. At 11 o'clock about 250 persons left the O. & Q. station in the news cars belonging to that line and soon arrived in the village of Norwood. The picnic was held in Mr. P. M. Grover's woods. This grove is beautifully adapted for such events. It is well shaded by large trees and is free from underbrush. The people of Norwood, including others besides the members of the Presbyterian church, had made ample preparations for the convenience of the pic-nickers. Tables, swings, &c., had been prepared, hot and cold water was provided, and free 'buses and carriages conveyed the excursionists and their baskets to the grove. Races were got up for the children, for which prizes were offered. No accident or drawback occurred, and the excursion was thoroughly enjoyed. The party returned home about eight o'clock.

The Electric Light.

A deputation from the city of St. Catharines, consisting of Messrs. H. G. Hunt, George C. Carlisle and Joseph Shicklona, accompanied by Mr. W. H. Bolsfeuillet, agent of the Royal Electric Company, arrived in Peterborough on Tuesday. The deputation came for the purpose of witnessing how the electric light worked in this town. The second dynamo machine was started and there were forty-two lights burning. The members of the deputation visited the station, where the machines are situated, and also saw the lights throughout the town. The expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the exhibition and convinced that this plan of illuminating was a success. They were also not a little surprised with the appearance of the town itself and gave expression to their views in this regard quite freely, as it was much more lively, and had the appearance of being more progressive than they had expected. Now that the second machine has been started, further orders for lights will be solicited. Another light will be placed at the Midland station, and two more have been ordered for the Oriental Hotel.

The woman shrieked for help, but no one came. Foley walked from the house and sauntered away. He called at the house last evening and asked to be allowed to remain. He was given a separate bed, but was evidently not satisfied with his reception.

Agricultural Activity in the North-West.

A. McKay, a prominent farmer living near Pilot Mound, who was in Winnipeg lately, gives a promising account of that section of the country. Although only a year has elapsed since he settled he has already nearly two hundred acres in crop and another hundred broken. He says the farmers have gone heavily into breaking new land this year, although the work has been impeded by dry weather. The reason of this activity is that the farmers confidently expect that by next season, they will have railroad communication either by the extension of the C. P. R. or the St. P. M. & M. Ry. The crops at present are very promising and with favorable weather until harvest, will doubtless be very heavy, although he says that the impression abroad is that they look better then they really are.—Winnipeg Times.

Daily Evening Review

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1884.

TRICK UPON TRICK.

EVEN the pretended reason for Mr. Lyon's resignation, besides his suppression of the truth contains a direct falsehood. He says he resigns because no polls were held at Rainy River, Fort Frances and Algoma Mills. This is not the fact, for at one of these places a poll was taken by the deputy returning officer, who had not been entrusted with the plot to disfranchise the locality by sending no ballot box or ballot papers. The vote, as was known would be the case when the fraudulent disfranchisement was planned, was strongly conservative, so the return was suppressed by the members of the Mowat Administration and their accomplice, the returning officer selected by them to do such dirty work.

THE ALGOMA FRAUD.

One of the rogues who plotted to disfranchise the Conservatives of Algoma has "thrown up the sponge" and confessed by his acts his fraudulent position. Mr. Lyon, who pretended to represent Algoma during the last session of the Provincial Legislature has sent in his resignation. His alleged reason is the failure of open polls at Rainy River, Fort Frances and Algoma Mills, by which roguery the member the Mowat Administration plotted with their tools to rob the conservative electors of those localities of their votes. But this pretence is too glaring, the true reason being no doubt that given in the Toronto Telegram that Mr. Lyon's resignation is for the purpose of avoiding disqualification, which he knows would be his fate. It is true that legally he could not thus shield himself, for the Election Court would proceed to try him and 65 disqualify him, but he has the example of Informer Dowling to reassure him. No doubt he feels confident that as in the Renfrew case, his allies in this fraud, Messrs. Mowat & Co., will procure legislation to annul the decision of the judges.

And there is a subsidiary reason why Mr. Lyon should resign. The members of the Mowat administration are as anxious as Mr. Lyon to avoid and investigation. Enough has already been divulged by their own telegrams to and from their tools, and by the conviction of their accomplice Apjohn, to show how deeply they were implicated in these frauds. By hiding their telegrams, by refusing returns ordered by the House, by obstructing the Public Accounts committee and by their plot to procure bribery they have made strenuous efforts to burke enquiry, and now by the resignation of Mr. Lyon they are making a last desperate attempt to suppress any enquiry into misdeeds in which they were accomplices.

In fact this resignation goes to show that Mr. Lyon knows that he fraudulently sat in the House for a session for a seat which was not legally his, and it also shows that the Mowat Administration dares not let in the light upon its deeds of darkness in Algoma.

This bogus resignation to avoid being kicked out should not be allowed to succeed. The proceedings should be pressed till Mr. Lyon is turned out of his usurped place and disqualified, and till the baseness of his leaders in fraudulently depriving opponents of their votes is thoroughly exposed.

THE BOUNDARY AWARD.

Sir John Macdonald some years ago refused to accept or ratify the award made by the arbitrators appointed to determine the true boundary of Ontario, on the ground that they had merely run a conventional line, in place of ascertaining the true boundary. For taking this position he was bitterly assailed in the choicest vituperative language of the Globe and the lesser organs scattered throughout the country. The non-ratification of the award was made a rallying war-cry for more than one election and Ontario Liberals polled their votes to the tune of

"The traitor's hand is on my throat Ontario! Ontario!"

and

"We'll hang John A. on a sour apple tree."

His position was systematically misrepresented. His opponents said that he, in obedience to the dictation of Blake, had refused to ratify the award in order to rob Ontario of a vast tract of fertile land. As a matter of fact he never denied that the disputed territory might not belong to Ontario, but merely asserted that the conventional boundary was not the true one and that it consequently could not be made legal by any number of ratifications. The Conservatives of Ontario went a step farther, and upheld the non-ratification of the award, on the ground that it did not give to Ontario the territory to which she was entitled. And now, after years of wordy warfare, abuse, and mutual recriminations, the Privy Council, by deciding that the award is not valid, has vindicated Sir John's position, and relieved Mr. Meredith of the charge of being a traitor to his province.

It is not known how the Globe will accept the decision. It was too busy yesterday in writing up the commissions, sitting in Toronto and this city, to pay any attention to the matter. Perhaps it will attempt to set the Privy Council right in its law, as it did with the Supreme Court a few years ago. What it ought to do is plain enough. The plainest dictates of conscience would necessitate an apology being made to both Mr. Meredith and Sir John A. Macdonald for all the outrageous statements it has made about them. Partisan journals are, however, proverbially conscienceless, and after wriggling out of this difficulty, the Globe will go on in its old method of making political capital by all sorts of disreputable means.—Montreal Star (Independent.)

FOREST PRESERVATION.

AMONG other indications of the increasing interest taken in the subject of the conservation and reproduction of forests is the action that is being taken by the Forestry Association and the Legislature of the State of Ohio, in regard to the establishment of Forestal Experiment Stations. That this is not an unnecessary step is proved by the fact that Germany, the foremost country in the science of forestry, is also adopting these small experimental stations, not being yet satisfied that it has as full a knowledge of the subject as is desirable.

In Canada the necessity for some such step is at least equally urgent, but we have to begin still further back. We should institute such schools of forestry as they have in Germany, France and other countries so that we may obtain a supply of skilled foresters and forestry officials. We should set aside tracts better adapted for forests than for agriculture, and should preserve them in perpetuity for that purpose, not destroying all this wealth at one blow, leaving, perhaps, but worthless land, and future generations in want of timber.

Forestal Experiment Stations will undoubtedly be useful in combination with these steps, but we have to begin much further back.

This is a matter which concerns the whole community and more especially the farmers, for stripping the country of forests means damage to their crops, as well as their having to suffer their share of the wasteful diminution of our resources in the near future.

First Canadian Printed Cottons.

Yesterday there were sent in from the works of the Magog, Textile and Print Company, Magog, several cases of the first printed calicoes ever produced in Canada, and samples of which have been shown us by Mr. J. K. Ward, one of the principal promoters of the enterprise. These samples have a perfect appearance, and appear to be quite as good as the imported article. Several of the goods—which were received from the works yesterday—were examined in the afternoon by Mr. A. F. Gault, of Gault Brothers & Co., Mr. Robertson, of Mackay Bros. Mr. Deschamps, of Leclaire & Co., and others, who pronounced them creditable. The company are manufacturing about one thousand patterns, principally staple patterns, and will not touch fancy patterns until the market for staples is supplied. It is understood the goods will be sold at prices which will shut out the same class of imported goods.

The Magog works were erected within the last year at a cost of $400,000 and are the only works of the kind in the Dominion. Among the active spirits in promoting them and among the largest shareholders were Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Thomas Keifer, Ottawa; Mr. Allan Gilmour, Mr. John G. Ross, Quebec; Mr. J. K. Ward and other men of enterprise. They are commencing under favorable auspices and we trust they will have an abundant measure of success.—Montreal Herald (Reform.)

Protection against Cholera in the States.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular to the officers of the Revenue marine service, requiring them, in view of the existence of cholera, yellow fever and plague in different countries to form of the vessels of the Revenue marine a national patrol on the coast of the United States. "You are directed," says the Secretary, to cruise actively with revenue steamers under your command upon outer lines of your cruising grounds, and to exercise especial vigilance in speaking all vessels arriving from foreign ports, directing your inquiries first as to the port from which the vessels hails, secondly as to the health of those on board at the time of departure, during the passage and at the time of hailing and should the information gained indicate a condition of contagion or infection in the vessel or crew or that the vessel has left a port at which contagious or infectious diseases were prevailing, her master will be directed to proceed for examination to the outer quarantine station provided for her port of destination.

The Porte and the Foreign Post Offices.

The Porte has sent a circular note to the Powers, notifying them of its assumption of the postal service. The note says the existence of foreign post offices in Turkey is an infringement of the sovereign rights of the Sultan, and the Porte insists upon the prepayment of letters with Ottoman stamps, and the Powers are invited to close their respective offices. It is rumored that the Porte on Aug. 1st will surround the foreign offices in Constantinople with gendarmes to prevent the posting of letters. The various Ambassadors in Turkey have asked their respective Governments for orders in view of such contingency, The Foreign Ambassadors have held an informal conference and agreed to act collectively in resisting the postal changes.

A New Science.

At the London health exhibition Francis Galton has established a laboratory for the "measurement of human faculty." Each visitor will leave a record of name, age, sex, occupation, place of birth, color of hair and eyes, height standing and sitting, weight, length of span of arms, strength of squeeze and pull, swiftness of direct blow, capacity of chest, acuteness of vision, conditions of color, sense and acuteness of hearing, and will take away a duplicate. Mr. Galton regards the art of measuring human faculties as the dawn of a new and interesting science.

AFTER YEARS of patient research among the flora of his native land, Dr. Van Buren discovered a little plant that is fast making his name famous on both sides of the Atlantic. From its health-giving sap he has given to the world a preparation now known as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure, which promptly relieves and permanently cures all kidney diseases.

To most children the bare suggestion of a dose of castor oil is nauseating. Why not then, when physic is necessary for the little ones, use Ayer's Cathartic Pills? They combine every essential and valuable principle of a cathartic medicine, and being sugar coated are easily taken.

PORT HOPE.

CAUGHT A DEER—Mayor Hugel and party returned home on Thusday have had a grand time out at Midland City. On Wednesday afternoon a small steam tug was chartered and they all went fishing. Our reporter did not get an exact account of the number of large fish that were caught, but their name was legion. In returning, great excitement was experienced. Some of the sharp eyes of the party discovered a deer swimming across Midland Bay. The little steamer gave chase, and her deership dodged around so that they could not capture it. The two small boats were then launched, His Worship manned one and Councillor Ward the other, and J. G. Williams commanded the steamer, a capture was finally made by Captain H. A. Ward. The struggling animal's feet were tied, placed on the steamer and is now an inhabitant of the deer park of H. M. Switzer, Midland City. More of our Port Hope sportsmen will be shortly making Midland City and vicinity a visit.—Guide.

COBOURG.

AN INTERESTING GROUP.—On Monday Mr. C. Lawes took a large photograph of a very interesting group, consisting of the progenitors of the numerous Eagleson family of this district. In the group were, in the order of their ages, William, John, James, David, Matthew, Eleanor, (Mrs. Creighton), Mary, (Mrs. Close, Harwood), and Robert, the entire family, who landed with their father and mother in Cobourg on the 31st May, 1832. When they arrived here fifty-two years ago Cobourg presented a far different appearance than it does to-day. The business portion of the town was small, and what are now thickly populated parts of it had only a few scattered residences. The family did not remain in the town but settled on a farm a little west of Coldsprings. To these eight members of the family have been born fifty-three children, forty of whom are living, and they have probably as many grand-children. We extend our congratulations to the group who had their photos taken on Monday last, and trust they will yet be spared for many years to come, in health and happiness.—Sentinel-Star.

MIDLAND.

HYMENEAL.—A very interesting and happy event occurred in town on Wednesday, July 9th, being the celebration, at the residence of the bride's father, John P. Weeks, Esq., of Miss Ina May Weeks to Rev. J. Washington Puffer, of Blairton. The ceremony was performed at 11.30 a.m. by Rev. Richard Strachan, assisted by Rev. Charles E. Perry, of Meaford. Miss Clara Weeks, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and the bridegroom was attended by Mr. J. Russell Chisholm, of Cherrywood. The bride looked very beautiful and was prettily attired in a dress of nun's veiling and satin trimmed with Satin lace. The bridesmaid wore a prune colored dress of the same material. The presents were numerous and valuable. After breakfast the happy couple started on a wedding tour by the 2.45 p.m. train, receiving most hearty congratulations and expressions of kind feelings from many of their friends who assembled at the railway station to see them off. They will visit the Thousand Islands and Ottawa. Mrs. Puffer carries to her new home the best wishes of a large number of our citizens.—Free Press.

LINDSAY.

A LOST PURSE.—Two years ago the wife of Michael Hickey of Downeyville lost a pocketbook containing over $250, while proceeding from her buggy in the Daly House yard to the sitting-room in the hotel. A well-to-do farmer from Mount Horeb saw Mrs. Hicked drop the pocketbook, and without being seen by her picked it up. A third party near by saw the pocketbook found and pocketed, and afterwards spoke to the finder about the ownership of the money and said that it should be given up to the owner. The loss of the purse and money was advertised in the county papers. The third party had in the meantime crossed the line and has been for the last two years been living in Michigan. A short time ago he returned to this country on a visit, and was surprised to find that the money lost by Mrs. Hickey had not been returned. He at once saw Mr. Hickey and laid before him the facts within his knowledge. The finder of the pocketbook was called upon, and to avoid a most damaging exposure gave his note for $200 in settlement of the matter, trusting to the leniency of Mr. Hickey not to prosecute. The names of the parties implicated are withheld as it is possible that the matter may yet come before the courts.—Post.

FENELON FALLS.

THE COBOCONK.—Mr. Joseph McArthur, our Reeve, has purchased the steamer Coboconk, and she will soon re-appear at this "port." At present she is lying in West Bay undergoing the operation of caulking, which will be completed as soon as possible, as there is a good deal of towing to be done. Before next season she will be thoroughly overhauled, repaired, painted, and qualified to carry passengers; and when the completion of the locks enlarges her sphere of action, she will no doubt be kept busy and pay well.

A STABBING AFFRAY.—On Saturday, July 12th, Patrick Barry and Archibald Campbell, two laboring men of this village, had a row about something while under the influence of whiskey, but did not fight, and on Monday were on such good terms that the former invited the latter to go to his house near Green & Ellis' mill. While there it is probable they had liquor for a quarrel arose between them, and they finally left the house for the avowed purpose of having a fight, during the progress of which Campbell drew a jack-knife from his pocket, opened it, and made three attempts to stab his opponent. The first and second strokes made two gashes like an X on Barry's breast below the heart, and the third ripped up his trouser leg but did not touch his flesh. Fortunately the strokes of the knife were both across the ribs, which prevented the blade from entering very far, but the cuts were so deep that Dr. Lowe found it necessary to stitch them up. Barrie boasts that notwithstanding his wounds he was able to thrash Campbell, whose black eye and cut lip showed that he had been very roughly handled.—Gazette.

The Trades Committee and the Franchise Bill.

LONDON, July 18.—The Trades Committee are making arrangements to have a procession to the number of 200,000 parade during the demonstration at Hyde park on Monday to awe the Lords into passing the Franchise Bill. The majority of the workshops in London will close and the procession will form on the Thames embankment and march six abreast to Hyde Park. Eight sections will represent the different trades and twelve sections political clubs. There will be speaking from seven platforms. Resolutions favoring the Franchise Bill will be announced simultaneously from the different stands by bugle calls, and it is expected they will be adopted simultaneously.

Sir Bartle Frere died poor, and his widow will receive a pension and apartments in Hampton Court.

W. J. Linton, the engraver, is living in London, and is busily engaged in writing a history of wood-engraving.

Several English life insurance companies charge twenty per cent. less for a total abstainer than for a moderate drinker.

The failure is announced of Mr. Alderman Hadley, who was a candidate for the Lord Mayoralty of London last November.

The Queen has decided that no "drawing rooms" are to be held this year, and it is even doubtful whether a levee will be permitted.

THE Rev. Hugh M. Mackenzie, late of Chapelhall Free Church, Airdrie, has been induced by the Presbytery of London to St. George's Presbyterian Church, Southwark.

THERE is no foundation whatever for the report that a marriage has been arranged between Prince William of Wurtemberg and the Princess Beatrice. The whole story is an absurd fabrication.

THE profits of the London Standard last year exceeded £100,000. This is a handsome income but it is far less than the revenue annually derived from the Daily Telegraph, which verges on a quarter of a million.

MR. GLADSTONE'S followers are to wear on his next birthday a bunch of lilies, with oak and ivy leaves, supposed to represent purity, strength and tenacity, which are considered by them the three most prominent characteristics of their leader.

A CIRCULAR has been issued from the War Office stating that a gratuity is to be paid to the European troops engaged in the recent operations in the Soudan, ranging in the amount from £2 to £800, according to the rank of the recipients.

THE Rev. W. Gaskell, the oldest active minister in the Unitarian denomination, and husband of Ers. Elizabeth Gaskell, the author of "Mary Barton," and other works, died on June 11th at Manchaster, close upon eighty years of age. He was educated at Glasgow University, and had deen pastor of Cross Street Unitarian Chapel, Manchester, for fully 56 years.

Hanlan's Race with Laycock.

The Melbourne Aryus gives the following particulars of the great race of May 23, on the Nepean river at Sidney, between Hanlan and Laycock, for the championship of the world and $5,000. They got away beautifully well together, Hanlan pulling his sculls through at the rate of 30 per minute, without the slightest flurry or splash. Laycock on the other hand, went away at the rate of 32, He seemed by no means so much at home in his boat as his opponent, and knocked up a good deal of water. Laycock steadied himself, and began rowing in much better form, but he was half a length to the bad. Nearing the mile post both slowed down to 30 per minute, Hanlan leading by almost a clear length, and rowing in an easy style, as if it were no exertion whatever to him. The same order was maintained in the second mile, except that Hanlan had increased his lead to two clear lengths. The pace from the start was now telling on Laycock, who reduced his strokes to 28, Hanlan rowing about the same. Although the latter appeared quite unconcerned and cool, the Australian was bathed in perspiration and began looking anxiously over his shoulder. By the time the third mile was reached Laycock, by a little extra pressure, managed to reduce the gap between them to a boat's length. Approaching the bridge the excitement of the spectators grew intense as Laycock was seen to be gaining on Hanlan, and a hundred yards from the winning post they were almost level. Hanlan did not allow affairs to remain in this state long. With three or four powerful strokes he shot away from Laycock and won by a bare length, amid the greatest excitement in 22 min. 45 min.

Astonished by a Bird Charmer.

Paris has found a new sensation in a bird charmer, who has been astonishing the boulevardiers with his powers. A bet was made between him and a M. Loizey, a gentleman who was rather sceptical in such matters. The conditions were that M. Loizey should furnish a dozen birds, which were to be at the disposal of the charmer for fifteen minutes. At the end of that time M. Picard was to open the cage which contained them, and each bird was to alight upon a certain arbutus, brought upon the ground by him and placed at a distance of 100 metres from the point where they were liberated. For each bird which did not obey the charm within a quarter of an hour, M. Picard was to pay M. Loizey 50f., and for each bird which did M. Loizey was to pay M. Picard the same sum. When the time for the test arrived so large and so curious a crowd had gathered on the Champ de Mars that it was impossible to maintain the needful space of 100 metres around the spot where the cage was placed. Forty metres was all the distance that could be secured. The results, therefore, were not accepted as determining the bet, and another trial will be made. The birds, however—released under these conditions—flew one by one to the arbutus and perched on its branches, to the great astonishment, it is said, of the spectators. M. Picard's charm consists, it is believed, in impregnating these branches with a colorless and mysterious liquid, the secret of which is as yet his own.—Pall Mall Gazette.

How to do Without Scrubbing

Every tidy housekeeper is partial to clean floors, and in order to have them imposes upon herself tasks which are too severe. An excellent housekeeper who is physically unable to cope with scrub brush and floor mop, informs me that the labor of scrubbing may be almost entirely obviated by following these directions: Procure three quarts of boiled linseed oil, and three quarts of shellac varnish. This quantity of oil and varnish will cover as much floor as thirty yards of carpet will cover. Clean the floor well, and with a plane remove spots which you cannot scrub off. In the afternoon put on the first coat of oil with a paint brush. The oil will be dry by the ensuing noon. As soon as the oil is dry put on some shellac varnish. After two or three days apply more oil with a brush, and afterwards with a soft woollen cloth rub the oil thoroughly into all crevices. The floor will soon be perfectly dry, and can be kept clean by wiping instead of scrubbing. It can be renovated occasionally by applying the oil sparingly and scrubbing will thereby be robbed of its fatigue. This economical reform is especially recommended to the unfortunate possessors of weak backs and diseased spines.

The floor directly in front of and upon the sides of the kitchen stove or range should be covered with sheet iron one-half yard wide, to protect the floor from drops of grease, and from coals of fire which may accidentally fall upon it. —Household.

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough it never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. IN MEMORIAM.

JOHNNIE CLEGG, WHO WAS KILLED AT THE MIDLAND STATION, PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 4TH, 1884.

Moving with noiseless step around his bed,
And softly speaking for he lay there dead,
They closed his lips, and drew the lids down o'er
His eyes, now fixed and glassy, which ne'er more
Might look on earth, or view the sun's glad light;
And from his brow, like marble cold and white

Brushed back the damp brown hair which round it lay,
Composed his features in a gentle way,
His hands they folded on his breathless breast,
And spoke in whispers of his peaceful rest,
And after this there came a sadder day,
When borne to his long home so far away.

They softly smoothed again his dark brown hair,
Arranged his snowy bed with needless care,
Placed in the narrow house his form once strong and gay,
And bore him slowly, silently away
With aching hearts, and tears of bitter woe,
Unto his resting place where all one day must go.

All silent stood around his grave to hear
The solemn words which fell upon the ear,
Words with the sweetest peace and comfort rife
"I am the resurrection and the life."
Then heaped the clay upon his forehead fair,
And sadly turned away and left him there.

The summer winds around his grave will sigh,
And many a sweet June flower uplift its head,
The Autumn leaves be plied above it high,
And winter's tempests howl a chorus dread,
The sun will shed his fullest radiance there,
The flowers will breathe their perfume on the air

And many colored leaflets will be strewn,
Round the place where dear Johnnie sleeps alone,—
Alone, ah no, for o'er his slumbers deep
Shall watchful angels hourly vigils keep,
And he shall never more awake to weep,
"For so He giveth His beloved sleep."

Was it not strange; a mystery too great
For us to know—on which to speculate,
That, while so many a one who longed to lay,
The weary burden of his life away,
Who envied much the quiet of the dead,
Within this dreary pathway still must tread;

He in his careless youth, untouched by woe,
Must from his glad young life be forced to go,
Pierced by death's poisoned shaft be first to fall.
We cannot understand, God knows it all.
But when a few more days are past and gone
And we still weep, but weep, alas, alone;

When all is as it was before,
Save one we never can see more,
When others take that vacant place,
So lately filled by one dear face,
Ah, many a year may pass away,
And many a sunbeam around us play,

And many a cloud of heavy woe,
Darken our pathway here below,
But joy or grief can ne'er efface,
What memory's pen alone can trace,
In life disappointments and losses we must brave,
Afflicting us till weary limbs are hidden in the grave.

For several minutes he seemed lost in thought, still holding her hands firmly; then he suddenly laughed and stooped toward her.

"Brave true little heart! I wonder if some day you will be as steadfast and faithful in your devotion to your husband, as you have been in your loving defence to your mother? You need not tell me your secret,—I know everything,—and Lily—I can scarcely forgive you for venturing within the reach and power of that wretched vagabond."

He felt her start and shiver, and pitying the terrified expression that drifted into her countenance, he continued:—

"Unconsciously, you were giving alms to your own, and to your mother's worst enemy. Peleg Peterron has for years stood between you and your lawful name."

She reeled, and her fingers closed spasmodically over his, as white and faint, she gasped:

"Then he is not—my"——

The words died on her quivering lips.

"He is the man who has slandered and traduced your mother, even to her own husband."

"Oh! then,—he is not,—he cannot be my—father!"

"No more your father than I am! At last, I have succeeded in obtaining"——

She was beyond the reach even of his voice, and as she dropped, he caught her in his arms.

Since Monday, the terrible strain had known no relaxation, and the sudden release from the the horrible incubus of Peleg Peterson was overpowering.

Mr. Palma held her for some seconds clasped to his heart, and placing the head on his bosom, turned the white face to his. How hungrily the haughty man hung over those wan features; and what a wealth of passionate tenderness thrilled in the low trembling voice that whispered:

"My Lily. My darling; my own."

He kissed her softly, as if the cold lips were too sacred even for his loving touch, and gently placed her on the sofa, holding her with his encircling arm.

Since his boyhood, no woman's lips had ever pressed his, and the last kiss he had bestowed was upon his mother's brow, as she lay in her coffin.

To-night the freshness of youth came back, and the cold, politic, non committal lawyer found himself for the first time an ardent trembling lover.

He watched the faint quiver of her blue-veined lids, and heard the shuddering sigh, that assured him consciousness was returning. Softly stroking her hand, he saw the eyes at last unclose.

"You certainly have been down among your uncanny Undine caves,—for you quite resemble a drenched lily. Now sit up."

He lifted her back into the easy chair, as if she had been an infant, and stood before her.

As her mind cleared, she recalled what had passed, and said almost in a whisper:

"Did I dream, or did you tell me, that horrible man is not my father?"

"I told you so. He is a black-hearted, vindictive miscreant, who successfully blackmailed you, by practising a vile imposture."

"Oh! are you quite sure?"

"Perfectly sure. I have been hunting him for years, and at last have obtained in black and white his own confession, which nobly exonerates your mother from his infamous aspersions."

"Thank God! Thank God!"

Tears were stealing down her cheeks, and he saw from the twitching of her face, that she was fast losing control of the overtaxed nerves.

"You must go to your room, and rest, or you will be ill."

"Oh! not if I am sure he will never dare to claim me as his child. Oh Mr. Palma! that possibility has almost driven me wild."

"Dismiss it, as you would some hideous nightmare. Go to sleep and dream of your mother, and of"——

He bit his lip, to check the rash words, and too much agitated to observe his changed manner, she asked:—

"Where is he now?"

"No matter where. He is so completely in my power, that he can trouble us no more."

She clasped her hands joyfully, but the tears fell faster, and looking at her mother's picture, she exclaimed:

"Have mercy upon me,—Mr. Palma! Tell me—do you know—who I am? Do you really know beyond doubt who was—or is—my father?"

"This much I can tell you, I know your father's name; but just now, I am forbidden by your mother to disclose it, even to you. Come to your room."

He raised her from the chair, and as she stood before him, it was pitible to witness the agonized entreaty in her pallid, but beautiful face.

"Please tell me only one thing,—and I can bear all else patiently. Was he,—was my father,—a gentleman? Oh! my mother could never have loved any—but a gentleman."

"His treatment of her, and of you, would scarcely entitle him to that honorable epithet; yet in the eyes of the world, your father assuredly is in every respect a gentleman,—is considered even an aristocrat."

She sobbed aloud, and the violence of her emotion, which she seemed unable to control, alarmed him. Leading her to the library door, he said,—retaining her hand:

"Compose yourself, or you will be really sick. Now that your poor tortured heart is easy, can you not go to sleep?"

"Oh thank you! Yes—I will try."

"Lily, next time trust me. Trust your guardian in everything. Good-night. God bless you."

CHAPTER XXV.

"The dice of the gods are always loaded,' and what appears the merest chance,—is an inexorably fixed,—predetermined,—as the rules of mathematics, or the laws of crystallization. What madness to flout fate!"

Mrs. Orme laid down her pen as she spoke, and leaned back in her chair.

"Did you speak to me?" inquired Mrs. Waul, who had been nodding over her worsted work, and was aroused by the sound of the voice.

"No,—I was merely thinking aloud; a foolish habit I have contracted since I began to aspire to literary laurels. Go to sleep again and finish your dream."

Upon the writing desk lay a MS. in morocco cover, and secured by heavy bronze clasps, into which the owner put a small key attached to her watch chain, carefully locking and laying it away in a drawer of the desk.

Approaching a table in the corner of the room, Mrs. Orme filled a tall narrow Venetian glass with that violet-flavoured, violet perfumed Capri wine, whose golden bubbles danced upon the brim, and having drained the last amber drop,—she rolled her chair close to the window, looped back the curtains, and sat down.

The lodgings she had occupied since her arrival in Naples, were situated on the Riviera di Chiaja, near the Villa Reale, and not far from the divergence into the Strada Mergellina. Of the wonderful beauty of the scene beyond her front windows, she had never wearied, and now in the ravishing afternoon glow, with the blue air all saturated with golden gleams, she yielded to the Parthenopean spell, which once felt, seems never to be forgotten.

Had it the power to chant to rest that sombre past which memory kept as a funeral theme for ever on its vibrating strings? Was there at last a file for the serpent, that had so long made its liar in her distorted and envenomed nature?

At thirty-three time ceases to tread with feathery feet and the years grow self-asserting, italicize themselves in passing;—and across the dial of woman's beauty the shadow of decadence falls aslant. But although Mrs. Orme had offered sacrifice to the inexorable Terminus, who dwells at the last border-line of youth,—the ripeness and bloom of her extraordinary loveliness showed as yet no hint of the coming eclipse.

Health lent to cheek and lip its richest, warmest tints, and though the silvery splendor of hope shone no longer in the eloquent brown eyes,—the light of an almost accomplished triumph imparted a baletul brilliancy, which even the long lashes could not veil.

Her pale lilac robe showed admirably the transparency of her complexion, and in her waving gilded hair she wore a cluster of delicate rose anemones.

Her gaze seemed to have crossed the blue pavement of sea, and rested on the purpling outlines of Ischia and Capri; but the dimpling smile that crossed her face sprang from no dreamy reverie of Parthenope legends, and her voice was low and deep, like one rehearsing for some tragic outbreak.

"So Samson felt in Dagon's temple,—amid the jubilee of his tormentors,—when silent and calm, girded only by a sense of his wrongs, he meekly bowed to rest himself; and all the while his arms groped stealthily around the pillars destined to avenge him. Ah! how calm, how holy all outside of my heart seems! How in contrast with that charnel house! Yonder vision of peaceful loveliness appears as incongruous as the nightingales which the soul of Sophocles heard singing in the grove of the Furies. After to-day will the world ever look quite the same to me? Thirty-three years have brought me swiftly to the last fatal page; and shall the hand falter that writes finis?"

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

THE PUMP OF THE PERIOD.

I NOW DESIRE TO CALL THE ATTENTION OF THE PUBLIC TO MY

NEW PATENT

Model Force and Lift Pump

which this cut represents. I believe it to be the BEST COMBINED PUMP IN THE WORLD. It differs from all others in having the sectional stock or head, with its many advantages, and its firm and durable means of holding the attachments. The intermittent or detachable packing is only used in actual forcing, and it is at all other times (say 95 per cent. of the service of the pump), unfreezable an unwearable.

THE HOSE COUPLING

is very convenient and effective. It can be adjusted in a few seconds, thus quickly changing an ordinary service pump into a Force Pump.

All orders promptly attended to, by mail or otherwise, and repairing done on the shortest notice.

A VALUABLE TESTIMONIAL.

MR. HENRY OWENS,

DEAR SIR,—In reply to yours, regarding your "Model Pump," I am satisfied that it will give the best satisfaction of any pump that I have seen.

Its combination for an ordinary and Force Pump augments its value in various ways and at a cost that any person who can afford any Pump can avail themselves.

It will afford fire protection, irigation, and carrying water through Pipes or Hose any distance from wells to where it is required at very moderate expense.

How I intend to apply mine for irrigation is, by attaching the pipe above the cylinder and distributing the pipes where I require the water. With a short hose attached to a hydrant, I can irrigate without handling long hose at less expense.

Farmers could attach wind mills to the Pumps and distribute water in the same way to their yards and stables, or watering places in pasture fields, at very moderate cost and great saving of labor.

The perfect arrangement of the Air Chamber and Cylinder in the Pump is such that the Pump may be run with any power attached for deep wells, supply of tanks, and the same as any metal Pumps.

I mention some of the advantages of your "Combination Pump" that occur to m . that perhaps you and your patrons have not thought of, and that at a that price il consider cheap.

Yours truly,
G. W. RANNEY C.E.,

We, the undersigned, having examined Mr. H. Owens' New Model Force Pump, take pleasure in stating that we consider it a great improvement on pumps formerly in use. In our opinion it is one of the best pumps ever introduced to the public, being quickly turned into a pump for fire protection. It is powerful, durable, convenient and easy to work, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it as a first-class article in every way.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

A POOR PROSPECT.

If the Liberal party cannot attain power without the support of J. D. Ed ar its prospects are not very bright.—Montreal Post (Indep.)

LENT HIS NAME.

Mr. Bl ke lent his name to what was nothing else than an attempt to buy up Mr. Wheler's resignation and then foist J. D. Edgar upon the constituency, irrespective of the wishes of Reformers, who make up the bulk of the riding.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

McKIMS IN SHORT.

The insolence and assumption of private detectives and policemen in the States, who have no legal authority to act in any such capacity, are getting unbearable, and it is high time a stop was put to it. They are nearly always bullies and blackmailers, and should be put down.—Toronto News (Indep.)

LYON'S REAL REASON.

By his resignation Mr. Lyon is saved the trouble of enduring the turmoil of the election trial fixed for next month, and also averts any risk of disqualification for election irregularities. He will run again.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

A GLOBE INVENTION.

Just one word here as to the Northern and Pacific Railway junction link. The junction is to be at the right Callender and not at the wrong one, as was insinuated by the Globe some short time ago.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

THE DICTATORSHIP DEAD.

J. D. Edgar's emphatic rejection by West Ontario ought to teach the Globe that the dictatorship died with the dictator.—Winnipeg Sun (Indep.)

SENATOR BROWN'S VIEWS.

George Brown's name is not often mentioned in the Globe's columns nowadays. That is because George Brown's views on Disallowance, on Independence, on the Senate, on the Pacific Railway, and other topics of that kind were vastly different from the views of the paltry people who have succeeded him.—Toronto Mail.

A RED INDIAN TARIFF.

It should be a tariff for revenue, not pandering to the protectionists heresay in any way. Nevertheless it would be a tariff by which our indigenous industries would naturally be protected; exotic industries cost more than they are worth, and the public money should not be taken and applied to sustain their transient existance.—Belleville Ontario (Reform.)

WHO IS FALSIFYING.

Mr. Blake wrote to the President of the Reform Association of West Ontario informing him that a vacancy in the representation of the constituency had taken place in consequence of Mr. Wheler having accepted an office of emolument. A few days later the Globe, in the most unequivocal manner, denied that Mr. Wheler had accepted an office. Some days ago we requested the Globe to reconcile the two statements, for it appeared singular that the organ should thus contradict the leader's announcement. So far the Globe is silent on the subject.—Ottawa Citizen.

ABSENT ON LEAVE.

"On Sunday evening last," says the Muskoka Herald of July 10, "a meeting of the leading local Grits was held in the British Lion hotel, when the programme of meetings to be addressed by stump orators was arranged." Can such things be? What has become of the morality of the great moral party? Has the Christian statesman, Mr. Mowat, got all the piety of the Local Government under his personal charge, and has he taken it to England with him? It looks like it, and it would seem that his wicked partners are going to a shocking extreme of immorality. Come home, Oliver, ere the fate of Sodom overtakes the country.—Hamilton Spectator.

Terrible Railway Accident.

CANTON, O., July 20.—A point on the Valley Railway two miles east of here was the scene of a terrible wreck, in which one thousand excursionsionists from this city miraculously escaped with injuries, as far as known, while it is thought half a dozen or more persons under the wreck are dead. The employees of Aultman & Co.'s machine works had their annual picnic at Cuyahoga Falls to-day, and over 2,000 went on an excursion made up of two trains of fifteen cars each. The first section arrived at Canton at 7.20 p.m. all right.

The engineer says the wreck was caused by the track spreading. The engine went over all right, but the first car jumped the track and eight others followed. The train ran alongside of the track for 200 feet, throwing the occupants from the one side to the other, and finally jumped a small embankment and landed in three feet of water. The doors were cut open and the people got out. Three doctors are on the ground attending to the wounded, several of whom they say will probably die.

Nine cars were off the track and in water four feet deep. The cries of the injured were heart-rendering. Hundreds of willing hands immediately set to work, and it was soon found that more than 200 were injured, but it was impossible to say how many or who were killed. About a dozen or more were missing and may be under the cars, and nothing definite can be known until the wrecking train arrives, which is now on its way to the scene. A telegraph office has been opened at the scene, and everything is being done to alleviate the sufferings of the injured.

Epidemic Terrors.

"No excesses of any sort, and especially no excess of prudence," is a French doctor's recommendation in view of the cholera; and no formula could be neater. Too many people are fond of putting their bodies under martial law. At the first rumor of an epidemic they suppress the liberty of eating and drinking, and think they have got themselves into good order because they coerce themselves into feeding on that which they do not like. The stomach is apt to rebel against such despotism. Individuals, like nations, thrive best under the laws to which they are accustomed. Reforms are required from time to time, but it is only ill-conditioned bodies that need radical measures; and to place a healthy body suddenly under a strict code of dietetics is much like putting a strong, independent nation under some fine new system of government logically perfect but repugnant to all material traditions and tastes, and consequently inappropriate. If a disease like cholera cannot be caught by mere terror, it is obvious that epidimic terror, by driving people to weakening themselves by self-doctoring, gives the disease a better chance of killing those whom it attacks. On this point it may be observe that, while the old mystical superstitions are dying out, the superstitions of science are beginning to haunt ignorant or half-educated minds with quite as pernicious an effect. People are no longer afraid of bogeys or portents in the sky, but they quake at the mention of miasmas, or acids in the system. The man who is too wise to see calamity in an overturned salt-cellar deems it no folly to ascribe gigantic evils to a dish of strawberries.—London (Eng.) Graphic.

THE HARDEN HAND-GRENADE FIRE EXTINGUISHER.

Ever since P. T. Barnum, the renowned showman, brought to this country and attempted the general introduction of Philip's Fire Annihilator, about a quarter of a century ago, there have been a number of chemical fire extinguishers introduced, some of which have proved quite successful.

There has been recently introduced a very simple and inexpensive apparatus, called "The Harden Hand-Grenade Fire Extinguisher," and from the result of the numerous tests made before the public in this city, this would seem to fill a want not before obtained.

These little hand grenades extinguish fires on the same principle as the chemical fire engines, which are charged with carbonic acid gas, which by calculation possesses forty times the extinguishing effect upon fire that water has. These grenade extinguishers consist of a glass globe about four inches in diameter that resembles a small jug, and this contains the liquid which produces large volumes of fire extinguishing gas when brought in contact with flames.

The liquid it is said will stand a temperature of fifteen or twenty degrees below zero; thus all danger from its freezing and becoming useless when wanted is avoided.

A representative of the Sicntific American was present at an exhibition trial of this extinguisher a few days ago, and witnessed the following experiments:

A fire was lighted at the side of a pine board fence, some 8 feet high by 15 long, the surface of which was coated with tar, and a kindling wood and paper placed against it, the whole having a gallon or so of benzine scattered over it. The blaze sprang up almost instantly, and in less than half a minute the flames shot up twenty or thirty feet. To put out this fire, which it took but a few seconds to accomplish, three of the grenades were flung with enough force to break them and scatter their contents over the fence in the midst of the blaze.

Another trial was also made, in which the grenades were hung against the fence and the fire kindled under them. This time the blaze did not reach the height it attained in the former trial, but the grenades burst by the heat when the temperature had reached about 180 Fah., and the fire was again quickly extinguished. A watchman making the rounds of a factory with one or two of these in his hands would find them vastly more serviceable than a pail of water or a small hose, were either of the latter always on hand, as they so seldom are; and the grenades can be successfully used in cases where it is difficult to exactly locate or get near to a fire. To hang them in places where there is liability to fire, so they will burst before a fire has gained much headway, is one of their obvious uses.

For summer houses and stables, where the materials of construction are usually of an inflammable character and water is seldom at hand, these grenades would prove highly valuable. At the brewery of J. C. G. Hupfel a few days ago a fire broke out which promised to be more or less serious, but it was quickly extinguished by using four of the grenades.—Scientific American.

SCOTLAND.

THE fish traffic at Barra is in full swing. It is some years since the lakes were so plentiful and heavy. Herrings were worth 3s. per box on the 3rd instant at Lochboisdale.

REPORTS on agricultural prospects in the various districts in Scotland show that crops, on the whole, look healthy, and there is a fair prospect of a good harvest.

A PUBLIC meeting of those interested in the forming of an association for the prohibition of sheep stock being worried was held in Castle Douglas on the 2nd July.

AT Motherwell on the 5th July operations were commenced by Mr. Miller at his new Globe Iron Works. Ten puddling furnaces were fired and heated up, and a Rigby steam hammer and roughing-down mill were also set in operation.

THE electric light has just been completed at Linden Park, the new residence of Walter Laing, Esq. A small stream runs through the grounds, and advantage has been taken of this to obtain power to produce electricity to light the mansion and the adjoining offices.

THE Crieff folk have had an elopement case. The wife of John Fraser, a lodging house keeper, and mother of a large family, bolted with a young lodger. They took some of the furniture with them, however, and were apprehended in Aberdeen and brought back charged with theft.

FARM AND GARDEN.

PULSE VS. NOSE.—There is no need of bothering about a cow's pulse to find out if she is well or not; simply look at her nose. If well, it it will be moist and cold; if feverish, dry and hot. She is like a dog in this respect. A staring coat or a hollow eye are also points indicating trouble, and as symptoms of disease are more to be dreaded than the dry nose.

PREMIUMS.—The English Agricultural Societies practice one thing worthy of attention here. It is the giving of premiums on a farm dairy as a whole. The judges visit the farm and inspect everything connected with the dairy. A farm of 100 acres must have at least 40 cheeses on hand at the time of inspection, for such a dairy the prize is $60. Then ten cheeses selected by the farmer, must be sent to the fair for public inspection, when the prizes are declared.

New Process for Preserving Meat.

Mr. Richard Jones, who has for many years devoted his attention to the preservation of meat, has now adopted a new process. The principle consists in the injection of a fluid preparation of boracic acid into the blood of the animal immediately after it has been stunned, and before its heart has ceased to beat; the whole operation, including the removal of the blood and chemical fluid from the body of the animal being rapidly done. The quantity of boracic acid used is very small, and that little is almost immediately drawn out again with the blood. The preservation of the flesh is said to be thoroughly effected; the quantity of the chemical left in the flesh must therefore be very small, and can scarcely be injurious to the human system; for, as Professor Barff has proved by experiment, living animals, either of the human or other species, do not seem to be injured in any way by the consumption of it. A demonstration of the process was given in April at the Adelphi Hotel London, when the joints cut from a sheep that had been hanging for more than seven weeks at the house of the Society of Arts were cooked in various ways, and those present agreed that the meat was equal to ordinary butcher's meat.—Scientific American.

Advice to Young Men.

Lately, when about to break up for the holidays, Mr. Spurgeon dismissed his young men with a caution, "Don't get courting. That is not good for students. Come back as some one puts it, with your heart and manners uncracked. Walk in the fields like Isaac by all means and meditate, but don't lift up your eyes for Rebecca. She will come soon enough.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Lacrosse Tournament.

Negotiations are going on for holding a Lacrosse match by electric light during the above tournament, when a prize will be offered for bicycle riders.

Good Hay.

Mr. John Doherty exhibited a specimen of timothy that measured 4 feet 11½ inches. It was from a nine acre lot in the south part of the town. The whole crop on the lot will average two or two and a half tons to the acre.

The R. C. Cemetery.

In the notice published yesterday of the improvements made in the cemetery, an error occurred in reference to the new monuments mentioned. They were purchased from Mr. Moore's establishment.

Cheap Excursion to Toronto.

An excursion to Toronto and return over the Ontario and Quebec Road, will take place on Peterborough's Civic Holiday, August 12th. The rate is a low one and people should wait for it. Fuller particulars soon.

Lacrosse Match.

A Lacrosse match was played this afternoon between the second twelve of the Peterborongs and the Trents, of Hastings. It was won by the Peterborough boys by three straight games, in three, nine and five minutes respectively. Further particulars to-morrow.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Moderate to fresh winds, mostly southerly; fair, hot weather, with a few local thunder storms.

A Narrow Escape.

When the excursion train arrived at the Norwood station on Tuesday, Mr. Thos. Burke, of that village, in stepping from the station platform to the cars fell between the platform and the coaches. He got out unhurt, owing to prompt assistance rendered by the conductor but he had a narrow escape from being seriously injured.

Cow Killed by a Train.

A valuable milch cow belonging to Mr. H. W. Watson was killed by the train going to Port Hope on the Midland Railway this morning. A boy was driving the cow to pasture and the animal was struck by the engine on a crossing in the south part of the town. Mr. Watson had been offered $45 for the cow a few weeks ago.

The Orillia Match.

The team which will represent the Peterboro' Lacrosse Club in the match with the Orillia Club at that town to morrow will be composed as follows, J. Caughlin being field captain and H. Myers spare man:—

|---|---|
| W. Rudkins | J. Sheehy |
| P. Myles | R. Kelly |
| M. Tierney | R. H. Fortye |
| J. Howden | C. Rutherford |
| M. Halpin | W. Scott |
| J. Henderson | G. Giroux. |

New Importations.

Mr. Thos. Dolan, during his visit to the old country, with his usual enterprise combined business with pleasure, and a large quantity of goods which he purchased while there are now arriving and being opened out. They were brought on the same steamers Pennvion, Polynesian (which Mr. Dolan came over on himself) and Sardinian. These new importations of England goods, having been imported direct, will be sold at the lowest prices.

Brightened Up.

Mr. R. W. Muncaster's jewellery store has been brightened up, and the interior improved in appearance. The walls have been ornamented with new paper, old gold and maroon, and a deep and bright border. The ceiling has also been ornamented in the same manner, the color of the paper being a little deeper, with panelling of a Japanese pattern and of bright colors. The work was done by Mr. W. H. Watson. The goods in the store are tastily arranged, and the appearance is good, especially at night, when the establishment is brilliantly illuminated with electric light.

CHEESE FAIR.

The Fortnightly Market Well Attended by Salesmen and Buyers.

There was a good attendance at the cheese market on Tuesday afternoon, rather larger than at the previous fairs held this season. The market was, as usual, conducted by Messrs. J. M. Drummond and Warren Taylor. Among the buyers present were Messrs. J. Brower, Belleville; J. Flavelle, Lindsay; and W. Clouston and W. H. Wrighton, Peterborough.

Two factories new to this market were represented, namely, Crown and Hope, Durham County. The Durham factories will ship at Port Hope, the Victoria factories at Lindsay, and the Peterborough factories at this town. The following is a list of the factories represented and the number of cheese offered, "c" standing for colored and "w" for white:—

The cheese offered by five factories in the Peterborough District, and that of the Durham District was purchased by Mr. Brower at 8⅞c., subject to inspection, and he offered 8¾c. for the remainder reported from the Peterborough District, with the understanding that if it was of the finest quality he would give the additional one-eighth of a cent. Mr. Flavelle offered 8¾c. for the Victoria District, but it was not accepted. The cheese was all of the first half of the July make, except ten boxes of June make offered by Derryville.

The next market will be held on Tuesday, August 5th.

Close.

If you want to witness the closest contested lacrosse match of the season accompany the Foresters' Excursion to Orillia to-morrow, Thursday, July 24. Return fare, $1.00.

Building Notes.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Jas. Stevenson is going to erect a large brick building north of his own office on Water Street, and east of the Ontario Bank. Work will be commenced at once. Parties requiring earth to fill up, can have the same by applying to Mr. Stevenson or Mr. Chas. McGinty, on the work.

Valuable Goods

Selling at a great sacrifice, Rich Dress Silks, Brocaded Satins, Damask Silks, Black Satins, Three Mantle Lengths of Rich Black Silk Velvet Brocade, to be sold at half price. Real Thread and Silk Laces, Rich Sash Ribbons and Ostrich Feathers to be cleared out at a tremendous sacrifice. Ladies are crowding Fairweather & Co's Store every day purchasing bargains.

Excursion Down the River.

An excursion to Savigny's Point, on the steamer Golden-Eye, was held on Tuesday afternoon, under the auspices of the ladies of Ashburnham and in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral. It was largely attended, the steamer being well filled. The Fire Brigade Band was in attendance and provided excellent music. At Savigney's Point, about seven miles down the river, the party disembarked and enjoyed themselves in the usual pic-nic style, dancing being the principal amusement. After partaking of tea in the grove, the excursionists returned, arriving at the wharf at about half past ten o'clock. The excursion was a very enjoyable one.

A Programme for To-Morrow.

If you have made up your mind to accompany the Foresters' Excursion to Orillia on Thursday, July 24, the following programme will no doubt prove interesting to the majority of the participants in the day's recreation. No more delightful season could have been selected. The grass is green, the trees are in their leafiest stage, the flowers are in the height of perfection and bloom. To those who take a delight in fishing we would recommend you to take out your fishing tackle, roll up your breeches, and wade around the margin of Lake Couchiching and catch the fretful crawfish, play upon the dreamy unsuspecting nature of the placid mudcat, beguile the trout with an artfully constructed fly, or cruelly allure the avaricious maskinonge with your glistening bait. If you feel inclined to rusticate, wander in the woods adjoining the lacrosse grounds, and find out that charming and secluse-tered hollow where fecund nature dimples in a spring. Get down upon your knees, put your nose in it, give your stomach a surprise party, and drink the cool, earth-brewed sparkling nectar, and feel refreshed and thankful that you are far away from the hot and stifling town of Peterborough. You can see the Grand Lacrosse Match, the finest of the season; you can take a trip to the beautiful park Couchiching; you can take a trip to Longford mills; you can have a round or square dance with the prettiest girl in the land. By the way, two violins, one cornet, one piccolo and one organ, sure pop. A hundred and one other attractions will be presented in addition to all. Aunt Sally will loom up in the corner. A good day's fun is predicted, an enjoyable time assured, so that you may return to your respective labours with renewed vigour and with a heart pulsating to the will of a mind filled with anything you like.

At Faucher's Restaurant,

Fresh Oysters received twice a week.

TELEPHONIC.

A Neat Central Office—Probable Extension of the Line.

The central office of the telephone system in Peterborough is now a neat place of business After the recent fire, men were engaged to fit it up anew, and a good piece of work was done. The entrance is changed to the door at the head of the stairs. The operating room has been enlarged, and it is tastefully fitted up. The floor is covered with a neat carpet, and the walls have been repainted and ornamented by a bright dado. The trunk line switch and transmitter has been removed from the wall and placed on a stand, which makes the working of it more convenient. There are two switches for the local business, but the wires are so arranged that one operator can easily attend to both. The manner in which the wires are arranged would serve as a model for any office in city or town. Files are kept for messages to different places, so that any message can be readily referred to at any time. Mr. Smith, the agent, has also provided himself with a new desk in the office. The batteries are kept in a separate apartment. A counter has been placed in the public office to facilitate the transaction of business. A room in the rear is used as a store room for wire, &c. The walls of the hall have also been brightened up with paint, and this office is one of the neatest and best equipped telephone offices in Canada.

There are now seventy-five instruments in use in Peterborough, an increase of fifteen since the first of the year. Poles have been put up as far north as Nassau, and the prospects are good Mr. Smith informs us, for the line being extended to Lakefield.

There are about four hundred calls received at the central office each day for local conversations, besides those received on account of the trunk line business. Evidently a large amount of business is transacted over the telephone lines.

PORT HOPE.

HORSE AND BUGGY STOLEN.—A beautiful black mare, silver-mounted harness and covered buggy was stolen from the premises of Mr. Gilmore, lot 2, 4th con. Clarke, on Monday night. Two well dressed men called at the house that night and asked a drink of water, and it is supposed they are the thieves.—Guide.

Another large shipment of Bass' Ale, October brewing, just arrived at W. Chamberlain's Restaurant. Imported direct.

For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A Large Bottle" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Every jar warranted. Another Bigamist.

Dr. James Edwards, a corn and bunion doctor, went to Richmond, Va., a few months ago and married Mrs. Woolridge, a widow of means. Edwards forced his wife to make a will in his favour and then attempted to poison her. Failing in this he endeavoured to realize on the will and went to Atlanta, where he married another woman. He has just been arrested and it is now learned he has wives in other cities.

Riot at a Camp.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 21.—Yesterday a riot occurred at a coloured camp meeting four miles from Chestertown. Four men were shot, and several cut with razors and knives. It appears that three or four drunken negroes began a quarrel, which soon came to blows and then pistols. Knives were used, and one was shot fatally and another terribly cut. The sheriff arrested seven. Quiet was then restored.

Wheat Field on Fire.

MODESTO, Cal., July 21.—A fire started at 10 a.m. in a wheat field here. The alarm was instantly telegraphed and telephoned to all available points, and two thousand men from different sections rushed to the rescue. The old-fashioned prairie way of fighting a fire was resorted to. At 3 30 p.m. after a desperate struggle, the fire was under control. The streets here and at Oakdale are filled with men with scorched faces and singed heads of hair. Six thousand acres of grain and several large dwellings were destroyed; loss about $150,000.

Curious Figures.

There are thirty-eight States in the Union. The combined names of James Gillespie Blaine and John Alexander Logan have thirty-eight letters. Here, also, are further curious facts: The name of Blaine contains six letters; he was nominated on the sixth day of the sixth month of the year, the day being spelled with six letters. He will receive the six electoral votes of his State and, when elected, will be the sixth President with the name of James. He was nominated in the fourth largest city in the country on the fourth ballot, he will be elected on the fourth of November, and inaugurated on the 4th of March.—St. Louis Morning Call.

UNPATRIOTIC "REFORMERS."

Injury Done by the Sham Farmers Anti-Emigration Resolution.

Mr. F. H. Brydges returned this morning from his trip to London, Eng., in the interests of the Manitoba & Northwestern Railway. He stopped over at Montreal to attend a meeting of the directors of the road; but notwithstanding this, made the through trip in fourteen days. He was met by a Times reporter this afternoon, who asked if construction on the M. & N. W. was to be proceeded with this year.

"Certainly," replyed Mr. Brydges, "we shall at once proceed to construct fifty miles beyond Minnedosa."

"Is it difficult to get capital in England now?"

"Very," he answered. "We were met on all sides with the anti-immigration resolutions. It seems extraordinary that farmers, men noted for common sense and a keen eye to their own interests, should have used such suicidal means to express discontent."

"Have these resolutions had much effect."

"Certainly; and not only that, but all dissatisfaction expressed by meetings and conventions are exaggerated and reported throughout Great Britain by parties interested, and it makes capitalists very chary of investing. The position, if it were not so serious, is almost absurd; on the one hand the people are clamoring for railroads, and on the other taking the very steps to keep out capital and prevent their construction."

"Does the question of rates affect this?" asked the reporter.

"Of course British capitalists are very careful now as to Canadian and American investments, and the question of rates requires to be handled very carefully so as not to alarm them."

"Is the present depression in business general?"

"Yes, and no number of meetings and resolutions will make this country an exception. Our country is young. It needs people and capital, and when the revival in trade comes we shall reap a much greater benefit if we do nothing to check the influence of both."

"Has immigration been much affected this year by the discontent expressed?"

"No doubt, and emigration is peculiar. When once a tide sets in and no adverse circumstances arise, it continues with a constantly increasing stream every year, but check it and allow it to find a channel elsewhere and it is most difficult, and sometimes impossible for years, to divert it."

"Have any other countries been taking many this year?" the reporter asked.

"Queensland has had more than its share and has no doubt taken many people that would have come to us had they not been discouraged," said Mr. Brydges.

"Are the C. P. R. doing much towards immigration?"

"Yes; their exertions are entitled to great praise, and they deserve the good will and encouragement of the people who have the interests of this country at heart. These being given them I believe they will overcome the evil influences that have been at work this year, otherwise I am doubtful whether we shall have any increase in immigration or the amount of capital coming into the country next year over this."

"Yet there is a great deal of fault found with the C.P.R.," the reporter suggested.

"Certainly. I do not suppose any one could expect them to be perfect, and do not think a railroad can be found of any considerable length that satisfies all the people along its line, and in most cases the majority; but it is much easier to criticise than to create. I have no doubt there are hundreds of people who can persuade themselves and perhaps others as to what should have been done in regard to the construction and running of the C. P. R., but certainly very few would have carried it through as it has been."

Mrs. Brydges, who accompanied her husband to England, remained in Montreal.—Winnipeg Times.

LAKEFIELD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LOW WATER.—The brackets were taken off the main dam at Lakefield last week. On Saturday last, notwithstanding that the water above the Lakefield dam was considerably higher than the law allowed the running of the saw mill at Lakefield was seriously interfered with showing the urgent necessity for the early construction of the new dam. It seems by this that the extra 43 inches of water to be given by the new dam is as necessary for the Lakefield mill as for navigation for Mr. Cox put the brackets on the old dam on Saturday night last, and kept them on in order to get water to run the mill.

SAW LOG DRIVE.—Mr. Hilliard's drive of saw logs passed through Young's Point on Wednesday last, the 23rd inst. Mr. J. Foster, foreman. This drive has been delayed on Stony Lake for ten days on account of head or adverse winds, but at the rate of progress being made in the river it will be at its destination inside of a week.

THE FAIRY.—The steamer Fairy took a large party of campers from Lakefield to Stony Lake on Tuesday last. Among the number your correspondent noticed Mr. J. Ludgate, of Peterboro', and Mr. John Moore, who is here from the States visiting his many friends and acquaintences in the county of Peterboro'.

ROBBERY.—On Saturday last a small quantity of flour and pork was stolen from the dock at Lakefield. Strong suspicions rest upon a new comer to the village and detection is expected to soon follow.

A GOOD MOVE.—Mr. John Dinwoodie, of Lakefield, a good man for the position has been put in charge of the Lakefield dam, to prevent any interference with the Government works, and he will do his duty under any and all circumstances.

Commercial Treaty.

Negotiations for a definitive treaty of commerce between America and Spain were opened on Tuesday. An envoy from Washington arrived at Madrid on Friday. An inquiry made at the State department, at Washington, as to the identity of the envoy mentioned above, elicited the reply that no envoy other than Minister Foster had been sent.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's porous plaster. Sold by J. D. Tully.

THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1884.

EXULTING IN HIS SHAME.

MR. MOWAT is reported by the Toronto papers to have sent the following telegram from London to his colleagues :

LONDON, England, July 21.

"Argument on Boundary question before Privy Council closed. Judgment will be in our favor on question submitted. Hurrah! O. MOWAT."

If it is the fact that he has sent such a message, Mr. Mowat is exulting very indecently in his own shame. As the Privy Council has not given its decision as to the boundary, it is impossible to say exactly what it will be, but if Mr. Mowat means that he thanks the decision will award a satisfactory amount of territory to Ontario he is rejoicing in his own condemnation. The judgment that the award was invalid shows that he has been supporting by abuse and even by violence an illegal course. If the judgment is satisfactory as to the amount of territory secured for Ontario it proves that Mr. Mowat has been very unnecessarily depriving this Province of its rights for many years in order to make political capital for himself by a false clamour.

We are confident that Ontario will be successful, but it will be in spite of Mr. Mowat and his friends, not in consequence of their exertions. Those to whom Ontario will owe the enforcement of its rights are the Conservatives, who have for years been trying to get Mr. Mowat to take the right course and have at last forced it upon him against his will by their persistent efforts.

SHIFTING THEIR GROUND.

LIKE other Reform journals, the London Advertiser is endeavouring to shift its ground on the boundary award question, and is pretending that it did not urge that the award was valid and binding. It gives a long quotation from a speech in the House of Commons by Mr. Blake, from which we take the following extract :—

"I do not pretend we are absolutely bound by this award, nor does any man sitting on this side of the House. It is certain we are not so bound, and that act by which this country can be formally bound by any award is an Act of Parliament, and that the powar to decide questions of this kind, even by Act of Parliament was given us not very long ago by an amendment of the British North American Act. But, while that power exists, the question of international morality subsists also, and what we have to consider whether a case is here made out clearly sufficient to justify the procedure suggested to-day, based as that procedure is on a disregard of the award as a cogent instrument."

We have always said that Mr. Blake would not risk his legal reputation by arguing that the award was binding. But Mr. Mowat, Mr. Mills and other Reform politicians, and the Reform press generally, clamoured for the award, and nothing but the award, vowing that it was binding, and calling those who could not agree with them traitors, robbers, pledge breakers and other pretty names. They even advocated civil war, and actually made war by means of Mr. Boston O'Brien and the rest of their filibusters at Rat Portage. It is therefore vain for them to pretend that they did not hold the award to be binding.

As to the distinction made by Mr. Blake between being legally and morally binding, he rightly held that Parliament could alone bind legally, and as our constitution gives Parliament the jurisdiction in such matters it follows that no other power could bind Canada morally. But in fact the Privy Council has decided against the moral as well as the legal obligation. It holds that the arbitrators exceeded their instructions and consequently that their award was invalid. It is certain that there is no moral obligation to ratify an award when the arbitrators exceed their power even if properly appointed. The award is therefore worthless both legally and morally, for those who appointed the arbitrators had no power to make their decisions final, and the arbitrators themselves exceeded those invalid instructions.

We hope that Mr. Mowat having by his obstinacy and political dishonesty kept Ontario out of the enjoyment of its rights for so many years, will not now add to his offences by presenting our case in such a manner as to fail to secure us the possession of the full amount of our rightful claim. According to Mr. Mowat, according to Mr. Mills, according to Mr. Laurier, according to Sir Francis Hincks, we should get far more that the award gave us, and get it with a valid title.

So able and so careful a lawyer as Mr. Mowat is not likely to have made any mistake in so important a matter.—London Advertiser (Reform.)

BLAKE AND THE GLOBE.

Mr. Blake to the President of the West Ontario Reform Association; "Mr. Wheler has accepted an office of emolument." The Globe to its readers: "Mr. Wheler has not received any appointment. The story is a Tory concoction."—Ottawa Citizen.

EVERY REFORM PAPER.

The whole riding of West Ontario is up against machine nomination, and justly so. No other proof is wanted of this being the case than the fact that every Reform paper in West Ontario objected to Mr. Edgar being foisted upon them, and that the convention called to ratify Mr. Edgar's projection into the riding broke up in confusion.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

TELEGRAPHIC SECRESY.

Certain cypher telegrams were sent by members of the Ontario Governmeet to their agents in Algoma at the time of the Rat Portage affair. The Conservatives were very anxious to get hold of them. Mr. Dwight, however, refused to produce them. On that occasion, it may be mentioned, he was not abused by the Reform organ.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

DOMINION CABINET PROMPT.

The action of President Arthur in establishing a quarantine against Canada is a pretty broad hint to our government, but had the Washington authorities been as well posted as they ought to have been they would have known that the Dominion Government had ordered quarantine for vessels from Europe two weeks before the President moved in the matter.—Ottawa Sun (Indep.)

Elegant Extracts.

We attach little importance to the doings of the commission now sitting in Toronto, and "acting under instructions from the Government," because those proceedings are evidently partial Still a few extracts from the testimony given before it may be of interest.

Mr. McKim "met Wilkinson at the Walker house." He "went up to Wilkinson's room." Mr. Wilkinson made certain statements to him. He "went and spoke to Mr. Pardee, and that gentleman advised him to go ahead and catch Wilkinson if possible."

Mr. Balfour testified that "on the 13th of March Mr. McKim came in" to his room. He went with Mr. McKim to Wilkinson's room. "On Sunday witness was in his room when McKim came in and exhibited a thousand dollar." "McKim told him that Wilkinson would probably offer him money. The impression he received from McKim was that he (witness) was to take the money and take it to the Speaker."

Mr. Caldwell testified that he was first approached by Mr. Lyon.

Mr. Dowling testified that "on the morning of the 13th of March, Mr. Bishop, M.P.P., and Mr. McKim, M.P.P., came to him in the Continental hotel and told him that he was wanted by Mr. Wilkinson at the Walker house."

Mr. Bishop; "McKim came to him on the 13th of March last, and asked him to show him to Dr. Dowling's room."

Mr. Lyon was asked by Mr. Blake; Who was it that first approached you in connection with your vote?" He replied: "Mr. McKim."

The extracts are taken from the Globe's report. —Hamilton Spectator.

Lieutenant Greely.

Lieut. Greely, the hero of the latest North Pole failure, was born in Massachusetts, and is about 40 years of age. He is not a graduate of any military academy, and he entered the war as a private. His military record is highly honourable. From private he was promoted to corporal and sergeant in Company B of the Nineteenth Massachusetts Infantry. On the 18th of March, 1863, he was made second lieutenant in the Eighty-first United States Coloured Infantry, and in April, 1864, he was promoted to First Lieutenant. He was brevetted Major on the 13th of March, 1865, "for faithful and meritorious service." He was made Captain of the Eighty-first Coloured Infantry on the 4th of April, 1865, and on the 27th of March, 1867, he was honourably mustered out. Upon the recognization in 1869 he assigned to the Fifth Cavalry, and became First Lieutenant in 1873, which is his present rank.

Still Slandering Canada.

"The London Advertiser advances the statement that factories are idle in Brantford, supporting the claim by the assertion that the railway workshops and cotton mills are closed. As work has been resumed in both these places after a merely temporary cessation, it would certainly be in order for the Advertiser to advance some substantial and truthful ground for its statements. As we informed our contemporary a few days ago, the manufactories in Brantford were never more prosperous than at the present time. If the Advertiser deems the assertion a prejudiced one, let it take the word of the Reform organ published in this city, which but a short time since candidly admitted that, as far as Brantford was concerned, there was not the slightest depression in manufacturing circles."—Brantford Courier.

The Mackay-Bennett Cable.

LONDON, July 22.—The prompt completion of the splicing of the sub-Atlantic cable is a source of great rejoicing in the little town of Waterville, Ireland, and an enthusiastic dinner is in progress this evening at the Lake hotel. The return of the steamer Faraday will doubtless be the signal for anothes series of warm congratulations upon the success. The shore end of the second cable is already laid here and Siemens Bros. have 2,000 miles of it completed and ready for coiling in the Faraday's tanks. After the steamer has paid out this length of the northerly cable, she will return to Waterville and be employed in the task of laying the section which is to connect Ireland with France. —Mail.

The Health of the Arctic Explorers.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., July 22.—The Loch Garry left this port yesterday afternoon for New York. She takes the mails of the expedition of Lieut. Greeley and of the survivors. Lieut. Greeley's strength is steadily increasing. Frederick, Connell, Long, Brainerd and Beiderbeck are progressing amazingly. The Alert will be despatched 48 hours in advance of the Thetis and the Bear, so that the squadron may reach New York simultaneously. The bodies of the dead will probably be taken to Governor's Island and placed in charge of General Hancock until the decision is reached as to their final disposition.

A Glorious Crop.

LYONS, July 22.—The largest wheat crop raised in Wyne and Ontario counties for many years is now being cut. Corn looks finer than for several years. The crop will probably be much larger than last year. Oats promise well. Barley has increased in acreage and will be an immense crop. Hops have been much damaged by the recent hail storms.

Truth Bible Competition

NO. ELEVEN.

THE FINAL ONE!

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by any Publisher.

RESIDENTS OF TORONTO INADMISSABLE.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER!

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable other Valuable Rewards.

DONT'T DELAY SENDING IN YOUR ANSWERS.

At the solicitation of many friends Truth announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Any one residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. We hope the publisher of Truth will meet with the success his enterprise so richly merits. Everything he has offered in previous Bible Competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. We most heartily commend the paper to our readers. They will find it all it is represented to be. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in Truth the week following the close of each competition. There will be no chance, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is Gold first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was only one language and one speech on the whole earth?

3.—When is Inn first referred to in the Bible? by the word inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment, commonly known now as an hotel).

Everyone competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months subscription to Truth. And aside from the rewards themselves they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. Truth is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, as you will get Truth for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided you answers are correct, and reach Truth office in time. Don't delay.

The land mentioned above could be divided up into building lots and sold to great advantage, as there are no vacant houses in the town of Clifton or Niagara Falls, as it is now called. Then, that even the last ones may not feel that they are to be left out, Truth will give a series of

The further you live from Toronto the better you can compete for these last or consolation rewards. Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of Truth that gets number one in these consolation rewards. The offer is open only to the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the post mark, where mailed, of the date of 15th September, it will take its place in the order received at Truth office. Fifteen days after date of closing will be allowed for letters from distant points to reach Toronto, but don't forget your letter must not bear a later post mark than September 15. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six months' subscription to Truth, which will be sent to any desired address for the twelve months. Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now, and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaing a valuable reward in addition to Truth

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50 each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid rolled gold brooch; new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopædia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact every Province was represented in the last, not excepting British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first, you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. Truth directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value. This we think exceedingly fair, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, as Truth says, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph or in any way but through the post-office or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S. Frank Wilson, Truth office, 33 and 35 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

GALWAY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

GRAIN PROSPECTS.—The grain here is in a very favorable condition, although the spring crops are not yet ripening. The hay is very p or. Last year it was superabundant and some farmers were careless in gathering all of it. So this year they are visited with its scarcity in as great a degree. The weather could not be better for haying purposes.

UNION S. S. PICNIC.—On the 11th of July a picnic was held for the scholars of our Union S. Scho l, at Detman's Grove. Everyone participated both in the enjoyment and the edibles prepared by the generous ladies. Mr. Graham, the Superintendent of the school, deserves credit for the manner in which everything was conducted under his guidance.

OUR VILLAGE METROPOLIS.—The village of Kinmount, the centre of our trade, is rapidly progressing; and if it continues so in a few years will be considered as an incorporated town. It consists of quite a number of general stores, besides a grist mill, two saw mills (one water power, the other is run by steam), also a mill for manufacturing staves. Mr. J. H. Dixon, proprietor of one of the mills, is busily cutting shingles and shipping them to Springfield, Mass. Since the 15th of June no less than 400,000 shingles have been cut, besides 3,000 ties and great quantities of lumber, Mr. Thorndyke, of Lakefield, acts as filer. It is said he performs his work efficiently, therefore Mr. Dixon can be liberal in "point of board." The streets of the village are being bordered with sound board walks, so we can now say we have a village rising out of "the forest primeval."

HYMENEAL.—Within the last two weeks two of our tradesmen of Kinmount have departed from the ranks of bachelors, and each took to himself a fair daughter of Eve. We heartily wish them every enjoymont their new life can afford, and many an anniversary of the blissful day when they and theirs became one.

ALLANDALE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TEMPERANCE.—The temple had an open meeting on July 19. The hall was crowded. The Worthy Chief Templar discharged the duties of chairman. Excellent recitations were given by Mr. S. Armstrong, Miss Maggie Armstrong and Maggie Mask. Dr. Massie read "The Rumseller's Dream" with effect, and in such a manner as to leave little room for criticism. A dialogue by Miss Hastie, Messrs. Albert Armstrong and R. Bevis was well rendered. Miss McCormack, of the Saved Army, gave an eloquent and earnest address on temperance, which was listened to with deep attention and received with applause. Music by members of the temple. Misses S. Hope and S. Mark presided at the organ. The temple has eighty members.

THE S. A.—The Saved Army are still working earnestly and faithfully under the direction of Miss McCormack, who has attained a high position in the estimation of this neighborhood. The work is progressing slowly, but hopes are entertained that greater results will soon follow.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT.—The "Unsaved Army" held a meeting near the bridge on Sunday evening and Monday morning from 11 to 2 o'clock. Their conduct was most disorderly and should be promptly checked.

KEENE.

From our Own Correspondent.

MECHANICS WANTED.—A number of bricklayers are wanted at the new Presbyterian Church. The whole work is kept back because Mr. Mein has not been able to get as many bricklayers as he wants. High wages are being offered.

V. B. B.—The Victoria Brass Band has commenced to practice steadily again. A number of new members have united with the band, and some changes have been made. The band has thus been improved.

SAVED ARMY.—Meetings of the Saved Army will be held on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 o'clock and on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The new officer is expected to be in command. Lieut. Boyler and Mr. Munro have been very active in the work, still the Army feels the removal of Lieut. Webb and Lieut. Bennet, who were very popular. With your Allandale correspondent, I wish the Army every success, and anything that has been said was not written with the intention of injuring the Army.

THE CROPS.—Farmers are beginning to cut the fall wheat, which is a very good crop. A few are complaining of a little rust, but not many.

HASTINGS.

PEDESTRIANISM.—A foot race between Geo. Cameron, of Toronto, and John Murray, of this village, came off in the park last Thursday afternoon, Cameron winning easily. The defeat is nothing to the discredit of the loser, as his opponent is a semi-professional.

A LIVELY WEEK.—Last week was one of more than usual excitement in our little town. We had two excursion parties from Peterborough holding picnics in Johnson's park. We had two excursions and picnics up the lake. We had a matched foot race between a semi-professional and a local runner. A lacrosse match, Norwood vs. Hastings, a couple of cases of assault and battery, and several cases for magisterial adjudication, all of which were disposed of in good order, leaving those concerned poorer if not wiser.

GARDEN PARTY.—On the afternoon and evening of Tuesday, 15th July, the Presbyterians held a garden party in the orchard of Mr. Wm. Fowlds. A very pleasant time was spent by all present. Both old and young enjoyed themselves in the various amusements, and in having a social chat over the tea, coffee, cake and ice cream prepared and provided by the ladies of the congregation. The amount realized was $40. The ladies contemplate having a dinner on Thanksgiving Day, in order to raise $100. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fowlds, for the use of their orchard and lawn, and also to all the ladies who assisted in the work. The national anthem having been sung by the company, the party dispersed at 10 o'clock p. m.—Star.

BELLEVILLE.

EXPLOSION.—An explosion of gas occurred on Monday morning in a well in the northern part of this city. One of the well-diggers was badly burned about the face and hands.

MIDLAND.

DROWNED.—A man named King was drowned from the steamer Nellie Cuthbert on Sunday last between Midland and Moskosh. Deceased was engineer at McLeod's mill in Midland.

Struck by Lightning.

UPTON, July 21.—A boy named Napoleon Dion, aged 15 years, was instantly killed by lightning here on Saturday afternoon, while returning home from picking strawberries.

A New Postal Arrangement.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—An understanding between the United States Post Office Department and Canadian Postal department has been reached whereby printed matter, lithographs, chromos, &c., sent by United States publishers as premiums to subscribers in Canada and which heretofore have been excluded from the mails for the Dominion because of their dutiable character, may hereafter be admitted to said mails subject to such regulations and liabilities to customs duties as the customs law of Canada may impose.

The Sham Farmers.

The Brandon correspondent of the Winnipeg Free Press gives a short account of the interview between the Committee of the Farmers' Union and Mr. Burgess, Deputy Minister of the Interior. The former complained of the frequency of the changes in the land regulations in the past, as having been injurious to the settlers, but the important statement is that "the committee thought that the present law, if left alone and not further tinkered, is a tolerable one." That is certainly a very important statement. Even if we admit that there have been too many changes in the past, it is something to know that the Government's present policy is so good that even the irreconcilables among the leaders of the Farmers' Union do not want any change in it. Surely that is a testimony that is worth something as an offset to the Opposition nonsense about the land regulations in the Northwest.—Montreal Gazette.

A New Polar Expedition.

A new plan for the polar expedition has been submitted by several officers of the Russian Navy to the Minister, Admiral Skestakoff. Starting with the conviction that it is impossible to reach the North Pole by sea on account of the islands that surround the polar region, the Russian officers propose to start an expedition in sledges from the new Siberian Islands, which are 000 nautical miles distant from the goal. This space is to be covered by sledge parties, who would make depots of provisions in the newly discovered islands, and thus slowly but surely advance toward the north, securing at the same time the return journey of the expedition. When elaborated, the scheme will be submitted to the learned societies of Russia and the necessary funds raised, partly by subscription, though it is probable that if the Government approves it, it will advance at least part of the expenses.

Murdered her Baby

TORONTO, July, 22.—A young woman who gave the name of Lizzie Smith went to the house of Mrs. Bailey, in rear of 48 Edward street Toronto, on Monday night on the recommendation of Mrs. Ward, a registry office keeper, to remain a few days. She said she was poorly and wanted rest. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the girl went to the water-closet and gave birth to a healthy female child, which she cruelly threw into the vault. A couple of neighboring women saw or heard the crime committed and reported it to the police. The unnatural mother was arrested. Last night Coroner Johnson held an inquest at the city morgue. Positive evidence was given by several women as to the commission of the crime, and the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder. The girl told Detective Reid yesterday that the child was dropped into the vault accidentally. She said the father's name was Wm. Halliwell, a plasterer, but she would not say anything further about her trouble. The girl is now in the hospital at the jail. The coroner fully committed her for trial.

What Is Discount?

In answering an inquiry, the New York Journal of Commerce says: The word "discount" has almost wholly lost its technical meaning. It was originally used to describe an allowance made for the payment of money before it became due, and in this sense is as much as that money, if put to interest, would gain in the same time and at the same rate. Thus $100 present money will pay a debt of $106 due one year hence, the discount being made at 6 per cent. The discount, in this sense, on any sum is less than its interest. Thus the discount on $100 due a year hence, is $6, while the interest is $6.36. But the interest laws of the several States have allowed the banks to deduct the interest instead of the discount, and to pay the borrowed instead of the present worth only the net remainder after such deduction. Thus if a man makes a note for $1,000 twelve months, and gives it to a bank for discount, instead of paying him $943.30, which is a sum that at 6 per cent, would amount to $1,000 in a year, they give him only $940, thus charging him more than 6 per cent. for the sum he receives. In plain terms, they deduct the interest instead of the discount. Out of this has grown the modern use of the word discount, which has simply come to mean a deduction of a given rate per cent. from a given principal. To "discount a note at 6 per cent." is now only to take off 6 per cent. interest. To allow a discount is take off the rate from the face of the sum.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Light to moderate winds; fine, very warm weather.

Foresters' Excursion.

A large party, amounting to many hundreds, started this morning for the Foresters' excursion to Orillia. The splendid Band of the Peterborough Fire Brigade accompanied them. They had a lovely day, and, no doubt, enjoyed the trip.

Card of Thanks.

The ladies of Ashburnham interested in the St. Peter's Church building fund offer their sincere thanks to the ladies of Peterborough for their kindness in assisting at the picnic held on the river on the 22nd inst. Also to the ladies of Otonabee, who did everything in their power to make the picnic a success.

A Good Rule.

One of the largest advertisers and most successful business men of New Orleans said:—"The duller the business is the more I advertise, and I find it pays to do so. When trade is dull I keep my business prominently before the people and I get my reward when trade does start. When business is rushing I don't need as much advertising as when it is depressed."

Cigar Factory.

We are glad to learn that we are to have a new industry established in town. Messrs. Quirk, Miller & Co., have rented a building on Simcoe Street and intend in a few days to commence manufacturing cigars. We learn that they intend making a specialty of fine brands of these goods, and they should soon have an extensive business.

Smith's Market.

Another Lacrosse Match.

The Secretary of the Lacrosse Club has received a letter from the Secretary of the Acmes, of Toronto, asking that a match be played between that club and the Peterborough on Aug. 18th. Toronto will have its civic holiday on that day and there will be an excursion to this town, and the Acmes wish to arrange a match to be played here. It is probable—we might say certain—that the challenge will be accepted. Some of the players who visited Peterborough last year with the Maitlands will be in the Acmes' team.

At Faucher's Restaurant,

Fresh Oysters received twice a week.

THE GIRLS' HOME.

The Fancy Bazaar at Hazelbrae most successful Financially and otherwise.

Doubtless the threatening aspect which the weather had worn for the twenty-four hours previous to the opening of the garden party at Hazelbrae on Wednesday evening, had prevented even the more sanguine from anticipating the success which was to attend that affair. Fortunately for those interested, no obstacle from this source supervened to mar the enjoyment of the proceedings; and, but for the fact that the ample grounds about the building were not perhaps utilized by the guests to the extent that their beauty would otherwise have warranted, it would be difficult to conjecture in what particular the evening's pleasure could have been augmented.

A large number of people began to arrive early in the evening, and before the sale terminated, close upon seven hundred persons had passed through the gates; this, in itself, adding a considerable increment to the total receipts.

A row of Chinese lanterns fringed the drive up to the front entrance, by the light of which large crowds could be seen either sauntering about the grounds or seated listening to the band which performed immediately in front of the portal.

In the verandahs, the halls, and the large appartment which at present is used as a playroom for the girls, innumerable varieties of articles were exposed for sale. Amongst these were several that were altogether outside the category of the ordinary stock-in-trade of a fancy bazaar, such, for example, as good, strong, useful brushes and brooms, made, we understand, by the boys themselves, who are under Dr. Barnardo's care in England. Then there were photographs of that philanthropic gentleman himself; various little works explaining his method of rescuing city arabs, etc., etc. Not a few of the specimens of fancy needlework and painting were highly artistic; and not least must be mentioned an army of dolls, the majority of which no doubt found themselves in the hands of the little folks in whose behalf the sale was held.

These little folks were by no means a minor feature of the evening's entertainment. When it is known that they number a hundred and thirty, it is high praise to be able to say that one and all, by their neat and cleanly appearance, testified to the care that is bestowed upon them; this, too, when only two days had elapsed since their arrival after an ocean voyage and a long railway journey. They are also, we hear, tractable, docile, and entirely amenable to discipline. During the course of the evening they favored the visitors with several songs.

The financial part of the bazaar, to judge by the amount of money left in the hands of the fair vendors at the close of the day, must be considered satisfactory. Sixty-three dollars were taken at the gates; flowers, in the shape of bouquets, etc., brought in fifteen dollars; and the total amount of receipts (as far as we could ascertain) was $184.58.

To have thus planned and carried out a project of no small dimensions, entailed, without doubt, a large amount of labor on the part of the generous ladies and gentlemen who so courageously undertook it. We can only hope that they will regard it as an incontrovertible triumph, that, as such, will give them greater hopes for the future of the institution which, no one can hesitate to assert, has already obtained a firm footing in the town of Peterborough.

LACROSSE MATCH.

The Second Twelve Defeat the Trents, of Hastings, by Three Straights.

The representatives of the Trent Lacrosse Club, of Hastings, arrived in Peterborough on the forenoon Grand Junction train on Wednesday. They put up at the Croft House, and in the afternoon proceeded to the Ashburnham cricket grounds, where a match was played between them and the second twelve of the Peterboroughs. It was nearly three o'clock when the players took their positions on the field as follows:—

| Peterboroughs. | | Trents. |
|---|---|---|
| H. Nell | Goal | G. Hill |
| J. Coughlin | Point | H. Fowlds |
| E. Rogers | Cover Point | J. B. Ward |
| W. Welsh | Defence Field | W. Soles |
| F. Traynor | " " | J. Berry |
| S. G. Wright | " " | J. Malcolm |
| S. Heaps | Centre Field | J. C. Fowlds |
| A. Mooney | Home Field | G. Brenton |
| R. Begley | " " | J. Wilson |
| J. Canning | " " | T. Huycke |
| J. Carveth | 2nd Home | H. Gibson |
| D. Dyell | 1st Home | A. Butler |
| Jas. Sheehy | Field Captain | F. H. Brennan |

Mr. T. Spencer was chosen referee, and J. Mercer and A. Wilson acted as umpires.

The ball was faced by Heaps and J. Fowlds. Heaps got the ball and passed it to Mooney. It then went to the Trent goal and there was some lively play. Both sides played very well, but it was soon seen that the Peterborough boys had the advantage, although their defence was called on to defend the goal more than once. Finally Begley dropped the ball to Canning, who put it through the flags, and Peterborough had won the first game in three minutes.

The second game lasted a little longer and was won by a good play. There was a scuffle for the ball in centre, and Mooney ran in, picked it up, ran a short distance towards the goal, and threw it between the stakes. Time, nine minutes.

The Trents made a slight change in the positions of their men for the third game, but it was won also by the Peterborough boys. After five minutes play Canning dropped the ball in front of the goal and Dyell passed it through.

The second twelve made some good playing in this match, and several members of the team did excellent work. The Trents are an athletic looking team, but in handling the ball they are deficient. The usual cheers were given and the players returned to the town. There was a fair attendance of spectators.

Bass' English Ale.

Wedding Presents.

No store in Peterborough offers as large a variety of Wedding Presents as China Hall and all at reasonable prices. Almost every article in the large establishment is suitable for a present and the stock in point of newest and elegance of design is equal to that of any store in Canada. We would advise any one about purchasing a wedding or birthday present to visit China Hall you could hardly fail to make a selection from the magnificant window of new goods now on exhibition, although it is only an index to the thousand and one lovely articles to be found inside.

An Equine Anti-Bicyclist.

About mid-day to-day in George street, near Smith's market, stood a horse—quiet, innoffensive. At the same time and place approached a bicyclist—equally quiet, inoffensive. But, like the constituents of gun-powder—inert apart, uncontrollable when united, the latter had a most peculiar effect upon the former; in short, the hitherto quiet, inoffensive animal became quite the reverse, and his unmanagable caperings resulted in damaging effects to the vehicle to which he was harnessed. Unfortunately, too, this contained as occupants a man, a woman and two children. Luckily no one was injured, but the buggy had a wheel broken. The restive horse was attached to another conveyance and the whole party, including the injured cart, departed in peace—happily not in pieces.

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

Parasols and Sunshades

we mark down too, we began the season with about a dozen old ones. We want to end it the same way. In fact this remark applies to all lines of our stock. It was bought to sell, and sell it must. Our prices, like our goods, are proper.

READY CLEANER

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING PURPOSES.

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkolies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

A HOME DRUGGIST TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

Mr. A. H. Blakeley, of the bureau of manufacturing statistics, Ottawa, is in town to-day, visiting the manufacturing industries of Peterborough.

Mr. J. O. Snider, the agent of the Ontario Mutual, has returned home from a trip to the Thousand Islands.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Moderate winds, generally fair weather with local showers in the south-western portion, not much change in temperature.

Any ladies desirous of a knowledge of the art will do well to call and investigate, as it is within the reach of all. The only system in the world that is one small piece.

Base Ball Match.

A base ball match will be played on the cricket ground, Ashburnham, on the afternoon of Tuesday next, commencing at 1.30 o'clock sharp, between the Silver Stars, of Peterborough, and the Lindsay club. The Stars were beaten by the Lindsay club this spring, but they have been practising since then and believe they can make the match more interesting. A close match and a well-played one may reasonably be expected.

The Ontario & Quebec.

A special train passed through Peterborough at noon to-day on the Ontario & Quebec Railway with the official car, which contained a party of officials of the road. Among those in the party were Mr. Geo. Stephens, President of the C. P. R. Company; Mr. Van Horn, General Manager; Mr. T. S. Shaughnessy, Assistant General Manager; and Mr. W. Whyte, Manager of the Ontario Division. They had come from Montreal over the line, and after spending a few minutes here proceeded to Toronto.

Club Swinging Match.

Mr. Thos. McNaughton has arranged for an Indian club swinging match with Mr. Nunn, the noted club swinger of Toronto. It will take place in Peterborough on Wednesday evening next.

Arm Broken.

A little son of Mr. VanEvery, of the firm of VanEvery & Co., had his right arm broken by being run over by a waggon on Thursday evening. He, with other boys, was playing on the street, and he slipped and fell under the wagon, which was loaded with hay. The wheel passed over his right arm, breaking it above the elbow, and his thigh was also injured. The injuries were promptly attended to and the little fellow is doing well.

Rendering Paper Waterproof.

Labels may be fixed upon tin boxes, etc., exposed to damp by the following method: White of egg is diluted with one-half part water, and applied with a brush to the surfaces to be united. A hot iron is then passed over the paper, so as to coagulate the albumen. By means of a successive layers of paper and albumen, waterproof boxes, etc., may be formed.—Cosmos les Modes.

A Big Elm.

On Wednesday last, as some parties were travelling through a bush a few miles northwest from this village, they found a giant elm tree, which measured thirty-three feet in circumference four feet from the ground being eleven feet in diameter. The tree is very high, and its magnificent crown of foliage can be seen for miles towering high above all the other trees of the forest. This tree is said to be the largest tree standing probably in this township.—Ex

Lieutenant Greely and his Men.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Greely party will be received at Portsmouth, N.H., by the Secretary of the Navy, the officers of the North Atlantic Squadron, and the States and local authorities. Greely and his men will disembark at Portsmouth, and the vessels will proceed to New York with the bodies of the dead, which will be landed at Governor's Island and placed in charge of General Hancock. The latter will transfer them to the care of their relatives and friends upon application. The vessels are expected at New York the first of August.

MIDLAND.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A young man named Willie Baker was instantly killed in the Ontario Lumber Company's mill here on Thursday afternoon while putting a belt on a pully. Both his legs and arms torn from the body. Baker was a sober and industrious young man, and his loss will be severely felt not only by his sorrowing parents but the village at large.

INFORMATION FOR THE LADIES.

THE FASHIONS.

Striped silks promise to be largely worn for the house.

Flowers in the hair are almost exclusively restricted to full dress.

Tamise cloth, made in tailor style, is used much for travelling suits.

From Paris the short waists of the first empire are announced.

Fedora ruchings are seen in bright red and orange silk mulls.

Collars and cuffs of white pique are to be worn by the ladies.

A great deal of jetted lace will be used on wraps and costumes.

When a cuff is used on a costume, it is narrow and of simple design.

For ladies the loose vest will be more worn in the polonaise than basque.

Pompadour flowers are sewed all over the material which covers some bonnets.

Flowers and feathers figure largely in the new evening, dinner, and ball toilets.

STOCKINGS 150 YEARS OLD.

Mrs. Spalding, widow of Henry Spalding, is the owner of a pair of stockings, kept as an heirloom in the family, that are 150 years old, originally belonging to Harvey Moore, the grandfather of Henry Moore, and knit by his wife Elizabeth Moore. The cotton was raised by Harvey Moore, and spun and knit by his wife. They are the style worn with short clothes, and come above the knees.—Lebanon (Ky.) Standard-Times.

WOMAN AND HER CLOTHES.

It is singular that the average woman has so few well defined preferences in regard to the fashion of her own clothes. She waits to be told whether she shall wear her skirts long or short; her sleeves close or full; her bodice straight or en basque, its neck high or low; her skirts weighted with material enough to kill (in time) the strongest man or too scant to be able to climb a door-step unaided. There is a little advance. Thousands used to ask, "What is fashionable in colour and design?" and blindly follow. Now, in asking such questions they usually state their own good or bad points, and ask how they can adapt styles and colours to them. This develops another curious fact, that women have no illusions in regard to themselves, and to one who does not know them, or is never likely to see or become personally acquainted with them, they speak of their own short comings, of "sallowness," of the possession of a "good" or "poor" figure, and other more or less noticeable defect of face or form, with relentless accuracy and from a purely impersonal point of view.

His Royal Higness inspected the team, and complimented the men on their excellent shooting, and congratulated the Dominion upon its unity, as exhibited by representatives from all the provinces contending for the cup, which they had more than once already won, after a hardly contested struggle. Sir Chas. Tupper presented the Kolapore cup to Private J. Mitchell, of the 13th Batt., Hamilton, Ont., who made the highest aggregate score. ### JUDGE BETWEEN THEM.

LIKE other Reform papers the Ottawa Free Press, now that we have obtained our territorial rights, of which Mr. Mowat has been depriving this province for many years, impudently asks the people to thank this dishonest betrayer of our just claims, because their maintenance has been forced upon him against his will. Indeed the Reform organ at the Dominion capital goes even further than its fellows, for it utters the following audacious falsehood :—

"With Mr. Meredith in power, Ontario's case would have been abandoned !"

As sufficient answer to this slander it will be enough to quote the following resolution which was proposed in the Legislative Assembly by Mr. Meredith and was voted down by Mr. Mowat and his supporters, who would not go to the Privy Council till forced to do so :—

"That this House, in view of the declarations of the leader of the Government, that 'the urgent importance of the immediate settlement of the boundaries of Ontario has been repeatedly affirmed by the Government of Canada before Confederation and afterwards, and the urgency has been increasing year by year,' and that 'it never was so great as it now is,' regrets that no steps have been taken by the Government of Ontario for the final determination of the boundaries in dispute by means of a reference to the judicial committee of the Privy Council of England, although the Federal authorities continue to urge upon them a settlement by that method, and evince a willingness to agree to just arrangements for the administration of justice, and the management and disposal of the lands in, and the government of, the territory in dispute, pending the reference; and in the opinion of this House the responsibility for the evils arising from the delay which has occurred since the refusal of the Parliament of Canada to give effect to the award, or which may hereafter take place, rests upon the Government of Ontario."

This has been the Conservative policy for years, but Mr. Mowat has kept us out of our rights, sacrificing our interests that he might have some apparent foundation for a dishonest election cry.

WEST ONTARIO.

THE wire pullers have been successful in the preliminary step to carry out the arrangements between Messrs. Mowat, Blake and Wheler to to force a candidate upon the Reformers of West Ontario. Mr. J. D. Edgar of the Globe office, and of the Mercer estate has received the nomination of the adjourned convention. It was not a full or a regularly constituted convention; some of the staunchest Refrom districts, for instance Newcastle, Whitchurch and Pickering, refused to be represented in this farcical proceeding, and for some districts pretended representatives were irregularly chosen. Even of those who attended some protested against the attempted coercion and even left the meeting rather than sanction it by their presence.

Mr. Wheler was called upon to speak and exposed the falsehood of the Globe by owning that a Provincial appointment had been offered for his acceptance. He also confessed to making arrangement to pay a man to go through part of the Riding to clear up matters. Mr. Edgar also spoke and abused the Reformers who had ventured to remonstrate against having such a ill-omened candidate as himself thrust upon them. These "Tories," as he called them, may have something to say about this at the polls.

To the Conservatives it matters very little what particular Reformer represents West Ontario. But the whole community is interested in seeing that our constitutional system of managing the affairs of the country by representatives freely chosen by the voters in the different electorates is not over ridden by this new Reform device of having pretended representatives who are really the nominees and creatures of a few party wire-pullers.

A still worse aspect of the case is that Mr. Mowat, who is entrusted with the official patronage of the Province for the benefit of Ontario, should dishonestly and corcorruptly use it for the benefit of his party leaders at Ottawa. This scheme was falsely denied by the Globe, but the fact has now been admitted both by Mr. Blake and Mr. Wheler. Is this because they are more truthful or more shameless than the Globe?

THE LAKEFIELD REGATTA.

Well Contested Events—The Illuminated Parade in the Evening.

From Our Own Correspondent.

On Tuesday afternoon, July 23rd, a regatta was held on Lake Katchewanoonka, Lakefield, the result of which was most satisfactory to all concerned. The weather was most propitious and a fair number of spectators assembled to witness the races, which came off in the following order :—1, Sailing races for canoes of 16 ft. and under ; 2, Double hunting canoes ; 3, Single hunting canoes ; 4, Pair oar sculls, with lady coxswains (decidedly the most attractive in the programme) ; 5, Four paddle race, and 6, Hurry Scurry. The wind was most favorable for the sailing race, which was won by Dr. Douglass, who came in a good six minutes ahead of all competitors in a 14 foot canvas boat. The hero of the paddling races was Tobaco, an Indian, who steered the winning double hunting canoe : and won the single canoe and hurry scurry races, although he was closely pressed in both events by Mr. Weller, who made a good second. Tobaco also formed one of the crew of the winning canoe, paddled by four, and there can be no doubt that as he cast his eye upon the site destined by nature for such an edifice, he deeply regretted that no summer hotel adorned the shore of the lake, from the balcony of which fair strangers might have witnessed his prowess, and afterwards have proclaimed to the world that Lakefield is the most desirable place in Ontario for a summer residence, and that notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, the noble red man has not yet become a thing of the past. But to come back to my subject. The pair oar sculls, with lady steerers, was a feature in the proceedings as delightful as it was novel, and was thought by many to be the event of the day. There were three or four old 'Varsity men on the course who remembered coxswains of a very different spirit, and who could not but think that if Tennyson's "Sweet girl graduates with their golden hair" would on all occasions act in this capacity, boating would be the most fascinating amusement in the world, even a muddy old canoe. This race was won by the boat steered by Miss Strickland, with Mr. Grevie, stroke, and Dr. Douglass, bow. The second boat was steered by Miss Emma Strickland, of Ashburnham, Will. Arbuthnot, stroke, and W. S. Strickland, bow. Each of the lady coxswains of the winning boats received a gold locket as her share of the prize. The other boats, five in all, kept well together, and made a good race of it. There were several races for boys and Messrs. Weller and Arbuthnot (who certainly deserve the thanks of the public for their good-natured pluck), proved how very easy it is to upset a canoe and how very difficult to right it again, from the water. At the close of the afternoon's proceedings the prizes, many of which were very handsome, were distributed by Miss Fanny Strickland, who performed that duty most gracefully. It is only fair to add that much of the success was due to the indefatigable exertions of our public spirited reeve, Mr. R. C. Strickland.

In the evening there was a procession of illuminated canoes, further enlivened by fireworks, bonfires and brightly illuminated windows on the Smithtown shore. The prize for the best illuminated canoe was won by Mr. Geo. Cochrane. The City Band, of Peterborough, was in attendance. The last sound heard on the still night air was the shrill whistle of the locomotive calling some reluctant revellers to come away !

Dr. Koch's Recommendations for use in Cholera Cases.

The following is the note presented by Dr. Koch to the Mayor of Toulon :—

"Cholera is propagated by people, and is communicated almost without exception by direct contact with human beings or the articles they wear. In time of cholera it is necessary to lead a regular life, experience showing that digestive derangements promote the outbreak of cholera. Excess in eating and drinking should therefore be avoided, as also heavy food which may produce diarrhœa. Send for a doctor as soon as the latter appears. Swallow no food coming from an infected house. Articles coming from an unknown quarter should be cooked ; I mention milk in particular. All water defiled by man should be prohibited. Doubtful water to be avoided is that coming from shallow wells in inhabited spots, and from marshes, ponds, brooks, or watercourses receiving and conveying contaminated water. Water is considered especially dangerous which in any way has been defiled by choleraic evacuations. As a corollary of the foregoing it may be added that water used in washing dishes or linen should not be thrown into wells or streams or the vicinity of them. When it is impossible to obtain water pure, the simplest plan is to boil it. This refers not merely to drinking, but to kitchen water, for the choleraic germ may be transmitted when in water to the person using it for washing linen or dishes, or for preparing food or for ablutions. The chief lesson from this remark is that water drunk is not the only vehicle of the choleraic germ.

That water is pure or boiled is not an absolute safeguard. Any case of cholera may become a centre of infection. The patients should be removed and unnecessary contact avoided. In time of cholera avoid large gatherings, such as fairs, festivals, and meetings. In rooms where there are choleraic patients eat and drink nothing. Choleraic evacuations should be collected in vessels containing a solution of carbolic acid. The apartments of choleraic patients should be left uninhabited for six days. Persons having had contact with patients should wash their hands in soap and water and a solution of carbolic acid. In case of death the body should be immediately removed, and the funeral should be as plain as possible. The procession should not enter the dead-house. Articles used by patients should not be transported till after disinfection. Laundresses should not take the linen of patients unless disinfected. Precautions other than the above are either unknown or not recommended.

Crop Prospects in New York State.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 23.—Crop reports from the principal grain producing counties in this State point to a wheat acreage of 700,000 acres. The yield will greatly exceed that of 1883, and nearly that of 1881, while the crop is fine. The corn average is about the same as last year, but its condition is backward and unfavorable. Oats were retarded by early drought, but are making it up now ; the prospects for a large crop are excellent. Barley and rye are average crops. Pototoes greatly need rain. The apple crop is fair.

Prof. Wiggins' Latest Freak.

OTTAWA, July 22.—Prof. Wiggins says that an infusion of taraxacum vulgare or common tansy, taken both as a drink and as a clyster effectually prevent the spread of cholera. He has tried it on different microbes and it kills them instantaneously. He says its general use will wipe the cholera from Europe in 24 hours. —World.

Extensive forest fires are raging in Michigan owing to the long-continued drouth. Hundreds of men are fighting the flames, which are spreading with fearful rapidity. Whole sections have been completely devastated.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

A strangely solemn expression drifted over her countenance, but at that moment a tall form darkened the doorway, and she smiled.

"Come in, Gen. Laurance. Punctuality is essentially an American virtue, rarely displayed in this dolce far niente land; and you exemplify its nationality. Five was the hour you named, and my little Swiss tell-tale is even now sounding the last stroke."

She did not rise, seemed on the contary, to sink farther back in her velvet-lined chair; and bending down, Gen. Laurance touched her hand.

"When a man's happiness for all time is at stake, does he loiter on his way to receive the verdict? Surely you will"——

He paused and glanced significantly at the figure whose white cap was bowed low, as its wearer slumbered over the interminable crochet.

"May not this interview at least be sacred from the presence of your keepers?"

"Poor dear soul, she is happily oblivious, and will take no stenographic notes. I would as soon declare war against my own shadow, as order her away."

Evidently chagrined, the visitor stood irresolute, and meanwhile the gaze of his companion wandered back to the beauty of the Bay.

He drew a chair close to that which she occupied, and holding his hat as a screen, should Mrs. Waul's spectacles chance to turn in that direction—spoke ernestly.

"Have I been unpardonably presumptuous in interpreting favourably this permission to see you once more? Have you done me the honour to ponder the contents of my letter?"

"I certainly have pondered well the contents."

She kept her hands beyond his reach, and looking steadily into his eager handsome face, she saw it flush deeply.

"Madame, I trust, I believe you are incapable of trifling."

"In which you do me bare justice only. With me the time for trifling is past, and just now life has put on all its tragic vestments. But how long since Gen. Laurance believed me incapable of—worse than trifling?"

"Ever since my infamous folly was reproved by you as it deserved. Even since you taught me that you were even more noble in soul than lovely in person. Be generous, and do not humiliate me by recalling that temporary insanity. Having blundered fearfully in my ignorance of your real character, does not the offer of yesterday embody all the reparation—all the atonement of which a man is capable?"

"You desire me to consider the proposal contained in your letter as an expiation for past offences, as an amende honorable for what might have ripened into insult, had it not been nipped in the bud? Do I translate correctly your gracious diction?"

"No, you cruelly torment me by referring to an audacious and shameful offence, for which I blush."

"Successful sins are unencumbered by penitential oblations; and only discovered and defeated crimes arouse conscience, and paint one's cheeks with mortification. Gen. Laurance merely illustrates a great social law."

"Do not, dear madam, keep me in this fiery suspense. I have offered you all that a gentleman can lay at the feet of the woman he loves."

A cold smile lighted her face, as some Arctic moonbeam gleams for an instant across the spires and domes of an iceberg.

"Once you attempted to offer me your heart, or what remains of its ossified ruins—which I declined. Now you tender me your hand and name; and, indeed, it appears that like many of the high-born class you so nobly represent, your heart and hand have never hitherto been conjoined in your devoir. It were a melancholy pity they should be eternally divorced."

Bending over her, he exclaimed:

"As heaven hears me, I swear I love you better than life—than anything else that the broad earth holds! You cannot possibly doubt my sincerity, for you hold the proof in your own hands. Be merciful, Odille, and end my anxiety."

He caught her hand, and as she attempted no resistance he raised it to his moustached lip. Her eyes were resting upon the blue expanse of water as if far away—across the vast vista of the Mediterranean, she sought some strengthening influence, some sacred inspiration; and after a moment, turning them full upon his countenance, she said with grave, stony composure:

"You have asked me to become your wife, knowing full well that no affection would prompt me to entertain the thought; and you must be thoroughly convinced that only sordid motives of policy could influence me to accept you. Do men who marry under such circumstances honor and trust the woman who as a dernier ressort, bear their names? You are not so weak, so egregiously vain, as to delude yourself for one instant with the supposition that I could ever love you?"

"Once my wife, I ask nothing more. Upon my own head and life be the failure to make you love me. Only give me this hand and I will take your heart. Can a lover ask less, and hazard more?"

"And if you fail—woefully—as fail you must?"

"I shall not. You cannot awe or discourage me, for I have yet to find the heart that successfully defies my worship. But if you remained indifferent—ah loveliest! you would not! Even then I should be blessed by your presence, your society, and that alone were worth all other women."

"Even though it cost you the heavy, galling burden of marriage vows—an exorbitant price, which only necessity extorts? How vividly we of the nineteenth century exemplify the wisdom of the classic aphorisms! Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat. Have you no fear that you are seizing with bare fingers a glistening blade, which may flesh itself in the hand that dares to caress it?"

"I fear nothing but your rejection, and though you should prove Judith or Jael I would disarm you thus."

Again he kissed the fair slender hand, and clasped it tenderly between both his own.

"A man of your age does not lightly forsake the traditions of his caste, and the usages of his ancestors; and what can patricians like Gen. Laurance hope to secure by stooping to the borders of proletaire?"

"The woman whom he loves. To you I will confess that until within the past six or eight months I have never comprehended the power of genuine love. Early in life I married a high-born, gentle, true-hearted woman, who made me a good faithful wife, but into that alliance my heart never entered, and although for many years I have been free to admire whom fickle fancy chose, and have certainly petted and caressed some whom the world pronounced very lovely, the impression made upon me was transient as the perfume of a blossom plucked and worn for a few hours only. You have exerted over me a fascination which I can neither explain nor resist. For you I entertain feelings never aroused in my nature until now; and I speak only the simple truth, when I solemnly swear to you upon the honour of a Laurance, that you are the only woman I have ever truly and ardently loved."

"The honour of a Laurance? What more sacred pledge could I possibly desire?"

The fingers of her free hand were toying with the small gold chain around her neck, to which was fastened the hidden wedding ring of black agate, with its white skull; and as she spoke her scarlet lips paled perceptibly, and her soft dreamy eyes began to glitter.

"Ah! I repeat, upon my honour as a gentleman and a Laurance—and holier oath no man could offer. Of my proud unsullied name I am fastidiously careful, and can even you demand or hope a nobler one than that I now lay at your feet?"

"The name of Laurance? Certainly I think it would satisfy even my ambition."

He felt the pretty hand grow suddenly cold in his clasp, and saw the thin delicate nostril expand slightly, as she fixed her brilliant eyes on his and smiled. Then she continued:

"Is it not too sacred and aristocratic a mantle to fling around an obscure actress, of whose pedigree and antecedent life you know nothing, save that widowhood and penury goaded her to histrionic exhibitions of beauty, that sometimes threatened to subject her to impertinence and insult? Put aside thet infatuation which not unfrequently attacks men who like you are rapidly descending the hill of life—approaching the stage of second childlike simplicity—and listen for a moment to the cold dictates of prudence and policy. Suppose that are you surrendered your reason to the magnetism of what you are pleased to consider my physical 'perfection,' one of your relatives, a brother—or say even your son—had met me at Milan as you did, and madly forgettins his family rank, his aristocratic ties, all the pride and worldly wisdom of heredity, had had while in a fit of complete dementia, offered, as you have done, to clothe my humble obscurity in the splendid name of Laurance? Would Gen. Rene Laurance have pardoned him, and received me as his sister, or his daughter?"

"Could I censure any man for surrendering to charms which have so completely vanquished me? Thank Heaven! I have neither brother nor son to rival me. My only child, Cuthbert, is safely anchored in the harbour of wedlock, and having his own family ties, I am free to consult only my heart in the choice of a bride. I have not journeyed so far down the hill of life, as you cruelly persist in asserting, and the fervour of my emotions denies your unkind imputation. When I proudly show the world the lovely wife of my heart's choice, you will find my devotion a noble refutation of your unflattering estimate. But a moment since, you confessed that to exchange the name of Orme for that of Laurance, would crown your ambition; my dearest the truth has escaped you."

ANNUAL EXCURSION OF COURT PETERBOROUGH.

Over the Midland to Orillia—The Peterborough Lacrosse Club Lose the Match—Visiting Points of Interest Near the Town.

The annual excursion under the auspices of Court Peterborough C.O.F. took place on Thursday, July 24th, to Orillia. The special train left the Midland station sharply on time. A few people who were close to the station when it started were left behind, but there were over 550 persons on the train. Thirteen coaches made up the train, and they were comfortably filled, but there was little crowding. The ride was therefore an enjoyable one. At Omemee a few more excursionists were taken on and at Lindsay the party were augmented by about thirty. The whole number of excursionists that reached Orillia was about 600.

The train arrived at Orillia at a few minutes after eleven o'clock. The Fire Brigade Band, which accompanied the excursion, played up the main street to the Grand Central Hotel, where they and the lacrosse players put up. Dinner was first attended to. About one sixth of the party pic nicked at the agricultural hall, and the remainder patronized the hotel tables. There was then a short time to walk about before the lacrosse match commenced.

THE LACROSSE MATCH.

At about 2 o'clock the representatives of the Peterborough and Orillia Lacrosse Clubs marched to the lacrosse grounds to the splendid music of the band. These grounds are large and level, and, but for one hollow in the north-east corner, would be perfect. Before beginning to play the teams of both clubs were photographed in a group by Mr. Whiten, the Orillia photographer.

Mr. G. Thomson, of Longford Mills, was chosen referee, and the teams took positions in the field as follows:—

| PETERBOROUGHS. | | ORILLIAS. |
|---|---|---|
| C. Rütherford | Goal | H. Taylor |
| P. Myles | Point | W. Edmison |
| J. Henderson | Cover Point | C. H. Gunn |
| M. Tierney | Defence Field | C. Meeh |
| J. Howden | " " | G. Armstrong |
| W. J. Scott | " " | J. Tudhope |
| J. Sheehy | Centre Field | E. Moore |
| R. H. Forty e | Home Field | G. Tudhope |
| M. Halpin | " " | R. H. Jupp |
| R. Kelly | " " | R. Henderson |
| H. Myers | 2nd Home | W. Garrett |
| G. Giroux | 1st Home | A. E. Lawrence |
| J. Coughlin | Field Captain | J. Ralston |
| E. Brown | Umpire | W. Sherman |

The ball was faced by Sheehy and Moore, and Sheehy drew the ball. The play at once became animated. The rubber was several times close to the Peterborough goal, but it was soon taken out each time and the Orillia goal kept in danger. Finally a finely played game was ended by Giroux catching a drop from Sheehy and passing the ball between the stakes. Time, six minutes.

In the second game the Orillia made a determined effort to score a game, which was eventually successful, but their determination showed itself too freely in rough play. The game lasted 16 minutes, including two faces when the ball was thrown out the bounds. It was won for Orillia by R. Henderson putting the ball through the goal.

The third game was still longer, and rougher. Frequently the ball was close to the Orillia goal, and once it appeared to the spectators to have passed through, but the umpire decided otherwise. Towards the close of a half an hour the ball was held in the vicinity of the Orillia goal for some minutes, but it was sent to the other side and R. Henderson scored another game. Time, 31 minutes.

In the fourth game, Myers was placed in the Peterborough goal and Rutherford took his old position on home. This was a long and tedious game. Soon after it was commenced there was a very close call in the Orillia goal, and during the greater part of the time that the game lasted the ball was kept on that side of the field. The Peterborough boys played well, and Myles and Sheehy did excellent work, but fouls were frequent and rough play general. Scott, who had received several blows, finally had to leave the field and Moore balanced the teams by leaving the Orillia team. Ten minutes was lost then, and, soon after three more minutes were lost by G. Tudhope being injured. Tudhope, however, went on playing. Afterwards Giroux was struck on the left eye with the end of a stick, in a scuffle near the fence, and he fainted. He was soon revived, but he had to leave the field. The game lasted one minute over an hour and was won for the Orillia by a shot from Jupp. Orillia thus won the match by three games to one.

The Orillia team comprises some good players. Edmison played well on defence, and Armstrong is a fast runner. Jupp also did good playing, but the Orillia team will have to be careful if they do not wish to gain an unenviable reputation as rough players. The Peterborough team was weakened by the absence of A. Yelland and W. Rudkins, who were unable to play. We believe that when the Orillia team visits Peterborough the victory will be on the other side, as it is expected that these two players will then be on the team.

There was a large attendance of spectators on the grounds and the band played several selections at intervals in their usual excellent style.

OTHER AMUSEMENTS.

During the afternoon boats were running to Couchiching Park and Longford Mills, and quite a number of the excursionists visited these places. A large number visited the Idiot Asylum during the afternoon.

In the agricultural hall, music was provided for dancing, and those who preferred that amusement enjoyed it to the full extent.

At about half past five o'clock the band marched down to the railway station, and the excursionists moved in the same direction. The train departed from Orillia at a quarter to six, and a good run brought the party home at nine o'clock.

The excursion was a very successful and enjoyable one. The committee had spared no pains in making complete arrangements, especially the Chairman, Mr. R. H. Adams, and Mr. A. McNeil, the Secretary. The other members of the committee—Messrs. J. Fanning, T. Hooper, H. W. Watson, F. Miller, R. McWhinnie, F. Perry, A. Riley, J. Gibbs, and J. Kendry—attended to their work well, and the deputation to Orillia previous to the excursion had arranged matters well in that town. The conductor of the train was obliging and attentive, and the excursion was a pronounced success.

Thigh Fractured.

On the evening of Wednesday, July 23rd, a son of Mr. Baker, who resides on Park street, met with a painful accident. The boy, who is about ten years of age, was leading a cow to pasture and was overtaken on the street by a team. He ran ahead of the cow to hurry out of the way, and as he did so the animal became frightened and jumped on him, knocking him down and tramping upon him. His leg was broken above the knee. Dr. Bell was summoned and set and attended to the fractured limb.

Sturgeon Point.

Mr. Dunham, of the Sturgeon Point Hotel, was in town to-day arranging with the Midland authorities for excursions to this summer resort. The first excursion will be held on Aug. 9th, from Belleville and Peterborough. To insure a comfortable trip and comfortable accommodation at the Point, Mr. Dunham has limited the number of tickets to fifty from each place. The tickets will be good for ten days. This will be an excellent opportunity for a pleasant and cheap trip to this popular summer resort.

A PICNIC in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral, under the patronage of the ladies of the third ward, will be held in the Separate School grove on Murray street, on Tuesday afternoon, the 29th July, 1884. The grounds will be opened at 2 p.m., and tea will be served from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. In the evening a musical entertainment will be given in the library of the school. The City Band will furnish music during the course of the evening. Admission to grounds, 10 cents. Admission to concert 25 cents. Refreshments extra.

The Rifle.

The "Cox Cup," the first prize in the County match in the competitions held under the auspices of the Peterborough Rifle Association has arrived from the manufacturers and is on exhibition at China Hall. The trophy is over two feet high, and the design is appropriate and handsome. The cup is supported by four rifles, and on each side there is a knapsack surrounded by a wreath. On each side of the cup there is a target, and the whole is surmounted by the figure of a soldier in uniform. The cup is silver with gold ornamentation. It is presented by Mr. Geo. A. Cox and was won at the competition last fall by Sergent Major Stootart. It has been won three times, twice of which must be in succession, to become the property of the winner. The delay in getting it was caused by the company manufacturing a special Canadian design for the top. The next competition for it will be held at the Association rifle matches this fall. This Association offers good prizes at the competition and is worthy of encouragement and support. Regular practices are held at the range every Thursday afternoon.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor and McDonald.

Can't Be Beaten.

It is a fact that Nerviline cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure. Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to Ormond & Walsh's drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25 cts.

Summer Dress Fabrics

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

Parasols and Sunshades

we mark down too, we began the season with about a dozen old ones. We want to end it the same way. In fact this remark applies to all lines of our stock. It was bought to sell, and sell it must. Our prices, like our goods, are proper.

Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

Germs at Sea.

It has generally been thought, and direct observation has confirmed the notion, that the air above the sea is singularly free from the low forms of organic life. MM. Moreau and Plantymansion have taken advantage of their leisure during a voyage in the Gironde from Rio de Janeiro to Bordeaux to obtain some data bearing on this question. They have found that over the open sea, at a distance from the vessel, the air air contained very little solid matter. The land breezes appear to become rapidly free from the multitude of organisms which they carry with them from populous districts. M. Miguel, of the Montsouris Observatory, regards the fall of germs into the sea as a reassuring fact; breezes blowing from the distant continents, which might otherwise bring epidemics with them, become purified, it is supposed, in crossing the ocean. The gentlemen above named have found that the atmosphere immediately about the vessel practically swarmed with micro-organisms; the vessel seemed to be surrounded by an "atmosphere of microbes." Medical and Scientific.

Why is Turnbull now offering large ranges of fresh goods at prices that will compete favorably with clearing sales? Because his goods are never marked over a fair living profit, which any reasonable customer is willing to pay. His steadily increasing trade enables him to clear out lines in the proper season. Also because his long experience and close attention to business puts him in a position to secure any really desirable job lines which are sometimes thrown on the market.

VARIATION IN THE LEAVES OF TREES.

The number of our ornamental trees is largely increased by the fact that individual trees sometimes vary from the usual or normal form of the species. This variation occurs in the branches, which may be pendulous, and produce "weeping trees," or erect and fan-like. The leaves vary greatly, both in their form and colors, and the flowers and fruit may strikingly depart from those proper to the species. The weeping beech, the fern-leaved and purple beeches, are three strong and valuable ornamental trees, produced by as many different kinds of variation, affecting the branches, and the form and color of the leaves. Some variations are produced from the seed, the young seedling trees showing their peculiarties from the start. Variations of this kind are to some extent continued by seed. When the seeds of the purple beech are sown, the nurserymen expect that a large percentage of the seedlings will have purple foliage. Variations are produced in another manner. A branch appears upon a tree of the normal kind, having a different habit of growth, or bearing leaves, flowers, etc., quite unlike those upon the rest of the tree. The term "sport" was long ago applied to variations occurring in this manner; Darwin called them "bud varieties." Such forms are propagated by cuttings, layering, grafting, etc. They often differ from the usual form of the tree in the readiness with which they can be propagated, and sometimes as to their hardiness. The variations in the form of the leaves often give to the tree a very different expression from that peculiar to the species, and the foliage, instead of being dense and massive, is light and feathery. Deciduous trees with simple leaves, may be divided into two groups; one with feather-veined, and the other with radiate-veined leaves. In the first, like the beech, the apple and many others, a strong mid-rib runs lengthwise of the leaf, from its base to its tip, and smaller ribs or veins run from the mid-rib to the margin of the leaf, somewhat like the plume upon a feather. In the other group, the radiate-veined, three, five, or more equally strong ribs, start from the base of the leaf, and diverge towards the circumference, as in the maples, the buttonwood tree, etc. Such leaves are also called palmately-veined. We may look upon a leaf as a frame-work of ribs or veins; these are woody and firm, and give strength to the leaf. The spaces between these are filled with a soft, green, pulpy material, in which the work of the leaf is carried on. In the leaves of the normal form, there is a great difference as to the completeness with which the margin is filled out. Sometimes there is a break in the margin, not even the slight notches so common; such leaves are called entire. The margins of other leaves are variously indented, and this varies from fine notches, to depressions half way or more to the mid-rib, producing that great variety in outline, so noticeable in leaves. These forms of leaves are characteristic of species. Leaves ordinarly entire, or with slight indentations on the margin, may vary by having unusually deep divisions; such leaves are popularly known as cut-leaved. The feather-veined leaves have the divisions run from the margin towards the mid-rib, and when these are deep the leaves are often called "fern-leaved." The unusual indentation or cutting of the margin of radiately-veined leaves, produces a very different set of forms. The native silver maple (Acer dasycarpum), is one of our most valued trees for shade or for fuel. Among the many thousands of seedlings that have been raised, a number have shown marked variations in their leaves, and several have been multiplied in the nurseries.—American Agriculturist.

Length of Our Lives Increasing

At the recent international health exhibition held in London, Sir James Paget delivered an address before the association, the Prince of Wales being present.

The learned physician asserted that people live longer than formerly, and that less sickness prevails among the mass of people, and he than gives the following reasons for the decrease of mortality during the last few years:

"There is less from intemperance, less from immorality; we have better, cheaper, and more various food; far more and cheaper clothing; far more and healthier recreations. We have on the whole better houses and better drains, better water and air, and better ways of using them. The care and skill with which the sick are treated in hospitals, infirmaries, and even in private houses are far greater than they were: the improvement and extension of nursing are more than can be described; the care which the rich bestow on the poor, whom they visit in their own homes, is every day saving health and life; and even more effectual than any of these is the work done by the medical officers of health and all the sanitary authorities now active and influential in every part of the kingdom. But we want," adds the lecturer in closing, "more ambition for health—a personal ambition for renown in health as keen as is that for bravery or for beauty, or for success in our athletic games and field sports."

FLORICULTURE.

We have had the pleasure of calling attention at various times to those evidences of prosperity and progress with which, even the dullest observer must allow, Peterborough is now replete. We have mentioned her enterprise in various directions; her business activity; her increased attention to the beautifying of her buildings and streets; and not long since to her appreciation and fostering of musical talent. The summer months have lately brought strongly into prominence another and most laudable art in which our citizens have shown remarkable zeal. We refer to the beautiful display of flowers and gardens which is met with on every side. A few years ago floriculture as a species of recreation was, except in isolated instances, an almost unknown art. To-day the most cursory observation will reveal in abundance signs of that pass-time which the great Viscount St. Albans has asserted to be "the purest of human pleasures." To this testify the many private gardens which adorn the residences, not only of our wealthier, but also of our humbler, citizens; the handsome displays frequently seen, even during the winter months, in the windows of a large number of houses; the practice resorted to by our shop keepers of placing more than ordinarily luxuriant plants among their wares; the variety and excellence of the stock of the florists; and by no means least the pretty fashion adopted by our youth of both sexes of wearing the gay products of their brilliant flowerbeds.

The source of the increase and spread of this so innocent and refining a taste it is not difficult to discover. Opulence confers leisure; and leisure gained by the labour that was necessary to obtain a competency is almost always an active one. The toil which has now become an ingrained habit finds for itself new fields for action, and is oftenest expended on beautifying the home in which the retired professional or commercial man now spends his last days. The example of the parent is followed by his children and a spreading love of the elegancies of life is soon stimulated and enhanced.

We must not forget also to add as a concurrent adjuvant the assistance of a bountiful supply of water gained since the institution of the waterworks. This, of course, is a limited boon. Yet it is quite possible that it has a beneficial indirect influence in spurring on the ambition of those who are without it to cope with obstacles which hitherto they had considered as insuperable.

However, whatever may be the grounds on which the curious speculator may choose to theorize as to the source of this now so universal a taste, that it exists is incontrovertible, and as such, as we have before remarked, is another proof of the acknowledged rapid growth of Peterborough.

Our readers need not to be reminded that they will have an opportunity shortly of still further adding their testimony to this growth at the exhibition of the Peterborough Horticultural Society which takes place on the 11th of September next. A month is ample time in which to bring to perfection a large class of plants; and we may safely predict that, with a little extra care, the coming show will surpass any yet held in our town.

SERVICEABLE EXTRACTS.

The leading Reform journal has in its issue of Friday a two column editorial giving the history of the boundary question, of course with the view of making out that Mr. Mowat has been victorious.

There are two quotations in this article, which of themselves show the absurdity of the contention of Mr. Mowat's admirers. The first is from a proposal made by the Dominion Government in 1872, as follows:—

"That the Ontario Government be invited to concur in a statement of the case for immediate reference to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of England with a view to the settlement by a judgment or decision of that tribunal of the Western and Northern boundaries of Ontario."

The Ontario Government having declined, our next extract is from the reply of the Dominion authorities, as follows:—

"The Committee doubt whether any other tribunal than that of the Queen in Council would be satisfactory to the other Provinces of the Dominion in the decision of questions in which they have a large interest, and they respectfully recommend that the proposition for a reference to Her Majesty in Council be renewed to the Government of Ontario."

It is thus evident from the official documents, as quoted by the Globe, that 12 years ago Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues were willing to lay the matter before the Privy Council, and that but for the refusal of the Reform leaders we could then have got our rights, by an authoritative decision, as easily as to-day. For twelve years Mr. Mowat by his obstinacy in refusing to adopt this course, till forced to do so by conservative efforts, has kept us out of the enjoyment of our territory, that he might have the opportunity of raising the false cry that Sir John was robbing Ontario. It really has been Mr. Mowat and his friends who have been sacrificing the interests of Ontario to furthe their own ends.

SHAKSPERE.

Much attention has been given in this locality of late to the writings of Shakspere, even Shaksperian societies having been formed. The following questions by Mr. Earl, which he has used in his classes in the Collegiate Institute, will be found both interesting and suggestive to the young student of the works of the great dramatist, and will help him to direct his course of reading:—

19. What are the main points of difference between Elizabethan English and the English of modern times?
20. What is the general character of Shakspere's women? Give exceptions.
21. "The genius of Greene, of Peele and of Marlow prepared the way for Shakespeare." Explain.
22. "It has been said that Shakspere's female characters are inferior to his characters of men." Discuss this statement.
23. Contrast the English drama with that of Greece and Rome.
24. Show clearly the differences between dramatic and epic poetry.
25. Into what plays has Shakspere introduced supernatural elements? What are the supernatural elements in an epic called?
26. What does Coleridge regard as the position of the historic drama?
27. How does the purely historical drama differ from the mixed drama and from such plays as Hamlet and Macbeth?
28. Discuss the influence of Shakspere's historic plays.
29. What influences contributed to the literary outburst of the time of Elizabeth?
30. Classify Shakspere's historical plays.
31. Contrast Shakspere and Byron as dramatic writers.
32. It has been said that Shakspere's historical plays form our great national epic. Discuss this.
33. Compare the English of Shakspere and Spenser, and trace the causes of the difference.
34. Refer to, and describe, characters in Shakspere's plays which exhibit his power as a creator of (a) tragic, and (b) comic characters.
35. Show to what extent the historical drama had been cultivated prior to Shakspere. Name the most distinguished modern dramatists who have handled historical subjects, giving the titles of their plays.
36. "The one dominant subject of the histories is, how a man may fail, and how a man may succeed in obtaining a mastery of the world." Justify this statement.
37. "Shakspere has made all his predecessors obsolete." Discuss. State briefly what you know of his predecessors.
38. Write a note on the cultivation of lyric poetry during the Elizabethan period.
39. What evidence have we of the chronological order of Shakspere's works?
40. "Admirable is the judgment with which Shakspere always in the first scenes prepares, yet how naturally and with what concealment of art, for the catastrophe." Explain and illustrate.
41. Name the chief Shaksperian critics of the nineteenth century.
42. Note the changes in Shakspere's popularity from 1616 to the present day.
43. Write brief notes on the following subjects:

(a) References to Shakspere in the writings of his contemporaries.

(b) Early editions of Shakspere's writings.

We hope from time to continue this series of questions from the pen of Mr. Earl, believing that from their admirable character they will prove of great value to students of Shakspere.

BARNUM'S CIRCUS IN A STORM.

The Tents Wrecked and Many Persons Injured—Condition of the Injured.

New York, July 24.—A special from Syracuse gives the facts of the blowing over of Barnum's circus tents at Cortland, on Wednesday afternoon by a sudden squall. About three o'clock, without a moment's warning, a hurricane struck the tents and blew them all over. This was followed by a furious rain storm, accompanied by heavy thunder and vivid lightning. The greatest excitement followed, and ready hands went to work with a will to rescue those who were held under the poles, ropes and wet canvas. About forty persons, including many women and children, were found to be badly hurt. The most serious are F. M. Salisbury, of Cortland, head badly cut; Cornelius Brown, of Marathon, badly injured about the chest and one arm broken; Rev. George Adams and daughter, both painfully cut on their heads; Eddie Stilson is still unconscious from a bad wound on his his head; Miss Miles, of Homer, has her head cut and neck injured; L. C. Schultz, of Cortland, was cut on the temple and his chest badly hurt; Eddie Rood, of Homer, leg broken and scalp injured; George Fairbanks seriously injured internally; Milton Waverly, of East Freetown, scalp torn partly off; A. S. Agates, of Truxton, injured about the head; a baby, three girls and two women are badly hurt and are now lying in a critical state. Mr. Hutchinson, one of the partners of the firm, ordered everything possible to be done for the sufferers, and had them conveyed to hotels and private houses and attended by physicians. At the latest accounts all the injured are said to be doing well.

Dear Sirs,—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for cholera. CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

With a sudden gesture of loathing, she threw off his hand, struck his palms together, and he started at the expression that seem literally to blaze in her eyes, so vivid, so withering was the light that rayed out.

"Yes—the truth escaped my lips. The honourable name of Laurance is talismanic, and offers much to Odilie Orme; yet I will stain my soul with no dissimulation. With love and romance I finished long, long ago; and to-day I have not patience to trifle even with its phraseology. I am thirty-three, and in my early girlhood the one love dream of all my life was rudely broken, leaving me no more capacity to indulge a second, than belongs to those marbles in the Musee Bourbonique. For my dear young husband I felt the only intense, idolatrous, yes, blindly worshipping devotion, that my nature could yield to any human being. When I lost him, I lost my heart also; because doubly widowed, because my grief bereft me of the power of properly loving even our little baby. For years I have given my body and soul to the accomplishment of one purpose, the elevation of my social status, and that of my child. Had my husband been spared to me, we would not have remained obscure and poor, but after my widowhood the struggle devolved upon me. I have not had leisure to think of love, have toiled solely for maintenance and position; and have sternly held myself aloof from the world that dared to believe my profession rendered me easy of access. Titles have been laid at my feet, but their glitter seemed fictitious, did not allure me; and no other name, save yours, has ever for an instant tempted me. To-day you are here to plead my acceptance of that name, and frankly I tell you, sir, it dazzles me. As an American I know all that it represents, all that it would confer on me, all that it would prove for my child, and I would rather wear the name of Laurance, than—a coronet! I confess I have but one ambition, to lift my daughter into that high social plane, from which fate excluded her mother; and this eminence I covet for her, a marriage with you promises me. I have no heart to bring you; mine died with all my wifely hopes, when I lost my husband. If I consent to give you my hand, and nominally the claim of a husband, in exchange for the priviledge of merging Orme in Laurance, it must be upon certain solemn conditions, to the fulfilment of which your traditional honour is pledged. Is a Laurance safely bound by vows?"

Her voice had grown strangely metallic, losing all its liquid sweetness, and as her gaze searched his face, the striking resemblance she traced in his eyes and mouth, to those of Cuthbert and Regina, seemed to stab her heart.

To the man who listened and watched with breathless anxiety her hardening, whitening features, she merely recalled the memory of her own tragic "Medea" confronting "Jason" at Athens.

"Only accept my vows at the altar, and I challenge the world to breathe an imputation upon their sanctity. Rene Laurance never broke a promise, never forfeited a pledge, and to keep his name unsullied, his honor stainless, is his sole religion. Odille, my Queen"——

She rose and waved him back.

"Spare me rhapsodies that accord neither with your years, nor my sentiments. Understand, it is a mere bargain and sale, and I am carefully arranging the conditions. For myself I ask little, but, as you are aware, my daughter is grown, is now in her seventeenth year, and the man whom the world regards as my husband, must share his name and fortune with my child. Doubtless you deem me calculating and mercenary, and for her dear sake—I am forced to be so; for all the tenderness that remains in my nature, is centered in my little girl. She has been reared as carefully as a princess, is accomplished and very beautiful, and when you see her—I think you will scarcely refuse the tribute of your admiration and affection."

For an instant, a gray pallor spread from lip to brow, and the unhappy woman shuddered; but rallying, she moved across the floor to her writing-desk, and the infatuated man followed, whispering:

"If she resembles her mother, can you doubt her perfect and prompt adoption into my heart?"

"My daughter is unlike me; is so entirely the image of her lost father, that sight of her beauty sometimes overwhelms me with torturing memories. Here, Gen. Laurance, is a carefully written paper, which I submit for your examination and mature reflection. When in the presence of proper witnesses you sign that contract, you will have purchased the right to claim my hand, mark you—only my hand, at the altar."

It was a cautiously worded marriage settlement, drawn up in conformity with legal requirements; and its chief exaction was the adoption of Regina, the transmission of the name of Laurance, and the settlement upon her of a certain amount of money in stocks and bonds, exclusive of any real estate.

As he received the paper and opened it, Mrs. Orme added:

"Take your own time, and weigh the conditions carefully and deliberately."

"Stay, Odille; do not leave me. A few moments will suffice for this matter, and I am in no mood to endure suspense."

"Within an hour, you can at least comprehend what I demand. I am going to the terrace of the Villa Reale, and when in accordance with that contract you decide to adopt my child, and present her with the world as your own, you will find me on the terrace."

He would have taken her hand, but she walked away, and disappeared, closing a door behind her.

His hat had rolled out of sight, and as he searched hurriedly for it, Mrs. Waul spoke from her distant recess:

"Gen. Laurance will find his hat between the ottoman and the window."

The winding walks of the Villa were comparatively deserted when Mrs. Orme began to pace slowly to and fro beneath the trees, whose foliage swayed softly in the mild evening air. When the few remaining groups had passed beyond her vision, she threw back the long thick veil that had effectually conceal'ed her features, and approaching the parapet that overhung the sea, sat down. Removing her hat and veil, she placed them beside her on the seat, and resting her hands on the iron railing, bowed her chin upon them and looked out upon the sea murmuring at the foot of the wall.

The flush and sparkle of an hour ago had vanished so utterly, that it appeared incredible that the colour, light, and dimples could ever wake again in that frozen face, over whose rigid features brooded the calm of stone:

"A woman fair and stately,
But pale as are the dead,"

she seemed some impassive soulless creature incapable alike of remorse or of hope, allured by no future, frightened by no past; silently fronting at last the one sunless, joyless, dreary goal, whose attainment had been for years the paramount aim of her stranded life. The rosy glow of dying day yet lingered in the sky, and tinged the sea, and a golden moon, followed by a few shy stars, watched their shining images twinkling in the tremulous water; but the loveliest object upon which their soft light fell, was that lonely, wan, lilac-robed woman.

So Jephtha's undaunted daughter might have looked, as she saw the Syrian sun sink below the palms and poppies,—knowing that when it rose once more upon the smiling, happy world, her sacrifice would have been accomplished,—her fate forever sealed; or so perhaps Alcestis watched the slow coming footsteps of that dreadful hour, when for her beloved she voluntarily relinquished life

To die for those we love were easy martyrdom, but to live in sacrificial throes fierce as Dirce's tortures, to endure for tedious indefinite, lingering years, jilted by death, demands a fortitude higher than that of Cato, Socrates or Seneca.

To all of us come sooner or later lurid, fateful hours, that bring us face to face with the pale Parcæ;—so close that we see the motionless distaff,—and the glitter of the opening shears,—and have no wish to stay the clipping of the frayed and mangled thread.

In comparison with the grim destiny Mrs. Orme had so systematically planned, the hideous "death in life" upon which she was deliberately preparing to enter, a leap over that wall into the placid sea beneath would have been welcome as heaven to tortured Dives; but despite the loathing and horror of her sickened and outraged soul, she contemplated her future lot as calmly as St. Lawrence the heating of his gridiron.

NEWS FROM THE ROCKIES.

We are permitted to publish the following extracts from a letter of a former well-known "Peterborough boy," now engaged in surveying in the Northwest. They will be read with much interest:—

SELKIRK RANGE, B.C., June 12, 1884.

This letter will go by way of Kamloops and Victoria, British Columbia. The scenery in the Selkirk range is simply magnificent. There is a glacier which is worth coming thousands of miles alone to see, and then there are innumerable waterfalls and cascades tumbling and roaring down the mountain sides. We have a splendid cook for our party; he is deaf and dumb, but one of the cleanest and most active men I have ever seen. The cook to a party like ours gets $50 per month and expenses, the "cookee" or cook's assistant, $35. The cook's work is only the actual cooking and baking, the rest of the work, washing dishes, pots, pans, getting wood and water, is done by the "cookee." There are eighteen men in our party, and a first rate set of fellows they are. We have good grub most of the time, but sometimes of course it runs a little short as it is rather difficult to get it in. All our camping outfit such as clothes, bedding, tents, cooking utensils, grub, engineering instruments, &c., are transported on horses' backs. We have 13, which is called a "pack train;" each horse has a pack saddle on its back and the stuff is lashed on to these saddles; each horse is supposed to carry 200 lbs. weight. No turnpiked or paved roads through the mountains; our only road is a small narrow trail cut through the bush, and in a good many places along the steep sides of the mountains. If we come to a creek which is too wide and deep to foot, we set to work and build a temporary bridge over it. All the mountain streams are terribly swift but not very deep. There are very few of them too deep for a man to wade through, but the current is so swift that it would take him off his feet. Our mail comes in by a courier, and we are sadly disappointed if we get nothing. I know the carrying of the mail on the mountains is difficult and very irregular; still we look for letters and papers, and if we don't get them I think the fault is not altogether in that quarter. * * * There are a great number of bears in this part of the mountains; they are the common black kind, and not at all to be dreaded. There are very few of the terrible grizzly bear you hear so much about—in fact they are seldom seen in these regions. * * * It has been raining every day for nearly three weeks, but we have to work all the time except when it is raining so hard that the engineering instruments wont work.

Resources of the Farther Northwest.

In commenting on the enormous cost of the Northern Pacific railroad, the San Francisco Chronicle says: "When it is reflected that California produces full one-tenth of all the wheat of the country, and more than one-fifth of the wheat exports, and that we do this with an area of not more than 3,500,000 acres planted in wheat, and that Washington and Oregon have three times as many acres better adapted to wheat than ours, and that within the railway belt of the Northern Pacific, we begin to form an understanding of the future agricultural possibilities of our northern neighbors, whose resources in coal, iron and lumber are even greater than in the cereals. Given a shipment terminus on the deep waters of the Puget sound equal in facilities for large ships with those of San Francisco, and it needs no prophetic mind to foresee the creation of a city there within the lives of its young men which will, in its exports and imports, reach the magnitude of our own."

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Sad Death of a Young Man at the Nassau Mills.

A sad drowning accident occurred at Nassau Mills on Friday, the victim of which was Mr. F. E. Twigg, a young man in Mr. J. M. Irwin's employ.

Extensive repairs are being made to the slide, and men were engaged in the work. Mr. Twigg had been out on the slide and was going from it when he said that another man needed assistance. He returned to give the required aid, but he slipped and fell into the water.

The unfortunate young man was carried into rapid currents and eddies, but he was a good swimmer and he succeeded in standing erect in the bottom of the river. Several men who saw the accident went out in boats to rescue him, but just as the nearest of the rescuing party was within a yard or two of where he was standing, something apparently struck him under the water and took his feet from under him. He fell again into the current, sank and was seen no more. It is thought that in falling he must have struck something and been stunned.

Efforts were at once made to recover the body, and they were continued during the remainder of the day, through the night and were resumed this morning, but as yet they have not been successful.

Mr. Twigg had only been in Canada three weeks. He was a native of Ireland and his father is a clergyman in the church of England. Mr. Irwin was acquainted with his father, and the young man came out to this county to enter his employment.

Mr. Twigg was much respected by those who had became acquainted with him since he came to Peterborough. Although he had been but a short time at the mill, he had become quite a favorite with the men there.

A reward of $40 has been offered for the recovery of his body. It is thought that he has probably been carried down the river by the current.

There was a large attendance of children, but the unfavourable weather no doubt prevented many from attending. When Norwood was arrived at the rain prevented the party from picnicking in the grove, but the town hall was placed at their disposal. The Saved Army.

General Lindsay and Capt. Atkins, of the Saved Army, arrived on the noon train from Port Hope.

Golden Eye.

The logs being all through, the steamer Golden Eye will, during the month of August, run every day to Harwood and Idyl Wild, leaving Peterborough at 7:30 and returning at 7.30 p.m. See advertisement. Excursion parties carried at reduced rates. The Golden Eye or Whistle-Wing may be chartered by the day for private parties. Apply to H. Calcutt.

The Circus.

King, Burk & Co's. circus arrived in town this morning and pitched their tent on the market square. They gave a performance this afternoon, which was attended by a large crowd—the tent being full. A lady gave an exhibition of walking a rope outside. Under the canvas the acrobatic, tumbling, horizontal bar and trapeze performers were loudly applauded, and deservedly so, as their feats were such as are seldom seen. The trick pony, "Peewee," caused a great deal of amusement. They will give another programme this evening.

Wedding Presents.

No store in Peterborough offers as large a variety of Wedding Presents as China Hall and all at reasonable prices. Almost every article in the large establishment is suitable for a present and the stock in point of newest and elegance of design is equal to that of any store in Canada. We would advise any one about purchasing a wedding or birthday present to visit China Hall you could hardly fail to make a selection from the magnificant window of new goods now on exhibition, although it is only an index to the thousand and one lovely articles to be found inside.

Fresh Oysters received twice a week.

Bodega.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor and McDonald.

A Great Discovery

That is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave, truly is Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Taylor and McDonald's drug store. Large size $1.

Can't Be Beaten.

It is a fact that Nerviline cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure. Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to Ormond & Walsh's drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25 cts.

Summer Dress Fabrics

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

Parasols and Sunshades

we mark down too, we began the season with about a dozen old ones. We want to end it the same way. In fact this remark applies to all lines of our stock. It was bought to sell, and sell it must. Our prices, like our goods, are proper.

Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers an artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

SALT RHEUM. GEORGE ANDREWS, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell afflicted with Salt Rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1883.

DISTRICT INTELLIGENCE

LINDSAY.

AN ACCIDENT.—While a number of children were playing on a pile of wood in the yard at Mr. Fox's, Ops, a part of the pile fell. Hattie Maher, an eight year old daughter of Mr. W. H. Maher, of Napanee, was caught by the falling sticks and had one of her legs broken just above the knee.

SAGE ADVICE.—With the lesson of Port Perry's conflagration to profit by nothing is being done in Lindsay looking to an extension of the waterworks or improvement of the power at the pump house. Why is this important matter neglected? The Council seem quite willing to pass resolutions in favor of something being done; but, gentlemen, resolutions will not prevent Lindsay being made a blazing beacon some of these dry nights. If the Council are reticent about taking steps on their own responsibility let a committee of citizens be appointed to act with them—a committee that will have public confidence and support. Who will make a move?—Post.

LUMBERING.—Mr. Irwin's big raft of square timber arrived last week at Fenelon Falls. It comprises some eighteen hundred pieces and was cut many miles back of Haliburton, some of it even on the Ottawa side of the height of land. Mr. Thompson, the superintendent, informs us they will load at the Falls and ship to Belleville by rail. The first train load passed down Tuesday morning. As the railway has also large consignments to bring down from Longford for the Thompson Smith Co. the rolling stock will be kept busy for some time to come. Some of the timber now passing here from the Falls would be hard to beat anywhere.—Warder.

FENELON FALLS.

SQUARE TIMBER.—Every day for some time past long sticks of square timber have been drawn, one at a time, past the Gazette office on their way to the canal, where they are being used in the construction of the locks.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.—On Monday Mr. John Burley's little son, between two and three years old, fell while running across the yard, and his forehead came in contact with a stone, which cut a gash nearly four inches long. On Wednesday forenoon the men employed in the canal were driven from their work by the rain, and two of them named respectively George Barefoot and Henry German got sky-larking near the Simpson House. They were the best of friends and no violence was used, but while sparring Barefoot slipped and fell and his right collar bone was broken. On Tuesday Mr. Isaac Archer, an employee in Smith & Fell's shingle mill, met with a rather serious accident while in the performance of one of his duties. It appears that he had been stooping down to push some sawdust into the elevator, and rising suddenly to his height, was struck on the head by a pully, which inflicted an ugly scalp-wound very much resembling a horse shoe in shape. As he fell soon after receiving the blow it was feared that his skull was fractured, but such, fortunately, proved not to be the case.

STURGEON POINT.

SPLENDID.—The Point is beaming, blooming and gushing. The hotel is filled and jollity runs wild. Everything is in splendid shape this year, in the house and in all the connections. The Saturday night hops are a splendid institution, the open air ball room having been expressly fitted up this season. Eighty guests are now in the house, and nearly all the Continent is represented. The grounds are in capital order and present a fine rich green, and when in the evening the guests scatter among the trees the sight is pretty in the extreme. The soft, delicate tints of the ladies' dresses dotted over the sward give the grounds the appearance of a huge flower garden. The Point is becoming more popular every year, and for the next six weeks the woods will resound with the merry laughter of from eighty to a hundred guests.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Torn to Death by a Mad Dog.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 25.—Yesterday morning a large Newfoundland dog, belonging to James Cooply, a Lake Shore railway conductor, went mad, and fearfully lacerated the body of an eleven-year-old son of Cooply. The mother was out, and returning, heard cries. Rushing to the house she found the dog with his teeth fastened in the boy's leg. She drove him away and went out to get a doctor, only to hear more cries. Again returning she found that the dog had jumped through the window, and was tearing the boy to pieces. She pushed her foot into the animal's mouth, and he released the boy, attacking her, and tearing her leg badly. The neighbors, attracted by her cries, came in and beat the dog's head to pieces. The child will die as he is terribly mangled, the flesh on his face, head, arms, and back hanging in shreds where it is not eaten off.

CHOLERA IN LONDON.

LONDON, July 26.—A sailor from Marseilles who was landed at Liverpool in a boat after undergoing the present quarantine was seized with cholera. He was conveyed to lodgings in a densely populated part of the city, where the nature of the sickness was developed. The matter has been kept quiet, and the fact will doubtless be denied by the authorities in order to avoid a scare.

ELLEN TERRY ILL.

LONDON, July 27.—The Lyceum theatre has come to grief from a curious cause. Miss Ellen Terry became a victim of the small-pox scare and had herself vaccinated. When the virus began to take effect she neglected to take the usual precaution to prevent inflammation, and continued to act the part of Viola with her left arm in a sling, and ate and drank as usual. Now the whole hand and arm are badly swollen and she has been compelled to cease acting. The result is that the theatre is closed, for no one in the company has under study the part of Viola.

FURTHER DEMONSTRATIONS.

LONDON, July 26.—Demonstrations against the action of the House of Lords in reference to the Franchise Bill were held to-day at Manchester and Nottingham. At Manchester John Bright presided and made a fiery speech, which was wildly applauded. He said that unless English freedom was a fraud and a sham, the people would know how to deal with an aristocratic chamber which was ever hostile to popular rights and national interests. The Marquis of Hartington, who occupied a prominent position on the platform, evidently could not forget that he was heir to the great dukedom of Devonshire, and perceptibly winced as the radical leader continued to excoriate the aristocracy. When his turn came to speak Lord Hartington deprecated the use of language intended to injure the peers, but he was listened to with manifest impatience by the audience.

M. FERRY AND THE CONSTITUTION.

PARIS, July 26.—In his remarks concerning the revision of the constitution yesterday before the senate, Minister Ferry created a profound sensation by warning the senate that unless the question of revision is settled now there would be a more serious conflict before the end of the year.

STRINGENT POLICE REGULATIONS.

WARSAW, July 26.—The police closed a number of coffee houses and restuarants. All other places of this sort are required to close at 8 oclock every night, and remain closed Sundays and holidays. The city is to all intents in a minor state of siege.

A TORY DEMONSTRATION.

LONDON, July 27.—The Tory demonstration in Hyde park to day, intended as a counter episode to the monster liberal meeting there last Monday, was a complete failure. Hardly 1000 persons attended, and these were quickly dispersed by y heavy fall of rain.

THE DISEASE IN ITALY.

SPEZIA, July 26.—There have been two deaths from cholera here. The inhabitants are in a panic.

A CASE IN LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL, July 26,—One of the crew of the steamer St. Dunstan, which arrived from Marseilles, took lodging in one of the densely populated quarters of the city. Yesterday he was seized with choleric symptoms and was forthwith isolated.

RETURNING TO MARSEILLES.

MARSEILLES, July 26.—The fugitives are beginning to return. The municipal authorities have thanked the Sisters of Charity for their devotion and zeal in assisting sufferers. Marseilles is threated with a meat famine. Many of the butchers have closed their shops and others find difficulty in procuring supplies.

FOUR SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

DUBLIN, July 26.—The police have seized a quantity of arms and ammunition near Tullamore and arrested four suspected men.

DEATHS IN TOULON.

TOULON, July 26.—There were two deaths today in the city and two in the suburbs. The total number of death here is 593. The exodus from the city has decreased the population by two-thirds.

FRENCH TROOPS REPULSED.

LONDON, July 26.—The Standard has a despatch dated Malagassy Camp, June 27th, saying that 1,200 French troops attacked the Hovas at 6 o'clock that morning. The French had mounted gen'darmes, infantry and artillery consisting of six field pieces and three mitrailleuses. The attack lasted three hours, when the French retired. The Mallagassys behaved admirably, acting with perfect coolness and firing steadily. The attack was not renewed.

GERMAN COMMERCIAL SOCIETY.

BERLIN, July 26.—A new society has been formed here for the purpose of protecting the interests of commerce and industry. All the great bankers, merchants and manufacturers of Germany have signed a programme to be adopted by the society. None of Bismarck's partizans are included in the list of signers. The society will oppose Bismarck's colonial plans and also all bills interfering with the commerce of the country. The reactionary journals have accused the society of being the tool of the wire pullers for use in the coming elections.

AMERICAN.

THE CHOLERA CASE IN THE STATES.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Surgeon-General Hamilton has received to-day a copy of a letter from Dr. J. B. Peace, who attended the supposed case of cholera on the steamer Annie Silver and warned the authorities. Dr. Peace says the family arrived in New Orleans July 14 from San Luis, Spain. The vessel had been at Bordeaux, Toulon, and Vera Cruz. Though the father did not speak English, Dr. Peace says he learned he had been detained at Toulon. The doctor says further: "The child died with every symptom of cholera. Whether this was a case of Asiatic or Sporadic cholera I will not positively assert, but cholera it certainly was."

OH! how tired and weak I feel I dont believe I will ever get through the Spring house-cleaning? Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

IT ISN'T Extravagant to claim that Zopessa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

VICTORY FOR ONTARIO.

THE Ottawa Free Press discusses the boundary question, and at the end of a long editorial, dealing principally with an article in the Citizen, it thus comments upon the despatch to the Mail as to the probable discussion of the Privy Council :—

"That despatch tells us it will probably 'run as far as the northern boundary of Manitoba.' A glance at a new map will show that the present northern boundary of Manitoba crosses Lake Winnipeg, a short distance south of parallel latitude 53 or one hundred and eighty miles north of the point of junction of the boundary on the English river accepted as a compromise between the Province and the Dominion on the suggestions of Col. Dennis, the then chief of the surveying department. If the boundary of Ontario is run due eastward from the northern boundary of Manitoba, it will touch James Bay, at a point nearly fifty miles north of the mouth of the Albany River, where the arbitrators placed it. This will give Ontario an accession of territory, over and above that found by the arbitrators, as large as the whole of Ontario, exclusive of the district of Algoma. The Mail's despatch by those ignorant of the geography of the country has been accepted as intimating that Ontario will receive less territory, than the arbitrators agreed upon, but the truth is that if acted upon, it will give nearly one-third more. Under the circumstances we do feel disposed to maintain that Mr. Mowat has won a great victory over Sir John Macdonald and that 'the little tyrant' is master of the situation."

We hope that the Free Press is right in its supposition that the Privy Council will give us more than the arbitrators. We have always held that the award was insufficient, and if our case has been properly presented by Mr. Mowat, we believe that, as Mr. Laurier, the Rouge leader, anticipated, the Privy Council will do us more complete justice. It will be observed that our contemporary completely "gives away" Mr. Mowat by admitting that the award was a compromise and was adopted on the suggestion of Col. Dennis. The arbitrators had no authority to make a compromise, and most certainly none to allow Col. Dennis to do so. Thus "the little tyrant," as the Free Press calls him, (in quotation marks) has for his own purposes clamoured for an award that was insufficient and irregular, and has for twelve years kept us out of our rights by his far from disinterested obstinacy. The victory is Ontario's, won by the Conservatives.

A COMPLAINANT.

MR. JAMES LENIHAN, at present residing in Lindsay, writes a very long letter to the Canadian Post of that town. According to Mr. Lenihan's account he has had many grievances of which to complain on account of the treatment he received while a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners in the Province of British Columbia, nearly all his causes of complaint arising during the administration of Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Blake and their colleagues, who appointed him and under whom he held his office. For instance he estimates his money loss at $2650, of which he attributes $1800 to the Reform Administration and only $850 to the Macdonald Government, this latter sum being made up of $750, his traveling expenses from the Pacific Coast and $100 less than he thinks he should have received as an allowance on his retirement from the service. According to the account of the Post, which of course knows more about Mr. Lenihan's affairs than he does himself, this is described as "the manner in which he was treated by the Government at Ottawa since the advent of the present administration." This is however only the Post's playful way of showing that it does not like Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues, its hostility leading it to indulge in this and other slanderous abuse of its political opponents, in direct contradiction of the letter in its own columns.

There is one paragraph in Mr. Lenihan's letter which will have especial interest just at present. He says :—

"During my residence at Victoria, and while I was kept without an office, I succeeded in negotiating, though the leading men in that part of the province, a settlement of all pending difficulties between the Dominion and provincial governments. I worked out the basis of what is now known as the "Carnarvon terms." This work was initiated by Mr. Edgar as the agent of the Dominion, but he returned home without accomplishing it."

We knew that Mr. Edgar had drawn very largely from the public funds but we were not aware, before this, that he did so on account of another man's labours. Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Blake gave to Mr. Edgar, Mr. Blake's protege all the cash and all the credit, while their officer, who did the work, got neither.

If Mr. Lenihan's account is not over coloured he certainly has much cause to complain of Mr. Blake, who enviegled him from his snug business in Toronto, and of Mr. Mackenzie who as Premier, allowed one of his officials to be so ill-treated, insulted and slighted.

HURRAHING TO CHEER THEMSELVES.

HURRAHING with very little cause seems to be the latest "policy" of the Reformers. They are now pretending that Mr. Mowat has been successful and that Sir John Macdonald has been discredited in regard to recent appeals to the Privy Council.

The quote the Boundary question. Well, in that Mr. Mowat is proved to be wrong in clamouring for the Award which the Privy Council has decided to be invalid, because the arbitrators were not duly authorised to make a binding settlement and because they exceeded their instructions. Sir John Macdonald is shown to have been right in wishing to refer the matter to the Privy Council as long as twelve years ago.

They quote the License case. In this there has been as yet no decision as to the constitutionality of the Crooks Act, but it has been decided that the Province can make police regulations in the absence of Dominion legislation. The Dominion Scott Act has been held to be constitutional. There is no triumph for either party so far.

They quote the Streams Bill. The Privy Council held that the existing statute gave Mr. Caldwell what he claimed in spite of Mr. Blake's legal opinion to the contrary, and therefore showed that Mr. Mowat was wrong in passing unnecessary and improper legislation to interfere with our law courts. They plainly expressed their opinion that the statute, though they had to enforce it, was a bad one, and therefore that Mr. Mowat should have repealed it rather than strengthening it.

They quote the Mercer Escheat case. Well, it was Mr. Mackenzie and his Minister of Justice who claimed these escheats, not Sir John Macdonald. If Mr. Mowat was victorious to the great benefit of Mr. Edgar and the women of ill repute, it was over his own party leaders at Ottawa.

The triumph over Sir John in the Privy Council, if it ever takes place, is yet to come.

CANALS—THE TRENT VALLEY.

Canals, we are often told, are at a discount they cannot compete with railways. In discussing this question with a friend the other day he said : "For instance, now, if you had 40,000 bushels of barley you wanted to get quickly to market, would you not send it by rail instead of by water?" We readily confessed that we would. The railway, no doubt, is the quickest mode of transportation for small quantities of grain, and of course the most profitable. It is when we have millions of bushels to move that the advantage is in favor of the canals. It is estimated that there will be 9,500,000 bushels of wheat to be shipped from the Northwest this season. Now, suppose this quantity of wheat should be stored at Midland for transportation to Montreal, could it be landed there, in the quickest and cheapest manner, by the Trent Valley Canal, were it now in working order, or by rail to Port Hope and thence by water to Montreal? To carry this quantity of wheat from Midland to Port Hope would require 23,750 cars holding 400 bushels each, and it would require 380 barges carrying 25,000 bushels each. The competition between the cars and the barges—that is, between the railway and the canal—would be like a contention between two persons moving a hundred potatoes from one side of the street to the other ; the one person carrying one at a time, and the other taking them up and bringing them all at one journey. It is true that the person bringing one at a time would land, say, five or six potatoes before the other had landed any ; but he would be a long way behind in the race when he had completed his task.

"Canals are at a discount : they have to give way to railways." Indeed ! How, then, does it happen that the State of New York has granted $10,000,000 for the improvement of the Erie Canal? How does it happen that, when canals are being abandoned in favor of railways, the Federal Government of the United States has granted $40,000,000 for the construction of a canal, the object of which is to divert the carrying trade of the Western States and the North-West from the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi? This canal would never have been contemplated if the Americans had been able, as they desired, to secure for themselves the Trent Valley waters and the carrying trade through our country. "If we cannot get that magnificent water way," they say, "of which the Canadians either do not know the use, or have not enterprise enough to utilize, we will make it of as little value to them as possible by diverting the trade from it, if ever they should wake up to the necessity of building it."

The Trent Valley waters are not only unrivalled in any country for carrying purposes, but for manufacturing also. It has been sometimes regretted that when nature has done so much in building the canal, she did not finish it. The canal would not have been so valuable if she had. Every lock creates new power, and sufficient power can be created between Fenelon Falls and Trenton to grind annually an amount of wheat that can hardly be estimated.

The finishing of this canal—and every dollar that has been expended upon it is a dollar's worth of argument in favour of its being finished—is an enterprise only second to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and as far as the heavy carrying trade is concerned it stands before it. For forty years have we Canadians been dreaming over this contemplated canal, while during the same period the Americans have been wondering at us, wishing they had it, and fearing that day would come when we would find out its value. Is it not time now, after so much procrastination, to rise up in our might and say, and mean what we say, that it must be built, and with as little delay as possible? It is not a local paltry scheme, nor even provincial. It is for the benefit of the Dominion and Europe.

Canals at a discount, indeed ! So enormously has the heavy carrying trade of England increased that the railways have become almost helpless under it. In consequence a canal is about to be built to connect Manchester with the ocean and if the enterprise should prove a success it will probably be extended to London and Bristol. It is proposed also to join the North and Irish seas by a canal to be cut though Durham and Cumberland. In order to build a second Suez Canal 600,000,000 of francs have already been subscribed. It is also proposed to join the Bay of Biscay and the Mediterranean Sea by means of a canal. The Panama Canal, to join the Alantic and Pacific oceans, is now being vigorously prosecuted. Canals at a discount ! None of all the canals just mentioned will be more useful in their place and for the purposes for which they are being built, than the Trent Vally Canal.—Fenelon Falls Gazette.

A Quebec Elopement Cae.

Detective Fahey, who arrested the celebrated Eno, the New York bank defaulter, has just returned to the city after a week's absence in New York searching for the wife of a business man in Quebec who had absconded with the head clerk, taking her child with her, while her husband was indulging in a drunking debauch at home. The parties had helped themselves before their departure to all the moneys in the safe. After several days watching in company with the husband and Pickerton's detectives, Fahey spied the party on one of the avenues and arreted them. An arrangement was subsequently made between the lady and her husband, who promised not to drink any more, and all departed for their homes but the salesman, who got notice not to return to Quebec if he valued his life.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented ; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white ; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

By AUGUSTA J. EVANS WILSON,

Author of "St. Elmo," "Beulah," "Micaria," etc.

CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

Over the beautiful blue bay, where the moon had laid her pavement of gold, floated a low sweet song,—a simple barcarolle, that came from a group of happy souls in a small boat.

"Che cosi vual que pesci,
Fiduline!
L'anel que me casca
Nella bella mia barca
Nella bella se ne va,
Fiduline."

Approaching the shore, the ruddy light burning at one end of the boat showed its occupants; a handsome atheletic young fisherman, and his pretty childish wife, hushing her baby in her arms, with a slow cradle-like movement that kept time to her husband's song.

"Te daro cento scudi
Fiduline!
Sta borsa riecama
Por la bella sua barca
Colla bella se ne va,
Fiduliialo, Fiduline."

Springing ashore he secured the boat, and held out his arms for the sleeping bud that contained in its folded petals all their domestic hopes; and as the star-eyed young mother kissed it lightly and layed it lightly in its father's arms, the happy pair walked away, leaving the echo of their gay musical chatter lingering on the air.

To the woman who watched and listened from the parapet above, it seemed a panel, rosy, dewy, fresh from Tempe, set as a fresco upon the walls of Hell, to heighten the horrors of the doomed.

From her chalice fate had stolen all that was sweet and rapturous in wifehood and motherhood, substituting hemlock; and as the vision of her own fair child was recalled by the sleeping babe of the Italian fisherman, she suffered a keen pang in the consciousness that those tender features of her innocent daughter reproduced vividly the image of the man who had blackened her life.

The face in Regina's portrait was so thoroughly Laurance in outline, and Laurance in colour, that the mother had covered it with a thick veil; unable to meet the deep violet eyes, that she had learned to hate in Rene Laurance and his son.

Yet for the sake of that daughter, whose gaze she shunned, she was about to step down into flames far fiercer than those of Tophet, silently immolating all that remained of her life.

Although she neither turned her head, nor removed her eyes from the sea, she knew that the end was at hand. For one instant her heart seemed to cease beating, then with a keen spasm of pain slowly resumed its leaden labour.

The erect, graceful, manly figure at her side bent down, and the grizzled moustache touched her forehead.

"Odille, I accept your terms. Henceforth, in accordance with your own conditions, you are mine; mine in the sight of God and man."

Recoiling, she drew her handkerchief across the spot where his lips had rested, and her voice sounded strangely cold and haughty.

"God holds Himself aloof from such sacrilege as this, and sometimes I think He does not witness, or surely would forbid. Just yet, you must not touch me. You accept the conditions named, and I shall hold myself bound by the stipulations; but until I am you wife, until you take my hand as Mrs. Laurance,—you will pardon me if I absolutely prohibit all caresses. I am very frank, you see, and doubtless you consider me peculiar,—probably prudish, but only a husband's lips can touch mine, only a husband's arm encircle me. When we are married,"——

She did not complete the sentence, but a peculiar musical laugh rippled over her lips, and she held out her hand to him.

"Remember I promised Gen. Laurance only my hand, and here I surrender it. You have fairly earned it, but I fear it will not prove the guerdon you fondly imagine."

He kissed it tenderly, and keeping it in his, spoke very earnestly.

"Only one thing, Odille, I desire to stipulate and that springs solely from my jealous love. You must promise to abandon the stage forever. Indeed, my beautiful darling, I could not endure to see my wife, my own,—before the footlights. In Mrs. Laurance the world must lose its lovely idol."

"Am I indeed so precious in Gen. Laurance's eyes! Will he hold me always such a dainty, sacred treasure, safe from censure and aspersion! Sir, I appreciate the delicate regard that prompts this expression of your wishes, and with one slight exception I willingly accede to them. I have written a little drama, adapting the chief role to my own peculiar line of talent, and I desire in that play, of my own composition, to bid adieu to the stage. In Paris, where illness curtailed my engagement, I wish to make my parting bow, and I trust you will not oppose so innocent a pleasure? The marriage ceremony shall be performed in the afternoon, and that night I propose to appear in my own play. May I not hope that my husband will consent to see me on my wedding day in that role. Only one night, then adieu forever to the glittering bauble! Can my fastidious lover refuse the first boon I ever craved?"

She turned and placed her disengaged hand on his shoulder, and as the moonlight shone on her smiling, dangerously beguiling face, the infatuated man laid his lips upon the soft white fingers.

"Could I refuse you anything—my beautiful brown-eyed empress? Only once more, then; promise me after that night to resign the stage, to reign solely in my heart and home."

"You have my promise, and when I break my vows it will be the Laurance example that I follow. In your letter you stated that urgent business demanded your return to Paris, probably to America. Can you not postpone the consummation of our marriage?"

"Impossible! How could I consent to defer what I regard as the crowning happiness of my life? I have not so many years in store that I can afford to waste even an hour without you. When I leave Europe I shall take my darling with me."

The moon was shining full upon her face, and the magnificent eyes looked steadily into his. There was no movement of nerve or muscle to betray all that raged in her soul, as she fought and conquered the temptation to spring forward and hurl him over the parapet.

In the flush and enthusiasm of his great happiness he certainly seemed far younger, in proportion to their respective years, than his companion; and as he softly stroked back a wave of golden hair that had fallen on her white brow, he leaned until his still handsome face was close to her and whispered:

"When may I claim you? Do not, my love, delay it a day longer than is absolutely necessary."

"To-morrow morning I will give you an answer. Then I am going away for a few days to Pæstum, and cannot see you again till we meet in Paris. Recollect, I warned you I bring no heart, no love; both are hopelessly lost in the ashes of the past. I never loved but one man, the husband of my youth, the father of my baby; and his loss I shall mourn till the coffin closes above me. Gen. Laurance, you are running a fearful hazard, and the very marble of the altar should find a voice to cry out and stay your madness."

She shivered, and her eyes burned almost supernaturally large and lustrous.

"Can any hazard deter me when the reward will be the privilege, the right, to fold you in my arms? I am afraid of nothing that can result from making you my wife. Do not cloud my happiness by conjuring up spectres that only annoy you, that cannot for an instant influence me. Your hands are icy and you have no shawl. Let me take you home."

Nearing the Villa gate, General Laurance asked:

"What is the character of your drama? Is it historic?"

"Eminently historic."

"In what era?"

"The last eighteen or twenty years."

"When may I read the MS.? I am impatient to see all that springs from your dear hands."

"The dramatic effect will be far finer when you see me act it. Pardon me if I am vain enough to feel assured that my little play will touch my husband's heart as even Racine, Shakspere and Euripides never did!"

There was a triumphant, exultant ring in her silvery voice, that only charmed her infatuated companion, and tenderly pressing the hand that lay on his arm, he added pleadingly:

"At least, my dear Odille, you will tell me the title."

She shook off his fingers and answered quietly:

"Gen. Laurance, I call it merely—Infelice."

Attempt at Self-Destruction.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Ida Hunt aged 30 who resided with a broker named Nones in a boarding-house on Clinton Place, attempted to burn herself to death early this morning. She bolted the door and set her clothing on fire. The smoke awakened the inmates and the fire was extinguished. The woman is dangerously injured. She has two children. Nones quarreled with the woman yesterday and did not return at night. He is a sexagenarian.

The New Orleans Exhibition.

The buildings for this gigantic exhibition are now being rapidly pushed forward. The exhibition promises to surpass in size that of the Great London Exhibition of 1862, as well as the recent Centennial Exhibition, in the number of its exhibits. The London buildings of 1862, which up to that time was the largest exposition structure ever erected, contained 1,400,000 square feet. But the main building at New Orleans will contain 1,656,000 square feet, requiring 9,000,000 feet of lumber, 4,500 kegs of nails, and 5,000 boxes of glass, in its construction. It will be 60 ft. high, with a tower 115 feet, and it will have a music hall in the centre with a seating capacity of 11,000. To light the building there will be 15,000 incandescent lamps, and the steam required for the whole structure will be upwards of 3,000 horse-power. The horticultural hall is a handsome structure, 600 feet long by 104 feet wide, with glass roof and glass tower 60 feet high. This will form the largest conservatory in the world. It is intended to arrange around the sides specimens of the choicest plants from Mexico, Central America, Florida, California and all parts of the United States and Canada, and a special commissioner will visit Europe for the purpose of securing specimens of fruits and plants in order to make this display international in character. The centre of the hall will be devoted to an international fruit display, presenting 20,000 varieties. This is nearly double the quantity of any previous fruit exhibit. There will also be an art gallery. About 1,000 men are engaged on the work of the main buildings, which will be ready for the reception of exhibits in August next.—London Times.

Market and Kitchen Garden.

The hotter and drier the weather, the faster the "pussley" grows. Hoe up and feed it to the pigs.

Vegetables for market should be put up neatly. Beets and other roots must be washed and tied in bunches.

Plant Bush-beans for late crops. Pinch off the ends of the vines of Limas when they reach the top of the poles.

Beets, carrots, and other roots should be hoed until the tops prevent.

The fodder from sweet-corn may be greatly increased by cutting up the stalks as soon as the ears are gathered. Cultivate well.

Gather Cucumbers for pickles as soon as they are of the desired size.

Keep the fruit of Egg-plants from the ground with a wisp of straw or hay.

As Melons approach maturity, turn to secure even ripening.

Do not allow Sweet-potato vines to take root at the joints; move them at each hoeing.

Onions are known to be ripe when a large share of the tops fall over. Pull, dry thoroughly, cut off the tops, and sell, or store in a dry, cool place, spreading thinly.

Cultivate and hoe among the Squashes as long as the vines will allow. Permit the vines to take root at the joints.

Late Cabbages and Cauliflowers need to be kept free from weeds.

Turnips are to be sown; the ground from which the early potatoes were removed is excellent for them. Sow Rutabagas early this month, and the Aberdeen and Yellow Stone any time before September first.

Tomatoes, foliage, stems, and fruit are devoured by a green worm or caterpillar, which can neither bite nor sting, despite its horn. Wherever its abundant droppings are seen on the ground, hunt on the vine for the worm. Keep the vines tied up to the trellis, and cut away all badly shaped fruits.

Personal.

We understand that Mr. James Saulter has resigned his position as Inspector for the Citizens, Insurance Company of Montreal, and has formed a partnership with Mr. Geo. A. Cox of this town for carrying on a Real Estate Agency, Insurance, and other business of a similar character in the city of Toronto, where an office is now being fitted up on one of the best business quarters on King street. In the meantime Mr. Saulter has charge of the Fire department in the Peterborough office, where he will be happy to see all his old customers.

A Fine Beverage.

Not Yet Successful.

The search for the body of the unfortunate young man Mr. Twigg, who was drowned at Nassau Mills on Friday, has been actively continued, but without success. A large number of persons assisted in the search on Sunday.

An Interesting Sporting Event.

The club-swinging match between T. McNaughton, Peterborough, and J. Nunn, Toronto, takes place in the drill shed on Wednesday evening. The stake is a handsome medal, the party doing the greatest number of movements with the neatest execution, to be declared the winner. The combatants swing to music furnished by the Peterborough orchestra.

A Runaway Accident.

On Saturday evening a horse was frightened by a dog near the Ontario and Quebec station and ran away. The occupants of the buggy, Messrs. J. Stien, Harry Rogers (of the Ontario and Quebec) and Hashell, were thrown out. Mr. Stien received several cuts on the face and his leg was hurt, but he received no very serious injury. The others were also more or less injured.

Excursion from Toronto.

A committee of the Sons of Scotland, Toronto, were in town on Saturday making arrangements for an excursion from that city to Peterborough over the Ontario and Quebec Railway on August 18th, on which day the Queen City takes her civic holiday. They expect that the excursion will be very largely attended. The Acme Lacrosse Club will play a match here on that day with the Peterboroughs.

A Good Appointment.

The Bobcaygeon Independent has the following favorable notice of Mr. R. B. Rogers' appointment a Superintendent of the Trent Valley Works pro. tem. :—

"Mr. T. D. Belcher, the Superintending Engineer of the Trent Works, being compelled to retire for a time from his duties, owing to a serious illness, Mr. R. B. Rogers, C. E., of Peterborough has been appointed to act, pro. tem., as Superintendent. Mr. Rogers is a skilful engineer and is well acquainted with the water and the works. The appointment is a good one."

The best assorted stock of Gentlemen's Hosiery for Summer wear may be seen at Andrew McNeil's.

Fruit Jars.

Every person putting up fruit should give the the jars the first-attention; without a perfect sealing jar, it is useless going to the expense and trouble of canning fruit, China Hall is the only store in Peterborough selling the improved perfect fitting "Crown Jar" in firsts. Every jar warranted. It costs no more to have the best as the enormous quantities, we handle enables us to sell our jars as low as any house in the trade and give a better jar, Stone Jars and Jelly Cans all sizes at CHINA HALL.

Pugilistic.

A row that might have taken a serious form if it had not been stopped occurred at the Stewart House on Saturday afternoon. The belligerents were J. Carew, of Ennismore, and one of the Montgomeries, but others took part. It is said that the Montgomery party drove out to Bridgenorth and waited on this side of the village for their foes. Stones were there thrown and other missiles used, but no one was seriously injured. This feud, which has been kept up for some time, may end in something serious if the authorities do not interfere.

Gathering Water Lilies.

Water lilies! Of what delicious quiet rest does the name itself not breathe? Of no flowers surely is it truer that "they toil not, neither do they spin." Not in all nature could we find a plant which knows less of labour. No human gardener tends its growth; no rude hand prunes its stem; unseen, unknown, it unaided perfects its own beauty. Which done, shyly it peers as if abashed into a world as quiet as itself. In placid pools; beneath sheltering boughs; far from the restless wave it opens its spotless petals all thoughtless of its utter purity.

And the delights of gathering these lovely flowers! The very sight of them banishes the thought of toil; no cares dare venture near their unruffled home; trouble smooths its wrinkled brow at sight of their so peaceful ease; all signs of toil depart as one enters this reposeful realm in homage to its graceful queens.

Perhaps too, he, the lily-gatherer, has by some fair one been commissioned to pluck for her these river queens. An added zest is this. With what ardour he performs the pleasant task. How eagerly searches all known and unknown pools. And when a goodly number graces his frail canoe, with what smile of satisfaction does he, drawing ashore, enjoy a well-earned rest. Throwing himself supine, he gazes at the delicate tracery of the overhanging trees, and the deepening colour of the evening sky. The sun sinks, the breeze lulls, the leaves cease to whisper to each other their faint "good-nights," our lily-gatherer yields to the drowsy spell and dreams he places his gifts in the hands of his fair commissioner, hands rivalling in whiteness the fleckless petals of his newly-gathered lilies.

Have we ventured into the region of the purely imaginary? Not at all. Let the reader glide some few miles down the smooth-gliding Otonabee, and we predict that it shall be as we say.

THE FARM AND GARDEN.

Cats on the Farm.

Cats ought to have an honored place on the farm, but too often they have no place at all. This is because they are kept at the house, fondled by the pet-loving children, and fed by the kind-hearted women until they become lazy and worthless. The farmer esteems cats less highly than dogs; but the former are sometimes of the greater value to him. Barn cats should rarely be allowed to come to the house, and never be fed there. All that they need is plenty of milk; coppel them to get the rest of their living, and they will find it about the barn, granaries, cribs, sheds, and in the fields. A good mouser is worth ten cents a day about a granary, crib, or barn. Mice not only destroy grain, but make it filthy for stock: they nibble sacks and implements, and do much other mischief. A good cat will destroy large rats as the young ones. We have an old Maltese Tom, which gets its living by catching ground-mice in the orchard and garden, and is therefore a valuable cat. At this season, when barns, granaries, and cribs are filled, a cat is doubly useful. Give Tom and Tabby a fair trial, and you will always keep cats.—S.

Do Toads do Harm?

Strange as it may appear, all do not recognize a friend in the toad, for we are asked, "if they do any harm in the garden?" Under the writer's front step there is a shelter for several toads, and it is great amusement to watch them as they come out toward night for their evening meal. An insect is seen and then it is not. One can not, at first sight, follow the rapid motion of the tongue of the toad, as it whips up the insect with the rapidity of a wink. The ancient belief that the toad's head contained a "jewel," must have had reference to the tongue of his, which is indeed a "jewel" in the way of an insect destroyer. Harris, the entomologist, states that he fed a toad with some black caterpillars, about three-fourths of an inch long. When he had fed a hundred he was tired, but the toad was not, but was ready for more. Toads are welcomed in our garden, but snakes, which sometimes come in from the woods near by, are not, but only because they prey upon toads. By all means encourage the toad, and discourage the snakes.

Kill the Late Weeds.

The fight with the weeds in the corn-field should not stop with the cultivator. We have frequently seen farmers strive manfully against the pests until midsummer, and then, through negligence, subject themselves to annoyance through the next season. Some weeds have a limited season of growth, and if kept rooted out until midsummer, will rarely come up again; others continue growing until severe frosts come. An old Illinois farmer said a cockleburr would come up in the morning, grow until four in the afternoon, and mature seeds before the frost could kill it that night. This is an exaggeration, yet the cockleburr must be fought until there are heavy frosts. The velvet-leaf, Jimson, and rag-weeds, will commence growth almost as late. Weeds are very prolific, and an occasional one gone to seed in the corn-field will insure a good crop the next season. Corn should not be cultivated after it is tasseled, but the weeds can be cut out without disturbing the soil. For this purpose we have seen a short scythe used, but we much prefer a hoe with a sharp edge.

Green House and Window Plants.

Paint, glaze, and repair the greenhouse.

Secure pots, soil, sand, moss, and whatever else may be needed for winter use.

Care for the plants in pots out of doors as directed in former months.

Make cuttings of plants that were turned into the open ground.

Camellias and other plants with thick leaves must not be exposed to the full sun. Fumigate house plants with tobacco smoke.

Flower Garden and Lawn.

Do not mow the lawn too often in hot and dry weather. Keep the margins of beds, cut in lawns, well defined. Run a sharp spade into the soil, along the margins of the beds, to cut off grass roots.

Ribbon or other beds planted in designs, need care to keep the lines between the kinds of plants distinct, and all at a uniform hight; this may be done by pinching and the use of the knife.

Sticks and string will be needed by Dahlias, Gladiolus, and other tall plants. Keep the supports out of sight.

Remove flowers and flowerclusters as soon as they begin to fade, unless seeds are to be saved.

As soon as flowers on the summer-blooming roses fall, cut back the shoot to a strong bud.

Chrysanthemums should be brought into shape by pinching.

When buds are formed, pot those intended for house blooming. Look out for caterpillars and plant-lice.

Lilies, especially the fall growers, may need stakes. If thin spots appear on the leaves, a caterpillar will be found on the under side. If seed are not wanted, cut away the young pods.

Carnations, to bloom in winter, should have floower stems cut away as they appear.

Does the Mulberry Tree Have Flowers?

This question is asked by a young friend. He finds very young mulberries on the tree, but never sees any flowers. The flowers are there, though, not being at all showy, they may readily escape notice. The mulberry and blackberry, while they look much alike, are very unlike. The blackberry is preceded by a large, showy flower, and the little grains, of which the fruit is made up, are the many pistils of the flowers ripened. The mulberry fruit also consists of numerous rounded grains, but in this case each grain, or little fruit, is preceded by a separate flower. If you examine the mulberry early enough, you will find what you take for a young fruit, to be numerous small flowers, placed closely together on a little stem. To be sure they are not showy flowers, their parts being greenish, but they have stamens and pistils (in separate flowers), and the ripening of the pistils of many flowers makes what we call the fruit of the mulberry.

Valuable Points in Horse Breeding.

Mr. James Howard, a famous English breeder of horses, has arrived at some important conclusions in the art of breeding. He believes that the external structure, configuration and outward characteristics, including peculiarities of locomotion, are mainly derived from the sire, while the structure of the various internal organs, the temper, habits and constitution, come from the dam. The purer the blood of the parent, the more certainty there is of its qualities being transmitted to the offspring. This is particularly true, if the greater purity of race or breed is on the side of the sire. A pure-blooded male that has descended from a stock of uniform color, fixes that same color upon his colt. A sire may influence progeny subsequent to that of which he is a parent; that is, his influence is stamped upon the dam. The transmission of diseases of the vital organs, is more certain from the female, while disorders of the external parts, joints, etc., most surely come from the side of the sire. We know of many exceptions—if they are exceptions to the above points, and give them more as food for thought for horse-breeders and others, than as rules of action.—American Agriculturist.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor and McDonald.

A Great Discovery

That is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave, truly is Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, ticking in the throat, pain in side and chest, or any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Taylor and McDonald's drug store. Large size $1.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain and cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething. Its value is incalculable It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. ## Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

MOWAT CENSURED.

IT is absurd for the Globe and its satellites to pretend that Mr. Mowat has been victorious and that it is only "Tory" detractors who claim the value of his services, when we find independent papers like the Ottawa Sun, and even Reform journals like the Montreal Herald the Newmarket Era and others allowing that the Privy Council decision is to the advantage of Ontario, but blaming Mr. Mowat for depriving us unnecessarily of this benefit for a number of years.

Another meeting will be probably held in September.

Cornwall Scandal.

LONDON, July 26.—The arrest of Dr. Fernandez, of the Cold Stream Guards, on a charge of being an accomplice of Cornwall in crimes, has caused an immense sensation. Dr. Fernandez is a handsome bachelor of 40, and a popular society man. He was arrested last evening while dining with a party of brother officers at Aldershot. Other sensational arrests are expected, and it is said that the police are in search of another officer of the guards, who is a relative of the Marquis of Salisbury, who himself sports a title, and who has fled to avoid arrest. The number of criminals implicated in these practices will reach twenty, and most of them are prominent men in official and social circles.

The evidence in the Cornwall inquiry to-day at Dublin was horrible. The prisoners were remanded for trial.

THE O. & Q. RAILWAY.

The Kaladar Sink-hole Difficulty Entirely Overcome—The Road to be Opened next Week.

The travelling public, who have been so much interested in, and desirous for, the early completion of the Ontario & Quebec Railway, will be glad to learn that the formidable obstacle met with by the sink hoje at Kaladar has at last been entirely overcome, and that a week from last Monday the through express train service to Montreal will be inaugurated. When, early in May, a representative of the Mail travelled over the entire length of the new line, there was not the slightest indication of any such break as has since taken place. The region around Kaladar is a granite one. On both sides of the line for many miles enormous boulders are strewn, and at the particular point where the sink took place the long low range of granite hills attains such a height as to warrant the appellation of the Bald mountains. The first signs of the break were very slight, as only about twenty feet gave way. Under the enormous weight of the trains, however, this extended until nearly four hundred feet of track went down. Mr. Whyte, general superintendent of the road, left the city on Tuesday for a trip over the road, and with the more particular object of noting the way in which the obstruction has been overcome. He returned to the city yesterday afternoon from Montreal in company with Mr. George Stephen, president of the C.P.R., and Mr. VanHorne, vice-president and general manager. In conversation with a representative of The Mail, Mr. Whyte said that the sink hole may now be considered as fairly overcome. For the entire distance of 400 feet and to a depth of 40 feet heavy logs had been placed one upon the other, and on this the track had been re-laid, which will now carry any heavy train. The appearance of the place when the sink took place is said to have been very peculiar, the track having dropped under the weight of the ballast trains, and the earth being forced up on each side to a height of twelve feet. When asked why the service of express trains would not be commenced on Monday next as previously announced, Mr. Whyte replied that the desire was to give the road a thorough testing, which would be done next week by means of the freight trains it was purposed to send through. There was no desire to create a false impression in the minds of the public, and when an express train was advertised the intention was to send it through as such, and not be compelled to slacken speed at what might be considered a dangerous point. Mr. Whyte reports that the crops along the line, which suffered early in the season for want of moisture, are now looking well and promise a good harvest.—Mail.

IMMIGRANTS ARRIVING.

Good Classes of Settlers Coming in from the Old World.

Sixty Icelanders arrived yesterday morning, July 20th, and 200 more are expected in about eight or ten days. The ones just arrived were destined for Dakota, utilizing the C.P.R. as the cheapest route to reach their destination, but fortunately meeting some of the land of blizzards, were induced to remain in Manitoba, and will settle near Gilmli—a place which has regained its old-time prosperity. They are from the south of Iceland, and are of a superior class, besides possessing some little means.

A few Hollanders also arrived—the third or fourth batch this season. They report that a large immigration will follow, as their predecessors have sent home good accounts of this country. This is a class which makes excellent settlers, as they possess means, are steady and industrious, and very thrifty.—Winnipeg Times.

Mr. Gladstone sent a letter apologizing for his absence, and the Marquis of Hartington, in supporting the resolution of confidence in Mr. Gladstone's policy, charged the Conservatives with insincerity in their professed desire to enlarge the franchise. Their fears that the Government redistribution scheme would favour the Liberal majority were ungrounded. He believed it would be imprudent to attempt to reform the Lords now, as the Government had sufficient work on hand already. Mr. Bright also made a speech

REFORMERS AND THE C.P.R.

We learn from the Winnipeg journals that a number of immigrants of a class that will make them excellent aids in settling and developing the great North West have been arriving recently in Manitoba. Among the latest arrivals is a large party of Icelanders, and the circumstances connected with their settlement in Manitoba are worthy of note. It seems that they were on their way to Dakota, but finding that the C.P.R. afforded the cheapest route to their destination, they came through Winnipeg, where they were induced to remain in our country.

Because the C.P.R. was originated by and has made its wonderful progress under a Conservative Administration, it has been persistently slandered by the Reformers. Mr. Blake and his followers and journalists could not bear to see the Conservative policy succeed—they could not endure to see the country developed and flourishing under Conservative guidance, and therefore they have in every possible way thwarted and misrepresented our great national highway. They have vilified the C.P.R. as an extortionate monopoly, and their falsehood is proved by the stern logic of facts. So reasonable are the terms of the C.P.R. that it is even securing some of the carrying trade to the United States territory as the preferable route.

This same circumstance also proves the good service rendered by the C.P.R. the wisdom of the Conservative policy and the folly of that of the Reform leaders.—Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Blake and some of their principal supporters have haranged against the idea of having a Canadian road from ocean to ocean. If they could have had their own way a portion of the road across the prairie would have been constructed, and for years we would have continued to be dependent for access to our own territory, upon the railroads of the United States. If the country were still in the hands of these incompetent and therefore rejected advisers, we would not have had these immigrants for Dakota intercepted and induced to settle in Manitoba. And it must be remembered that it is not only the benefit that we have deived from this accession to our population, valuable as that is, nor even the prospect of the same result being repeated in many instances. This case is only a specimen of what must necessarily often happen when adjoining countries are competing for settlers. Similar cases of diversion of the stream of immigration have occurred to an incalculable extent, but to our disadvantage. How many settlers who were bound for Manitoba by the St. Paul route were induced to the energetic "touts" who swarmed on the line to remain in the States can never be computed accurately, but the total must be large. There is little fear in future of our being subjected to this loss, and, as we have seen, the prospect now is that the adverse balance will be redressed. Of cours we cannnot expect Mr. Blake or his supporters to rejoice in this change, for it will lesser the foundation upon which they have built up eir exaggerated story of an exodus from Canada. But those Canadians who prefer the good of heir country to any partizan prejudices, and there are many Reformers, though not of Mr. Blake's school, among the number, will give credit to the C.P.R. and the Macdonald Administration for the benefits rendered to the Dominion.

The reports as to the Manitoba immigration also speaks of the large number of Hollanders arriving, and their excellent qualifications as settlers. Ill-natured jeers have been levelled by the more rabid of the Reform obstructionists at the C.P.R. for obtaining a portion of its finances from Amsterdam. But for the interest taken by the Dutch shareholders in our great railway there would have been little likelihood of our obtaining this valuable accession to our population. The C.P.R. with its extensive ramifications and influential friends has proved a most effective emigration agency, having been very successful in spite of all the obstruction of Reformers orating in Parliament or masquerading as farmers in Manitoba.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

WHAT IS WHELER'S PRICE?

There seems to be an unnecessary amount of mystification about the price paid Mr. Wheler for making way for Mr. Edgar. The promise of an office is freely admitted, but its character is concealed. What is the purpose of this reticence?—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

THE ONTARIO DEBT.

If the surplus were still available there need be but little difficulty. But unfortunately the savings left by Sandfield Macdonald have all been squandered, and there is nothing now for it but to go aborrowing.—London Free Press.

FORCED UPON THEM.

West Ontario don't care to have imposed upon it the rejected of such constituencies as South Oxford, South Ontario, Centre Toronto and Monk. If Mr. Edgar was not good enough for these—some of them well known to have liberal majorities, why should West Ontario be asked to accept him?—Newmarket Era (Reform.)

MR. MOWAT'S SLANDERSHIP.

We judge, however, from the way the result is announced, that practically the result is favorable to Ontario; and the only regret is that this appeal to the Privy Council had not been taken years ago; and the question of jurisdiction removed from the political arena long before such scenes as took place last election at Rat Portage were enacted.—Newmarket Era (Reform).

JUSTICE DEFERRED.

The Provincial Government is to be congratulated on the result, which secures Ontario enormous resources, and practically places her people in a position of independence from all fear of direct taxation. At the same time it must not be forgotten that this result could have been obtained long ago had the suggestions of Sir John Macdonald to carry the matter before the Privy Council been acted upon.—Ottawa Sun (Reform).

FROM HIS HIGH HORSE.

A few months ago, after years of strenuous resistance to the proposal, Mr. Mowat came down from his high horse and agreed to have a case referred for consideration of the Jurisdiction Committee. For that purpose he invited the Attorney-General of Manitoba to Toronto, and the result was their agreement upon a case, which was submitted a few days ago, with the results recently announced.—Ottawa Citizen.

REFORM FORGERS.

The Hamilton Times, with its usual unscrupulousness and audacity, publishes a paragraph reflecting on Hon. Mr. Carling's ability as a Minister and credits to "the Winnipeg Times (Tory)." It is almost needless to say that the Times never published such a paragraph as is attributed to it. Canada never had a better Postmaster-General than Mr. Carling, whose attention to the affairs of his department is unceasing.—Winnipeg Times.

MOWAT TO BLAME.

What was needed, and what should have been secured long ago, was the judicial determination of so irritating a question by the highest court in the Empire; and we think Mr. Mowat to blame for delaying his consent to such a settlement. Whatever the decision may be on the remaining points, the Dominion, Ontario and Manitoban authorities will, no doubt, promptly, if not cheerfully, acquiesce in it, and this inflammable question, which through partisan fanning had reached a condition dangerous to the peace of the Dominion, will be extinguished once and for ever.—Montreal Herald (Ref.)

ONTARIO WRONGED.

In Ontario nobody seriously questioned the right of the Province to a large territory west and north of the height of land. The only quarrel the "traitors" had with Mr. Mowat was that he refused to take the proper steps to make our title to that territory good. For a dozen years he has kept the people out of their own for selfish personal and party purposes; when, as the event proves, he might have ended the matter in six months. The wrong done this Province has been incalculable. For that wrong Mr. Mowat is solely responsible. For that wrong he will be held in account.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE MOWAT-BLAKE SCHEME.

Mr. Mowat has used his prerogative outside of his own proper sphere. What right had he to tax tne people in Ontario as a province in order that some personal arrangement in relation to the House of Commons might be carried out; one in which the general public has no concern? It is a glaring prostitution of the provincial treasury to the personal convenience of Mr. Blake.—London Free Press.

THE WAY OF THE PRODIGAL.

The Globe, in a delirious fit of self-congratulation over the issue of the second question in the Boundary case, tells us what will be done with the new property that is to come into our possession. We are informed that Ontario "will have enough of real estate with which to carry on indefinitely the government of the Province without direct taxation."

That is to say, that if an estate has come into our hands, we ought to proceed at once to squander it. It is the principle on which the Mowats and Pardees have acted all along. The woods and forests have been ruthlessly laid under tribute in years past to "recuperate the surplus." Whenever the surplus is drafted upon to meet deficiencies in the ordinary revenue it is "recuperated" by a sale of pine lands. The Globe calls this "carrying on the government of the Province without direct taxation." But we rather opine that it is the most direct kind of taxation that could be devised, the fact of living off capital to the tune of half a million a year, as has been the case at Toronto.

The drafts made upon the pine lands have already been so frequent and extensive that the public estate in that direction has been depleted by eight thousand square miles. The lands still unsold, according to the Provincial Treasurer, amount to 20,000 square miles, which, upon the Government's valuation of $500 a mile, leaves but $16,000,000 as the capital remaining to the Province in the form of timber lands. That is "definite" enough at any rate. At the present course of expenditure a few years will see this all drained away, ostensibly to "recuperate the surplus," but the dullest intellect must see that recuperation of this kind does not mean economy of resources, but an extravagant and inflated mode of administration. Exactly to the extent that the surplus is recuperated from the woods and forests the government are living off capital. The leading organ itells us in the article referred to above, that this is all right, a commendable policy, and that the acquisition of new territory in the Rainy River region, which is supposed to contain a tract of valuable timber, is a great thing, and a kind of financial salvation, inasmuch as it will enable the Government to be carried on "indefinitely" without direct taxation. This is but to say in other words that without such new acquisition direct taxation would have very shortly to be resorted to. The word "indefinitely" comes in handy; but the people are not so easily satisfied. They will not be reconciled to a continued policy of extravagance, either with the new territory or the old, the end of which is declared to be "indefinite," lasting for five years or fifteen years as the case may be, and at the end to have direct taxation looming up with apalling distinctness. What they ask is that the administration shall be so economically carried on that the evil day may be put off definitely and decisively for a long time to come. They would like to see the surplus "recuperated," but from the ordinary income, not the transference of a portion of the capital from one pocket to another. The principle of carrying on the Government at the expense of the real estate of the Province, as the Globe above enunciates, is one of the most vicious and reprehensible that could enter the heart of a minister to conceive. Yet that is undoubtedly the way in which affairs are now carried on. "Spend while you may, boys; have a good time! the old farm can stand it!"—London Free Press.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

THE NECESSITY FOR NIGHT POLICEMEN SHOWN BY THE POST-OFFICE ROBBERY.

Waterworks and Street Watering—Sewerage—Two New Bridges to be Built—Bethune Street Bridge—Midland Railway Workshops—Reports of Committees—The Midland Bonds—Street Improvements—Miscellaneous Matters.

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday evening.

PRESENT—Councillors Cahill, Allen, Kelly, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Menzies, Kendry, Hartley, Green, Millar and Davidson.

In the absence of the Mayor Councillor Kelly was, on motion, called on to preside. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

While the minutes were being read the Mayor came in and took the chair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From W. A. Morrow, Secretary of the Board of Education, submitting a copy of the School Board estimates, and stating that the amount required this year was $10,450.—Finance Committee.

From John Corkery, Secretary of the Separate School Board, stating that the amount required by the Board this year was $2,000.—Finance Committee.

From N. F. Patterson, chairman of the Relief Committee, asking assistance for those who suffered by the Port Perry fire.—Finance Committee.

From Mrs. J. G. Hall, Secretary of the Protestant Home, asking for $25 as an instalment of the expenses of a boy sent to Home for Incurables.—Granted.

From T. Smith, asking to have repairs made in house rented by him from the Corporation.—Property Committee.

From E. E. Henderson and 25 others asking for street improvements on Charlotte street.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From W. F. Johnston and others, complaining of a nuisance.—Board of Health.

From Wm. Lech and 102, asking for the construction of a sewer on George street.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From John Carnegie, Secretary of the West Riding Agricultural Society, asking the Council for the use of the old burying ground for holding the annual fall exhibition.—Granted.

From H. C. Rogers, postmaster, complaining of the indifference of the town police on the occasion of the recent post-office robbery.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were read and all except those of W. S. Cocks and H. C. Rogers were referred to the Finance Committee :—

|---|---|
| Rubber Co | $ 2 40 |
| C. A. Weller, attending Court in liquor cases | 40 00 |
| H. C. Rogers, postage stamps | 4 00 |
| Peterborough Protestant Home | 18 00 |
| A. Hall, repairs to water cart | 18 83 |
| H. Rush, charity | 34 30 |
| H. Best | 2 40 |
| W. S. Cocks, signs for sanitary inspectors | 2 50 |

SEWERAGE.

Mr. W. LECH was heard in support of the petition asking for a sewer on George street. He said that everyone he had seen agreed that the construction of the sewer was necessary. He did not see that it should be constructed entirely by local tax, as to be properly done it should be carried to the locks and other sewers could be run into it. The portion on the populated part of George street might be built by local tax and the remaining part by the general taxes. The present sewer was a nuisance and might cave in at any time. If Peterborough thirty years ago saw the necessity for a sewer, surely they needed a system of sewerage now.

The matter was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

THE POST OFFICE ROBBERY.

Mr. Rogers' communication was taken up.

The MAYOR said that on the morning of the post office robbery he telegraphed to the Government for a detective, and he received the reply that one would be sent. He supposed it had been done.

The CLERK said that it was done, and the detective went away this morning.

Councillor KEILY advocated having better police protection. He suggested that one of the policemen might be on duty at night.

Councillor KENDRY said that the present police force had all that they could attend to, with their different duties, and there would be no use of having one man on duty at night.

Councillor MENZIES suggested that a memorial be sent to the Government asking to have better safes provided for the post offices. He thought there should be two policemen at night, and the merchants should leave the gas burning all night.

Mr. G. Johnston, Chief of Police, said that he always understood that someone slept in the post office, and if they had seen a man going into it they would have thought nothing of it. When he heard of the robbery he examined the office, and then went to the railway station to watch the trains. It was strange that the robbery took place at a time when there was a good haul in it. He had taken other steps to get a clue to the robbers, but he did not tell Mr. Rogers what he was doing.

Councillor MENZIES moved, seconded by Councillor RUTHERFORD,—That the matter of night police protection be referred to the Committee on Appointments to office, they to report at the next meeting of the Council.—Carried.

BETHUNE STREET BRIDGE.

A communication was read from J. G. Machlin, Engineer Midland Division G. T. R., submitting plans for a new bridge on Bethune street. The bridge would cost $1,100, and he asked what proportion the town would pay.

Councillor CAHILL thought that the railway company should repair the bridge itself.

It was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Councillor DAVIDSON read the following report of the Finance Committee :—

To the Mayor and Councillors of Peterborough :

GENTLEMEN,—The Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend the payment of the following accounts and grants :—

|---|---|
| John Halpin | $ 21 70 |
| Aaron Comstock | 53 75 |
| Sailsbury & Co | 9 50 |
| Dickson Estate | 168 09 |
| Geo. Stethem | 50 23 |
| Peterborough Gas Co. (Council Chamber) | 12 85 |
| Dominion Bridge Co | 320 04 |
| Conveying prisoners and lunatics | 15 28 |
| Alfred McDonald | 75 00 |
| REVIEW Printing Co | 10 35 |
| REVIEW Printing Co | 28 34 |
| Times Printing Co | 9 75 |
| E. B. Edwards | 136 55 |
| Mechanics' Institute | 100 00 |

The Committee would also recommend to the Council that as no part of the overdue interest or principal of the Midland Railway Company bonds have been paid, they would instruct the Secretary of the Town Trust to collect the same forthwith.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. S. DAVIDSON,
Chairman.

Peterborough, July 17, 1884.

The report was adopted.

CHARITY COMMITTEE.

Councillor GREEN read the report of the Charity Committee, stating that the management of the Home for Incurables, Toronto, had agreed to take Isabella Drummond, a cripple, for the lump sum of $1,000. A meeting was held of the Charity Committee, Trustees of the Hall Poor Trust and others, and it was agreed that the town should pay $250, the Hall Poor Trust $250, and the remainder to be made up by a contribution from St. Andrew's Church and by relatives. They recommended the adoption of this agreement.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that he understood that a lady in town intended establishing a home for such cases here, and it might be well to wait.

Councillor GREEN said that they could not get her kept in town one year for $250.

After further discussion the report was adopted.

FIRE, WATER AND GAS COMMITTEE.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that he had made a satisfactory arrangement with the village of Ashburnham regarding the sum owed by that village to the town for the services of the fire department. The debt was $800, and was of long standing. They had settled it for $750. He read the following report of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee :—

The Fire, Water and Gas Committee beg to report that in regard to the petition of Mr. Pousette and others, asking to have a hydrant put down on the corner of George and Smith streets at the expense of the corporation, your Committee cannot recommend such an expenditure but would recommend that they get the required properly signed petition as required by By-law.

Your Committee recommend that the petition of W. H. Moore and others, asking to have the Water Company extend their water pipes along London street, be granted, provided there is the required number of ratepayers, the Clerk to give the required notice to the Water Company.

With regard to the proposition of the Peterborough Water Company asking for a settlement of water used on streets outside of hydrant limits, your Committee decline to do anything in the matter and would recommend the Council to decide the whole matter in Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

A. RUTHERFORD,
Chairman.

The first two clauses of the report were adopted, and the Council went into Committee of the Whole on the third clause, Councillor Hartley in the Chair.

Councillor RUTHERFORD read a letter from the President of the Water Company, which proposed that the town put in stand pipes for taking water for the watering carts, as a payment for the water which had been used outside of the limits covered by the hydrants. These were necessary because the constant use of the hydrants would impair them. Mr. Rutherford remarked that the contract for using the hydrants for the year was about expired, and the ratepayers should sign petitions for them again if they wished their property protected by the waterworks. He also submitted statements regarding the area watered by the watering carts which had been prepared by the Water Company.

Councillor KELLY said that George street was paying a local tax for the hydrants and street watering, and they were also paying a portion of the cost of watering outside streets, while they had to pay the heaviest part of the taxes of the town. He was willing to pay either a local tax or a general tax, but he did not wish to pay both. The Council should have an understanding about watering the streets. His opinion was that the town should own the waterworks.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that the town paid for the lamps on George street, for scraping the streets and other things, and they should not complain. There were 9270 lineal feet of streets watered inside of the fire limits and 10,093 feet outside of the limits.

Councillor MENZIES moved, seconded by Mayor COX,—That a special meeting of the Council be held on Thursday night, July 31st, for the purpose of settling the amount to be paid the Water Company for extra water taken for watering the streets outside the fire limits, and also to receive petitions for hydrants in streets and also for renewing arrangements with Mr. McClennan for street watering and that Mr. McClennan go on watering the streets in the meantime.—Carried.

A SIDEWALK WANTED.

Councillor DOUGLASS moved, seconded by Councillor YELLAND,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to lay a sidewalk on the west side of Chambers street.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

BRIDGES OVER THE CREEK.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor RUTHERFORD,—That it is desirable to erect substantial and permanent stone and iron bridges over the creek on Hunter and Simcoe streets; and whereas the necessary expenditure to make such improvements will be necessarily large and it is not advisable to place such a large amount on the collector's roll for the current year in addition to the ordinary expenditure, be it therefore resolved, the Street and Bridge Committee be and are hereby authorized to consult with the Commissioners of the Town Trust for the purpose of obtaining from them the sum of $5,000 to be expended in the construction of stone and iron bridges as above, and that the committee report to this Council and that the Mayor be requested to call a special meeting if necessary to receive such report.—Carried.

THE PARK.

The use of the drill shed grounds was granted to the Sons of Scotland for an excursion on August 18th.

Councillor HARTLEY, in answer to Councillor DAVIDSON, said that nothing had been done yet in regard to the Court House Park, but the committee were to meet and would probably report at the next regular meeting.

MIDLAND WORKSHOPS.

Councillor RUTHERFORD moved, seconded by Councillor MILLAR,—That in order to keep up the present prosperity of the town, no opportunity should be lost sight of that would advance the interest of the ratepayers, be it therefore resolved, that Geo. A. Cox, Esq., Mayor, James Stevenson, Esq., Chairman of the Commissioners, and Wm. Clurton, Esq President of the Water Company, be sent as a deputation to visit Montreal to interview the authorities of the Grand Trunk Railway with a view of having the local workshops of that large corporation established in this town.

The MAYOR said he did not think that the visit of the deputation would be of any service at the present time. He had said to the officials of the company all that probably could be said by the deputation to induce them to establish shops here. He was still hopeful that they might have repair shops here, but their policy was not definitely settled.

After further discussion the motion was adopted.

STONES ON THE STREETS.

Councillor ALLEN moved, seconded by Councillor KELLY,—That the Street Inspector be authorized to remove the stones to be removed from George street south of Charlotte street.—Carried.

The Council adjourned until Thursday evening.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Cricket.

A cricket match was played at Lakefield on Saturday between a club of that village and a mixed team from Peterborough. The Peterborough team went first to the bat and made a score of 36, and the Lakefield team followed with 59. Peterborough again went to the bat, but there was not time to finish the match. ## THE CANOE PARADE.

A Large Number of Spectators and a Small Number of Canoes.

The third of a series of illuminated canoe parades came off on the waters of the Little Lake on Monday evening, as previously announced, and proved to be somewhat of a disappointment to the very large number of spectators who assembled on Burnham's point to witness the performances of the knights of the paddle. Very few of the canoes that were to participate in the evening's sport made their appearance until late in the evening—here and there a stray light being discernible to the eye, and nothing more. The night was lovely and the lake was like a sheet of glass, there not being a ripple to be observed on the water. It is to be regretted that the parade was not more of a success (in the number of canoeists) on this account, as on some future evening perhaps Nature will not be so generous in allowing the canoe men such another night of calm and tranquillity. About nine o'clock the canoes that were assembled (illuminated) got together near the Ashburnham shore of the lake, and paddled up in line to the point, after which they went through the usual routine of "parade drill," and although the numbers were small—some twelve or thirteen canoes, yet the scene, as witnessed by those on shore, presented a pretty enough sight, and in a measure made up for the disappointment in number. The Golden-Eye, in the meantime, had steamed down the river, and come alongside the Ashburnham shore, where a number of passengers were taken on board. Her bow was then turned towards the lake, and she thus spent the evening sailing around, while on the palace scow the lovers of the terpsichorean art enjoyed themselves in "chasing the fleeting hours with flying feet," to the music of Reynold's Quadrille Band.

A BEACON LIGHT.

The thanks of all are due to some persons—no doubt charitably disposed—who built a large fire on Point St. Charles. This had the splendid effect of lighting the whole lake, and made the scene from Burnham's Point a very enchanting one indeed. The onlooker could picture to himself an imaginery fairyland as he gazed on the placid water after this fire was lit, for the reflection on the surface had the effect of drawing the attention of one to the really unusual sight. About ten o'clock the large crowd commenced to disperse, and soon the lake resumed its hitherto unmolested and quiet repose, not even a rocket being set off as a parting farewell to the mermaids of the deep.

LACROSSE.

The Tuscaroras, of Norwood, and the Independents—The Peterborough Boys Win.

The Tuscaroras, a junior lacrosse club, of Norwood, and the Independents, a Peterborough club, played a match on the cricket ground on Monday afternoon. There was a fair attendance of spectators. Willie Welsh was chosen referee, and W. Giroux and F. Reynolds umpires. The teams were composed as follows:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| J. Phelan | Goal | | J. Kemp |
| J. McDonald | Point | | F. Stephenson |
| C. Robinson | Cover Point | | W. Douglas |
| F. Goyette | Defence Field | | T. Searight |
| T. Meagher | " | " | H. Hill |
| G. Martin | " | " | L. Cope |
| J. Begley | Centre Field | | R. Rahal |
| J. Allen | Home Field | | C. Brennan |
| W. Kelly | " | " | R. Phillips |
| F. Trahnor | " | " | H. Pearse |
| T. Giroux | 2nd Home | | A. Eaton |
| O. Watson | 1st Home | | J. McKelvie |
| R. S. Kelly | Field Captain | | R. J. Stewart |

The match was an interesting one. In the first game the teams appeared to be evenly matched, but it was won by the Tuscaroras in five minutes. During the second game the Independents kept the ball close to the Norwood goal the greater part of the time, although their own flags were frequently in danger. McDonald threw the ball from near centre, Giroux passed it on and, striking the leg of a Norwood player, it went through. The time of the second game was fifteen minutes. The third game was a longer one, the Tuscaroras playing almost entirely on the defensive. The Independents won it by Felix Traynor dropping the ball in front of the goal and Watson putting it through. The Tuscaroras woke up again in the fourth game and made it lively for the Peterborough boys, and won the game after seventeen minutes play. The fifth and final game was another long one. Ten minutes was lost by a Norwood player being hurt, and, including that time, the game lasted half an hour. Finally Traynor succeeded in putting the ball through the Tuscaroras' goal, and the Independents had won the match by three games to two. The boys in both teams played very well, and several of them showed not a little science in the game, but they should endeavor to play less roughly. At the conclusion of the match the usual cheers were given and the boys returned to town.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—As there is a rumour current in town that the Fire Brigade Band promised to turn out and play at the Illuminated Canoe Parade on the Little Lake last evenings, I beg to say that the band made no such promice, and such statements as are afloat are without the slightest foundation.

Respectfully yours,
F. W. MILLAR,
Bandmaster.

THE HEALTH ACT.

TUESDAY, July 29.—Several cases for infringement of the Public Health Act were called this morning, but five of them were enlarged for a week and one for a day.

Warm Weather Ties in great variety at Andrew McNeil's.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor and McDonald.

Ready Cleaner

is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all remedies, and the natives place the most perfect confidence in it.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:

DEAR SIRS,—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants tell us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed recovered.

Believe me, dear sir, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

POLICE COURT.

GOT A MONTH.

WEDNESDAY, July 30.—Alfred Hough was charged with not supporting his family. He pleaded not guilty, but it appeared from the evidence that he was more of a burden than a support to them, and as he had once before appeared on the same charge, he was given one month in gaol at hard labor.

Picnic and Concert.

On Tuesday afternoon a pleasant picnic was held in the Separate School grounds, Murray street, in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral and under the auspices of the ladies of No. 3 Ward. In the evening a concert, under the same auspices, was held in the library room of the school building. Previous to the concert the City Band played several selections in the grounds, and the refreshment tables provided there were well patronized. The concert was largely attended, the room being filled to overflowing. The entertainment was commenced by an overture by the City Band Orchestra, which was loudly applauded. A good programme had been prepared and it was admirably rendered, each member calling forth applause, and a violin solo by Prof. Doucet received an encore. The following was the programme:—

PART FIRST.

|---|---|
| Overture | City Band Orchestra |
| Opening Chorus | "Millard's Gloria" Choir |
| Instrumental Solo | Prof. Doucet |

Miss A. Delaney presided at the piano with her well known ability. After the concert refreshments were served in another room. The concert was a very successful one, both as to the attendance and entertainment, and the financial result was satisfactory.

ROTTENNESS IN MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—It is not often that I enjoy the deliberations of our Town Council, but as I had the pleasure on Monday last, it struck me that business regarding very important matters was gone over and handled so carelessly as though deserving no consideration at all, and this was well illustrated when the question was brought forward by one of the Councillors as to the employment of a night police force. It seems to me, as an observer, that our Town fathers are not acting in concert for the well being of the town or such would not happen. The time when houses might safely be left unlocked at night has passed away, and that our town requires more protection at that time than during the day is unquestionable, which some of the Councillors cannot comprehend, and their views on such matters seem only of a personal character, as it is not likely that either a blacksmith's or a carpenter's shop would be burglarized, and therefore the throwing of cold water by them on schemes of importance. Persons who have suffered loss, as I did in 1868 when the hard earnings of two years vanished by a forcible entry into my store, at present the premises occupied by Mr. Tully, look on the matter different than some of the Councillors. Although the burglar received his reward at the penetentiary, yet it was poor satisfaction for the loss sustained. The way such matters are made light of and disposed of summarily by giving the public to understand that such expenses have to be met by a local Tax, when the whole town should justly pay their share as this is no local affair whatever, as it gives protection to all alike, not only against evil disposed persons but also in point of safety against fire, as it makes a great difference when a fire is discovered. But if the question of a local tax always crops up, it would be of the greatest importance that all improvements should be local, for which at present the business portion of the town has to bear the largest share of the burden, and such an arrangement would make a vast difference in paying taxes. Blessed is the municipality which has an energetic police force, which know of no fear and show no favour.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space in your columns.

TEACHERS' SUPERANNUATION.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—May I ask a space in your columns for the following?—"That is right, Mr. Ross."—So says Truth in its last issue, page 4, in the article about teachers: and I suppose to doubt Truth may imply heresy or presumption; however, let us look at facts. In 1854 an agreement was made by government with the teachers in regard to the superannuation fund; this agreement being again ratified during the changes of the school law in 1871. Now the Government is advised to cancel or ignore the agreement entered into in good faith, and Truth says "this is right." Again,—I was speaking to a teacher on Saturday last who is now 65 years of age, has been teaching 28 years and intends to retire at Christmas. He says "I expect an allowance sufficient to keep me from starvation," but no, let such individuals apply to the Council for charity. "That is right, Mr. Ross." Then for soothing syrup—"build teacher's residences; give larger salaries." Suppose 10 per cent. of public school teachers are married, also 6 per cent. female teachers; what are you going to do with the residences—employ married persons only? or make mature spinsters and jolly bachelors "keep house" in these residences? In regard to salaries, when a man of Dr. Ryerson's ability failed to place teachers' salaries at a certain minimum, I question whether even Truth can accomplish this desirable end; however, train public opinion, hope on, and deal justly, irrespective of the clamours of those who only see one side to a question.

THE ST. LOUIS CASE.

ST. LOUIS, July 28.—The president of the Louisiana State Board of Health telegraphs that an exhaustive investigation fails to establish even the remotest suspicion of Asiatic cholrra, as the cause of the death of the infant on the steamer Annie Silver.

REPORT OF A. U. S. CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Consul Mason at Marseilles telegraphs as follows:—"There is a marked improvement in Marseilles and Toulon. The cholera deaths there from the daily average of 60 fell to 43 on Wednesday, 48 on Thursday, 38 on Friday, 58 on Saturday, 36 on Sunday, and last night 13 in 12 hours. The mortality from all causes is also declining. At Toulon the average fell from 40 to 15. Isolated cases are reported from various parts of the district. The epidemic has declined in severity at Arles and Aix.

PARIS, July 26.—During the present epidemic sickly persons appear to have been attacked rather than the healthy sections of the population. At Arles many persons have become insane through fear. The total number of places in France where the infection has appeared is 14.

Complaints are being made at Marseilles that the measures of precaution against the spread of cholera have been slackened and that the work of disinfection is not sufficiently thorough. The police arrested a number of undertakers who were selling the bedding and clothing which belonged to victims of the epidemic. Only three thousand persons are at work in the arsenal at Toulon. Seven thousand workmen are usually employed there.

The Papal Nuncio here applied to the Italian Ambassador for a pass across the frontier without being subjected to quarantine regulations. His request was refused. The Mayor of Turin, who is travelling in France, made a similar request and was also refused.

THE GLOBE'S SLANDERS.

It often happens that the Globe repeats a falsehood till it appears really to believe in the truth of its own invention. Having repeatedly slandered the Conservatives by accusing them of wishing to rob Ontario of its territory, the robbery consisting in urging an appeal years ago to the Privy Council, it now seems to be surprised that Conservatives should rejoice in the prospect of obtaining even more than the award, and should deprecate any surrender of our rights. It an editorial note it says:—

"The last exhibition of this new rabies is in their charging Mr. Mowat, with disloyalty to Ontario because he pleaded, they say, before the Privy Council only for the territory awarded to this Province by the arbitrators, and not for the much larger amount to which Ontario was justly entitled? This is very funny. Gentlemen, whence this new born zeal?

The zeal is by no means new-born. We can answer for ourselves that the REVIEW has for year after year objected to the ratification of the award because we believed it to be insufficient. Among other authorities for this opinion we had Mr. Mowat, Mr. Mills and other Reform leaders in Ontario, who alleged that our just claim for exceeded the award. We had Mr. Laurier, the leader of the Quebec wing of the Reform party, who advocated the ratification of the award on the express ground that the Privy Council would probably give us more. We had Sir Francis Hincks, who admitted that the arbitrators had decided every doubtful point against Ontario, and that their adoption of Col. Denis' compromise boundary gave us far less territory than we would otherwise have obtained. Many Conservative journals, notably the Hamilton Spectator and in fact most Conservatives took the same view of the insufficiency of the award.

We gave other reasons for objecting to the award. We showed that it was inconstitutional and illegal; that the arbitrators had no valid authority and that they exceeded their instructions; that Mr. Mackenzie had expressly reserved for Parliament the power of ratification or rejection; that the award would not be good against other parties interested; and that the irregular settlement would be a bad precedent for other Provinces wanting to claim supposed rights from the executive. But we steadily kept before our readers the fact that the award was probably insufficient, and that the surrender of our full rights was highly objectionable.

The Globe and its imitators calmly ignored our contention, called us and other Conservatives who held the same views "robbers" and "traitors," and now pretends to believe that we have changed our views.

It is the Globe and Mr. Mowat who have shifted their ground, in that they have adopted at length the Conservative policy of going to the Privy Council, after slandering for years those who advocated this course.

The Privy Council has come to the same conclusion as we did that the award was worthless. If the case has been properly handled we believe that they will also come to the same conclusion as ourselves that it was insufficient.

Whatever they give us, it is certain that Mr. Mowat has deprived us of the enjoyment of it for twelve years.

THE INVALID AWARD.

SIR FRANCIS HINCKS has recently given to the public his views on the boundary question as submitted to the Privy Council. We quote the following paragraph which shows that he and the other arbitrators substituted a "convenient line" for the legal limits, thus exceeding such powers as had been irregularly given to them, and doing Ontario an injustice. Sir F. Hincks says:—

"In determining the boundary line between the two points, the arbitrators had at first determined to take geographical lines west of the point on Hudson Bay, north of Lake of the Woods; but on its being represented to them that the expense of a survey would be very heavy, that a theoretical line such as was proposed would not be so satisfactory as a natural one, and might lead to squabbles and disputes, they determined to follow a very convenient natural line of demarcation. This was to follow the shore of Hudson Bay from the northeastern corner of the Province, already determined on to the mouth of the Albany River, and then to make the boundary follow this river and the chain of lakes down to the Lake of the Woods, thus there was a natural boundary line of water for almost the whole distance."

The DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents per week.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

INSULTING THEIR BETTERS.

This is not the first time we have heard of independent reformers—men not prepared to utter a particular party Shibboleth at all times—being called "tories," "bolters," etc.; but Newmarket, Whitchurch and Pickering Reformers were never called "cowards" before.—Newmarket Era (Ref.)

A MOWAT TRICK.

Mr. Lyon's corrupt election for Algoma in September of last year, has stood him long enough to serve during one session. It might not have done so, however, if Mr. Mowat had not instructed the returning officer to delay making his return which, being an obedient instrument of the party, he accordingly did. The return was not made until a short time previous to the opening of the session. This was a trick unworthy a Prime Minister; but Mr. Mowat was in need of votes, and a delay in making the return made him safe for this one.—Winnipeg Times.

HE REFUSED TO DO IT.

It is an impudently false pretence that the Conservatives of Ontario ever desired the Province to lose an inch of territory. They wanted Mr. Mowat to take the duly proper course to secure the territory. At last he has been forced to do as the Conservatives wanted him to do, and we have every reason to believe that he has secured ample justice for the Province. He could have done that a dozen years ago as well as now. He refused to do it when he should have done it, and must bear the blame.—Hamilton Spectator.

REFORM WIRE-PULLERS.

The wire-pullers of Toronto have gained the ascendency at its convention and forced upon the party a gentleman for whom a large proportion of the electorate have a decided political dislike, (not to use a stronger term,) and for whom they entertain an exceedingly small degree of personal regard.—Newmarket Era (Reform).

A FREE TRADER SILENCED.

"You pay ten cents a yard duty to the manufacturer on your cotton cloth," said an American free trader to his audience. "Do we?" responded a farmer present. "Mine only costs me five cents a yard." Thus was another free trader promptly downed.—Winnipeg Times.

N. P. RESULTS.

One result is that all, or nearly all, home products for the loom, the foundry and machine shop are uncommonly cheap—in fact cheaper than ever before known in Canada. At present the cheapness of everything that farmers have to buy is phenomenal, while everything that farmers have to sell—wheat only excepted—brings high prices.—Toronto World (Indep. Reform).

THE GLOBE SLANDERS CANADA.

The Globe aims an excessively brutal article at Sir John A. Macdonald over the shoulder of Mr. Cleveland. It imputes to the Premier disgraceful habits and foul private crimes. The charges are such as could not be properly made in a public print even if made in straightforward, manly fashion. Brought by innuendo to escape suit for libel, they are entirely dastardly. It is not our business to excite sympathy for Sir John, who needs none, nor contempt for the Globe, which shows astonishing ability in acquiring that regard. But there is a slap at the people of Canada in the Globe's editorial which may well be considered. It tells the electors that they are careless of the country's honor, without indignation against private vices or corrupt practices in their Ministers, callous as to public spirit, and, in a word, utterly debauched in a political sense.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

NOT THE HARVESTS.

It is not correct to say that a series of good harvests came in with Sir John. The year 1877 brought to Canada the best and heaviest crop of wheat known for twenty-two years, the last surpassingly great wheat crop having been that of 1855. And yet the big wheat crop of 1877 did not seem to bring the country any relief from the depression. Had it done so the relief afforded would have helped Mr. Mackenzie very much in the contest of 1878.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

WHO DID IT?

Then there was the story of the Tuke immigrants. When we examined into that story we found that the immigrants had been brought to Canada under an arrangement made by the Ontario Government, selected by an agent sent to Ireland for that purpose by the Ontario Government; sent to Hamilton by an agent appointed for that purpose by the Ontario Government to the local agent here of the Ontario Government; and that the last named agent made arrangements to have tickets bought for them to leave Ontario. Then the Times paraded the affair as an example of the evil workings of the Dominion immigration policy.—Hamilton Spectator.

American Cattle in England.

LONDON, July 25.—A large and influential deputation waited on Lord Carlington to-day and urged the immediate removal of the restrictions upon the importation of cattle from Wyoming. The speakers stated that cheap healthy cattle were obtainable through Canada and from the country west of the Missouri river. They declared no cattle disease existed in those regions, and the strictest precautions were taken during transit. The cattle were nourished in Wyoming at a fourth of what the cost would be in England, and could be exported with great advantage to the British farmer and consumer.

Lord Carlingford replied for himself and for Mr. Dodson, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. He said they realized the extreme interest and importance of the statements made and the plea which had been urged, and they would bestow careful attention upon them. He refrained from saying whether the importation of cattle from Wyoming would be consistent with the law. He thought it would be necessary to consult Canada.

Lord Wharncliffe asked that the third clause of the Cattle Act should be applied and that cattle should in consequence be admitted from Wyoming. He argued Wyoming had done everything in her power to prevent infection. There was no possible reason why cattle from that territory brought to the great lakes should not be admitted to Great Britain and all parties would be benefitted if this were done.

Mr. Trewen submitted evidence of the absence of disease among the cattle of West Wyoming. He declared the State was willing to isolate herself from any Eastern State. If Wyoming succeeded in gaining her point other States would follow her example. They all wanted to get away from the domination of the Chicago ring.

Mr. Dodson said he was ready to welcome cheap meat, dead or alive, if only it was proved to be perfectly safe.

Mr. Barclay, M.P., stated that public meetings in Forfarshire had declared in favour of the admission of American cattle.

Lord Wenlock, Albert Grey, M.P., and Arthur Arnold, M.P., spoke in support of the deputation.

Lord Carlingford said the conditions under which the Privy Council might admit the cattle formed a question beset with numerous difficulties.

ALLANDALE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—On Sunday last two young men, with a horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Otonabee, drove up and down through this village all the afternoon, and in the evening, during the meeting in the hall with the Saved Army, they drove past with the intention of annoying the meeting, and on Monday evening during the meeting one of them came to it so drunk that he talked all the time he was there. Such conduct is a disgrace to the place and we are bound to put a stop to it. On Sunday evening they sang the Irish song "Barney McCoy," as they drove past during the meeting. As the gents are well known, if they are not careful they will have to appear before the Police Magistrate to answer for their conduct. Please insert the above and oblige

NEW CARS FOR THE O. & Q. RAILWAY.

When a new road is being equipped it naturally has the advantage of being able to furnish its patrons with the newest improvements, says the Globe. This is the case with the Ontario & Quebec Railway; and it is but just to say that no expense appears to have been spared to make its equipment in every detail of elegance and comfort.

All the new cars have been painted the light reddish brown which is now the regulation Canadian Pacific colour. All the first-class cars are fitted up with double windows and have an additional luxury in the shape of a lavatory at each end, and are furnished with the Spear heater. A few which have been built at Cobourg are lined overhead with bronze and sea-green metal handsomely embossed, forming a beautiful ceiling to the car and have "scratch-backs" to prevent the brakemen from defacing the car when lighting up. The seats are upholstered in red plush, and are made as comfortable as possible, while the backs are locked so that the seats cannot be reversed without the consent of the train officials. All the inner woodwork of both first and second-class cars is of polished hardwood. The second-class cars are finished in a similar manner to the emigrant sleeping cars now in use, the seats being of alternate strips of ash and cherry.

Four parlour cars have already been built, and are now in use between Montreal and Ottawa. These are the Carillon, Lachine, Calumet and Lachute. They are handsomely and tastily furnished in mahogany and inlaid wood. Ten luxurious revolving chairs run down each side of the cars, and each chair is supplied with a comfortable hassock. At each end of the car is a comfortable smoking room, fitted with lounges and every convenience for the patrons of the road. Each of these smoking rooms has ample accommodation for six persons, thus allowing twelve occupants of the chairs an opportunity to enjoy the "fragrant weed." Double windows are provided in order that during the cold blasts of winter an equable temperature may be maintainen with the aid of the hot water supplied to the pipes by the Baker heaters at each end. The whole internal fittings, including lamps and brackets, are of the best and most elegant description, and the inlaid work is especially tasty and handsome in design and finish.

Five of the new sleeping cars which will run between this city and Montreal have already been delivered and will be put into service on the opening of the through line. Their names are the Chaudiere, Quebec, St. Lawrence, Peterborough, and Gatineau. Two others, the Montreal and Toronto, will be delivered shortly. They are placed on trucks of the latest and most improved pattern, furnished with disc wheels, so as to raise as little dust as possible. The cars are divided into thirteen sections, each consisting of a double upper and double lower berth. The upper berths are finished in carved mahogany and when made up are firmly held in position by a strong wire rope attached to the lower birth. In some of the cars the seats are upholstered with olive green and in others with red plush. The floor is covered with a handsome English Wilton carpet, while the curtains and hangings are of tapestry of excellent quality and of a tasty design. The blankets and linen are of the best quality to be obtained and have the words "Canada Pacific Railway" woven in. Feather pillows and comfortable spring mattrasses complete the furnishing of the berths. Like the other cars they have double windows, the inner ones being removable at pleasure. Dust reflectors and fine wire-gauze wire protectors are also provided, so that the windows can be open both day and night without any of the unusual discomforts attendant on bare open windows. Light is furnished at night from five large chandeliers, each holding two lamps with large burners. At one end of the car is a smoking room, which is fitted up in a similar manner to those in the parlor cars, but which can be converted into a soloon when necessary. Every fixture in the car is of hammered gold, which will neither rust nor discolor through use. This includes the water pumps and taps in the lavatories, and the arms of the seats. Baker heaters at each end supply the pipes running down each side of the cars with hot water in such a manner that the temperature of the car can be properly adjusted. The interior woodwork is all of polished mahogany except the headlining, which is of hard maple, beautifully decalcomined. In most of the cars French plate glass mirrors are placed between each pair of windows, and four polished mahogany tables are furnished for the use of passengers. In the heater rooms Mr. Geo. E. Clerk, the parlor car inspector, has caused a number of braces and fittings to be placed so that running repairs can be instantly made when on the road, so as to prevent the delays which have frequently occurred through overheated boxes and other difficulties. The sleepers were all built and equipped by Barney & Smith, of Dayton, Ohio, and are among the most perfect specimens of the carbuilders' art.

ROBBING MAILS.

"How often does a letter robber escape?" asked a reporter of the Post of a post-office detective yesterday.

"That depends," was the answer. "If a postal clerk, for instance, makes a practie of rifling letters he is sure to be caught—there is nothing surer. Your periodical thief is the one who may evade apprehension for some time. He may make a big haul to-day and then step for a month or so. Suspicion may rest upon him and he is shadowed. No evidence can be found against him, and finally the inspectors are called off to work up new cases.

After everything has quieted down the thief may make another haul, and may keep the thing up for some time before he is caught.

A post-office inspector, who recently returned from a Southern city, where he has been investigating the theft of $300 from a letter in a post-office, told a Post reporter yesterday that he soon became convinced that this theft was committed by one of two females in the office. He employed the decoy letter method of detection. One of these females is a lady of a high order of intelligence, whose father had left her $20,000, to which she had added some $9,000 since. Something told him that she was the guilty party, and one day when he was alone with her he said: "Miss——, you know that a theft has been commited in this office. Now you will excuse me for saying that it was committed in this room, where only you and another lady are employed. Of course you, as a perfectly honest woman, will have no objection to showing me what you have on your person—the contents of your pockets." "Why, certainly not," was the reply, and the lady at once showed him what her pockets contained, but the contents did not include money. "Have you no money about you?" he asked. "I have some in the pockes of my sacque, which hangs in a closet in the next room. I will get it." "Oh, no," replied the inspector, "you want to be completely vindicated. Let me examine the sacque," which he did, finding in it the identical bills and the identical coins which he had marked and put in the decoy letter. The thief then confessed that since her father had left her $20,000 she had been seized with an uncontrollable passion for adding to that sum, and that she had been rifling letters occasionly ever since. The case will probably be compromised by her dismissal and the restitution of the stolen money.

A WOMAN KILLED.

Run Over by a Train Near Port Hope and Cut to Pieces.

About six o'clock on Monday evening a gravel train under charge of Conductor Joe. Pym and engine driver L. McIntosh was coming south, and when near Boyce's bridge, a couple of miles north of the town, they ran over a woman. They had just unloaded their train and had not got more than two or three train lengths from where they started, when the driver noticed this woman on the track, he whistled, and as she did not seem to hear it he signalled down brakes, the train, which was going at only about ten miles an hour, was brought to nearly a stand still; the fireman jumped from the engine to remove the woman when she made a movement towards the side of the track, and he thought she had got clear; the train was still slowly moving, it being a down grade, when the engine struck her and she was completely cut to pieces. No blame can be attached to any of the train hands, as every effort was made to bring the train to a stand still. McIntosh and Pym are two of the most careful men on the road. The poor creature who was killed seemed to be stupified. The body was brought to town. An inquest will be held.—Guide.

Too True.

The four worst men in the United States just now are Blaine, Logan, Cleveland and Hendricks. They were bad boys. They were bad young men. They are very bad now and will grow worse every day until the beginning of November. Their fathers and mothers, and grandfathers and grandmothers, and uncles and cousins and aunts were bad. It will be a wonder if some of the party organs do not discover that Mrs. Cleveland is a very unworthy woman. The trifling fact that Cleveland is a confirmed bachelor is neither here nor there in the matter. "Party exigencies" may require that Mrs. Cleveland shall be described as not quite up to the standard that Cæsar set before his better half. These four men were fairly respectable citizens a few weeks ago, but they have been nominated for the highest and second highest positions in the great American Rebublic. Hence their fall. It is rather astonishing that one of the most enlightened and highly civilized as well as most Christianized nations should nominate four such characters for these high positions, but astonishing things happen in politics every day. The temptation to throw a few stones at our neighbours is very strong, but there is so much crystal in the construction of our Canadian House that we don't care to shy even a pebble across the lake.—Canada Presbyterian.

which will be offered at prices unparalleled in the history of the Dry Goods trade.

Ladies who fail to take the benefit of these SWEEPING REDUCTIONS in values will miss an opportunity that will surely not offer itself again this season, and perhaps not in years to come.

Patrons will please call early in the day, as there is sure to be a rush in the afternoons and evenings, which will not make it so convenient for purchasing.

I would respectfully state that the prices I have decided to sell at are for the SPECIAL BENEFIT OF THE PUBLIC rather than for my neighbouring competitors, who will, no doubt, commene ticketing their goods for the purpose of selling at prices largely in advance of mine.

Daily Evening Review

The rapid growth in public favor of THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW becomes more apparent every week. To advertisers it offers unexceptional advantages as a means of reaching a large section of the purchasing public of the town and surrounding suburbs not heretofore attained. Business men will please note this fact.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1884.

The Club Swinging Contest.

Mr. J. Nunn, who is to swing against Mr. T. McNaughton in the drill shed to-night arrived in town this afternoon.

The Toronto Regatta.

Messrs. J. E. McIntyre and G. A. Strickland, of Peterborough, rowed in the Junior single scull race at the Toronto regatta on Tuesday, but were unsuccessful, although Strickland pulled close up to the leader for some distance.

The Kaladar Sink Hole.

It is reported that the sink hole on the Ontario and Quebec in Kaladar went down again on Tuesday night and that the opening of the road through to Ottawa may not take place on Monday next, as was intended.

Aquatic.

A double scull race will take place on the Little Lake this evening, between Messrs. G. Lech and F. Adams, and Messrs. G. Orde and A. Rogers. The start will be made at 7.15 o'clock.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district fo the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Light to moderate variable winds; generally fair warm weather.

The Sweeping Remnant Sale

still going on at the "Golden Lion." All ends marked very low in order to clear, and make room for their large importations of new fall goods daily arriving. Fair, VanEvery & Co. purpose shewing the largest and most unique stock ever presented to an appreciative public in this town.

Watching for Them.

The police are continually receiving circulars regarding thefts and thieves. The last one received was from the chief of Police of Brockville, stating that the residence of Mr. E. J. Reynolds was burglarized on the night of the 26th and a quantity of jewellery stolen, and asking the police to be on the watch.

Secure Your Tickets Early.

As there will likely be a rush at the station parties are advised to secure their tickets in good time for the Grand Excursion to Toronto on the Civic Holiday, August 12th. Tickets for the return journey, $1.25. Can be had at the stores of Sallsbury, Sanderson, Ormond & Walsh, J. C. McClelland and A. L. Davis & Co's.

Band Competition.

The Fire Brigade Band have decided to enter for the competition at Bowmanville on August 27th and 28th. The competition is open to all bands in the Dominion that have not a membership of over twenty-four, and three prizes are offered, valued at $200, $100 and $50 respectively. The Fire Brigade Band will take up the full number of twenty-four players, and their prospects are good for carrying off a prize, probably the best one.

The Art Exhibition.

The gentlemen who are making arrangements for this exhibition are having good success in obtaining works of art and bric-a-brac from citizens who are the happy possessors of such. In addition to articles promised in town, curiosities etc. are coming from friends in Sarnia and Hamilton. Some are also expected from Toronto. The well known art firm, Messrs William Scott & Son, of Montreal, are sending up some fine paintings to be put on exhibition. These pictures, as well as some from local dealers, will be for sale. The committee will be glad to receive further contributions any time before Tuesday next, 5th August. The exhibition opens Wednesday afternoon, 6th August, and will be held every afternoon and evening, closing on Saturday afternoon. A catalogue will be issued containing names of lenders, and other particulars. Music will be provided every evening. As the Young Men's Christian Association is in need of funds at present it is hoped the exhibition will be well patronized.

BASE BALL.

The Lindsay Club Defeat the Silver Stars of Peterborough.

A base ball match was played on the cricket ground on Tuesday afternoon by teams representing the Silver Stars, of Peterborough, and the Lindsay Club. There was a good attendance of spectators and considerable interest was manifested in the match. Mr. Fisher, of Lindsay, acted as umpire. The teams were composed as follows:—

| Lindsay. | | Peterborough. |
|---|---|---|
| R. Bates..... | Catcher | ....J. Callaghan |
| D. Green..... | Pitcher | ....T. Sanderson |
| A. McCrimmin. | 1st Base | .....A. Seney |
| W. Veitch..... | 2nd Base | .....J. J. Lynch |
| J. McAdam.... | 3rd Base | .....W. Watson |
| N. McCrimmin. | Right Field | .....F. Mercer |
| G. Preston..... | Centre Field | .....J. Cushen |
| D. Scully ..... | Left Field | .....W. Lannin |
| R. Hungerford,. | Short Stop | ..W. H. Dayman |

The Silver Stars went to the bat first and went out for an 0. Lindsay followed with 2, and in the second innings the Stars made 3 runs and Lindsay 0. This showed that there was going to be some close play, and the result proved that the Stars had greatly improved since they played the match in Lindsay. By a bad play in the third innings Lindsay got in three runs at once, their whole score for that innings being 6, and in the fifth innings they made 4. This gave them an advantage which they held until the completion of the match, although the Stars, by careful play and good fielding, put them out in the three last innings without a run. The Lindsay boys wished to leave on the 4:30 train, and therefore only eight innings were played. The score stood 12 for Lindsay and 6 for the Stars, the following being the score by innings:—

Lindsay.—2, 0, 6, 0, 4, 0, 0, 0—12
Silver Stars.—0, 3, 1, 0, 1, 0, 1, 0—6

The match was a very interesting one throughout and both sides made good play. A match or two like this one would do much to make base ball popular in the town. The City Band furnished some good music during the time the match was being played.

Special to Gentlemen.

Fair, VanEvery & Co. have received a large consignment of boys' and Gents' English Fur Felt Hats (intercepted on transit to Winnipeg.) The styles are most recent and the prices so very low as to warrant a speedy sale. Go early for first choice.

The Team.

The junior team of the Peterboroughs, which will play for the "Brewery Cup" to-morrow, will be composed as follows:—J. Canning, E. Rogers, J. Coughlin, J. Carveth, H. Myers, D. Deyell; R. Begley, R. Stevenson, A. Mooney, W. Welsh, J. Shevlin and W. J. Morrow; S. Heaps, spare man.

The best assorted stock of Gentlemen's Hosiery for Summer wear may be seen at Andrew McNeil's.

Y. M. C. A. Bible Class.

The interest in this class still continues notwithstanding the many attractions of out-door life these fine summer evenings. The Rev. Mr. Munroe is at present taking up the books of the New Testament, and the interesting way in which he treats them is much appreciated by the young men who attend.

Cricket Notes.

The Peterborough Club will play a match with the Campbellford Club, in that village, on Friday next. They have also forwarded a challenge to the Uxbridge Club to play on Tuesday next, and are trying to arrange for a match with Port Hope for the latter end of next week.

The Club will go to Toronto to play the return match with Toronto on August 12th, when they will probably also have a match with the East Toronto Club. They will hold a moonlight excursion on Thursday, Aug. 7th.

Mr. Max. Hamilton was requested to take a place on the Ontario team which plays in the Inter-Provincial match at Montreal on August 5th and 6th. He was unable to do so, but the invitation was an acknowledgment of his abilities as a cricketer.

A. C. A. Camp.

The Peterborough members of the A.C.A. should not forget that the camp on Grindstone Island, one of the renowned Thousand Islands, opens on Friday August 1st, and there should a good attendance from this neighbourhood if only to return the visits paid to our locality by the members from the United States who attended the Stony Lake camp last year. That camp was very successful and was greatly enjoyed by all who attended it, and the meeting for the present year will no doubt be as complete a success. We learn that some of the A.C.A. officers are already on the ground seeing to the completion of all the arrangements for the comfort of the members. We would also remind the lady friends of the A.C.A. that a few flags for prizes would be acceptable as Peterborough should contribute is quota for this purpose.

Lacrosse Tournament.

On Thursday, July 31st, for the "Brewers Cup," (valued at $72), the ball will be faced at 2 p.m. The competing teams will be the Peterborough Juniors, the Norwood and the Millbrooks. Entrance to grounds 15 cts. Music by City Band. A moonlight excursion to Faucher's Park on Steamer Golden-Eye. Dancing scow attached. The steamer will leave at 8 o'clock.

The following team have been picked from the Peterborough Lacrosse Club to cross sticks with the Ontarios, of Toronto, who are expected to arrive here to play at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, for the "Idyl Wild Cup," presented for competition by Mr. H Calcutt:—

J. Giroux, goal; Percy Miles, point; M. Tierney, cover point; J. Henderson, first defence; J. Howden, second defence; W. Scott, third defence; J. Sheehy, centre field; R. H. Fortye, home; M. Halpin, home; C. Rutherford, home; W. Rudkins, first home; Geo. Giroux, second home; H. Myers, spare man; J. Coughlin, field captain. The ball will be faced at 2.30 o'clock.

Every jar warranted. It costs no more to have the best as the enormous quantities, we handle enables us to sell our jars as low as any house in the trade and give a better jar, Stone Jars and Jelly Cans all sizes at CHINA HALL.

The Gilchrist Scholarship.

Principal Ross, of Dalhousie College, has received a letter from Sir Charles Tupper stating that the trustees of the Gilchrist Scholarship have reconsider the matter of its withdrawal, and have decided to substitute a three years' scholarship of one hundred pounds for candidates from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

UNANIMOUS APPROVAL OF MEDICAL STAFF.

Dr. G. T. Comstock, physician at Good Samaritan Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., says: "For years we have used it in this hospital, in dyspepsia and nervous diseases, and as a drug during the decline and in the convalescence of lingering fevers. It has the unanimous approval of our medical staff."

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility disordered blood, weak constitution, headache or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. # Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

THE CHOLERA.

FUGITIVES.

PARIS, July 29.—The train for Nice yesterday was empty for the first time since the railway opened. A panic exists at a village near Beziers and the population, headed by the Mayor and the members of the Council, drove off and stoned the refugees from Marseilles.

THE EPIDEMIC DECREASING.

The Admiral in command of the fleet at Toulon telegraphs that he is sanguine of a daily diminution of cholera there. Advices from the frontier are very unfavourable. The sanitary condition of the hospital at Vintimiglia is dreadful, and it is feared that place may become the center of infection. 10 cases have already occured there.

QUARANTINE AT MOBAN.

Seven days quarantine has been imposed at Moban. On leaving the tunnel the soldiers surround the train and conduct the passengers to the Lazarette, where they are registered and numbered, and are given a litter of straw for a bed on the train.

CLASSIFICATION OF DEATHS.

MARSEILLES, July 29.—The classification of the deaths from cholera according to nationality gives the following results:—French, 798; Italian, 222; Spanish, 13; Greek, 9; English, 1; Austrian, 1; German, 1; American, 1. There were nine deaths from cholera here last night, and thirteen in Toulon. The situation continues to improve. Six deaths from cholera at Arles during the past day, and two deaths at Aix in the afternoon. There were 23 deaths during the day at Marseilles. Seventeen cases have appeared at Pancelieri. In Italy the patients are mostly workmen from Marseilles and Toulon. Measures are taken to isolate the district.

INSPECTING INFECTED DISTRICTS.

PARIS, July 29.—In the Chamber to-night a deputation under the leadership of M. Clemenceau, was appointed by the Extreme Left to visit places afflicted with cholera. It is reported that the people of Arles are fleeing to farms in the vicinity, where they huddle together in hovels and sleep pell-mell as best they can. The sick are entirely neglected. Cases of cholera are secreted from the authorities. The deputation inspected a madhouse at Marseilles and found a number of cases of cholera there. The lunatic asylum is a centre of infection.

The Congo.

Henry M. Stanley, whose name is principally connected with his finding of Livingstone in Ujiji in 1871, again visited Africa in 1879 under the auspices of the African International Association, founded at Brussels. The object he had in view was to develop the great basin of the river Congo. The king of the Belgians devoted from his private purse £50,000 per annum towards this costly enterprise, and Stanley had practically unlimited means at his command. He made a road on the side of Livingston Fall, with steamers on convenient level reaches so as to each Stanley Pool from Embomma. In September, 1883, a letter from Stanley was received in London (dated July 11) giving a brief account of his expedition to the quator. While Stanley was engaged under the Belgian Society, political complications arose in consequence of the action of M. de Brazza, who hoisted the French flag, and was said thus to emperil the freedom of the river Congo on the plateau above the cataracts.

The Lyon Fraud.

When it is charged and proven that the paid servants of the Mowat Government sent cipher telegrams to Mr. Pardee, Com. of Crown Lands demanding money for corruption purposes, it is replied that such telegrams were not noticed, the money was not sent, Mr. Pardee's skirts are clear and the Treasury has not suffered, in order that Mr. Lyon might purchase the constituency of Algoma. But if they are all so clear in this matter, why did Mr. Lyon resign his seat rather than fight in the election court? His running away at the approach of the trial in that fashion is powerfully suggestive that the cipher telegrams were more honored in the quiet than in public acknowledgments of the Commissioner's Department.—London Free Press.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

COUNT THE COST.

We observe in a number of Grit exchanges a statement that Muskoka has been "redeemed." Of course. But what we want to know particularly is the precise sum the Ontario Government paid for it.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE LEGAL BOUNDARY.

The position which the Liberal Conservative party took from the first, and has ever since maintained, was that there was a legal boundary, and that that legal boundary should be ascertained in a legal manner, which would have to be accepted by all parties interested.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THE POLICY OF SCANDAL.

Surprise is affected by the Globe that the people take so little notice of charges made against political candidates. All sorts of charges are being made against the rival candidates for the Presidency, but our neighbors take little stock in them. The Globe shows that pretty much the same complaint can be made here, members of the Dominion being, according to its estimate, notoriously bad characters. The explanation of the case, however, is very simple. The fact of the matter is that just such papers as the Globe are to blame. They make so many unjust charges and impious insinuations against their opponent that their readers have become indifferent.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

GLOBE EXAGGERATIONS.

The Globe improves what is proverbially the dull and silly season to write down our manufacturing centres, which are described as being generally in a very bad way. We fail to see that if such were the fact it should call for gratuitous advertisement, or should furnish a Canadian editor with food for satisfactory reflection; but the chances are that such is the case as regards that town. Other towns will probably be heard from to the same effect.—Toronto World (Indep. Ref.)

N P. PRICES.

A year and a half ago manufactured gray cotton sold at from twenty-five to twenty-seven cents per pound. To-day it is selling from seventeen and a half to seventeen and three quarters cents per pound. And yet the price of raw cotton has advanced from one and a half to two cents per pound.—Montreal Witness (Reform Free Trade)

NOT A PARADISE.

A noticable feature in the grain trade at Gretna is the buying of grain from the American farmers. Our neighbors over the boundary are not satisfied with the prices they get for their grain at their own market and bring it over to Gretna. They say that they can do much better there after paying duty. This looks as if Dakota was the farmers' paradise indeed!—Winnipeg Times.

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL.

It seems to be imagined by some that we should have achieved the impossible feat of producing as much cottons, refined sugars, and other articles, as the home market would take, and not a dollar's worth more. That we have in less than five years touched the limits, in many important lines, proves that the policy adopted in 1879 was well suited to the country's circumstances, and has been highly successful in the main result of making our home supply cheap and abundant.—Toronto World (Indep, Ref.)

THE SOUDAN.

GENERAL GORDON,

LONDON, July 29.—A letter from General Gordon, dated 11th inst., emphasizes the necessity of his remaining to protect Kassala. He says his soldiers are in good spirits, and he is only awaiting the rising of the Nile to destroy the rebels.

THE INHABITANTS OF DONGOLA.

The inhabitants of Dongola, through the Mudir, have sent a despatch to the General commanding at Assouan, declaring their loyalty, and expressing their regret for their wavering in the past. The telegram is regarding as an additional proof that the Mahdi's influence is waning.

DEATH OF OSMAN DIGMA REPORTED.

An Arab trader, who arrived at Assouan from Amarara on the 20th, says it was reported there that Osman Digma was killed on the 18th by a member of the Bisharee tribe, whose nephew Osman stabbed because he refused to join the rebels.

MASSACRE OF FRIENDLY TRIBES.

It is reported that five hundred members of friendly tribes have been slaughtered on the mainland near Agig.

ATTACKS ON SUAKIN

There are 17,000 rebels around Suakin, and they make nightly attacks on the town, coming within short range of the garrison. The sailors and marines have landed, but the rebels fearlessly danced and waved their spears in broad daylight within two miles of the fort.

Floods in Maryland.

CUMBERLAND, Ind., July 29.—Over three inches of water have fallen in this section since 3 p.m. yesterday, doing much damage in the mining regions, especially to railroads. At Frostburg, Lonaconing, and Barton the damage to property is serious. Last night Mrs. McCormick and her daughter were drowned, also two children of Richard Moody. At Lonaconing the houses and places of business of Aenry Williams, Ben. Coburn, Jno. Boyd, Wm. Hartman, John Ferrens, A. Eichern and Geo. Cochrane have been washed away or greatly damaged. There are rumours of more loss of life, but telegraph communication is interrupted.

A Catching Political Cry.

The Ottawa Citizen says:—"Referring to what it calls the 'sham Liberal agitation against the House of Lords,' the United Irishman, the chief Nationalist organ, published in Dublin, says its sole aim 'is to put the Egyptian entanglements of the Government out of light, and to dish the Tories by indentifying Mr. Gladstone with a catching political cry.'"

A Fine Beverage.

Dowe's India Pale Ale, the best ale made in Canada, on draught at the Little Windsor Hotel, the proprietor of which is sole agent for Peterborough.

Thin People.

"Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia, Impotence, Sexual Debility. $1.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough it never fails. This explains why more than a million bottle were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. LONDON, July 30.—At a Liberal conference to-day, Mr. John Morley presided. A resolution was adopted characterizing the habitual disregard displayed by the House of Lords for the national will as factious and unpatriotic, and demanding reform.

ARREST OF SCHOOL GIRLS.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—A number of women and girls have been arrested for conspiracy against the Government. They are connected with the Marie Institution, a school for the education of girls of good family. The conspirators met in rooms of the Institute, and had accomplices among the teachers and older pupils of the school.

EXCITEMENT IN FOO CHOW.

PARIS, July 30.—There is great excitement among foreigners and Chinese at Foo Chow. The French men-of-war lying off the port are under steam and cleared for action. A high authority, however, declares that peace will certainly be maintained.

THE EGYPTIAN CONFERENCE.

LONDON, July 30.—There appears to be no prospect of an agreement between England and France with regard to Egyptian affairs. The Paris Figaro says Earl Granville has offered to reduce the English call of Turkish troops.

THE TRIAL OF DYNAMITERS.

LONDON, July 30.—The trial of the dynamiters, Daly, Egan and McDonnell, began to-day at Warwick. The prisoners were strongly guarded. Daly will conduct his own defence, notwithstanding that his friends have offered to procure him eminent counsel. Egan is represented by Dominick Daly, and McDonnell has no counsel. McDonnell pleaded guilty to the charge of treason and felony, and the other charges were then withdrawn. Daly and Egan pleaded innocent.

RECAPTURE OF BERBER REPORTED.

CAIRO, July 30.—The Mudir of Dongola telegraphs that a report have reached him that Gen. Gordon has captured Berber.

CORNWALL COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

TOTAL DEATHS FROM CHOLERA.

LONDON, July 30.—The London Times correspondent at Marseilles telegraphs that the total number of deaths from cholera in France during the present epidemic is about 2, 300.

AMERICAN.

ELUDING QUARANTINE

NEW YORK, July 30.—Three refugees from the southern part of France arrived in New York yesterday on the steamship Gallia, and eluded the quarantine officers. Their baggage was seized and fumigated.

NEW YORK DIVORCE CASE.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Mrs. Vanderbilt Allen, plaintiff in the celebrated divorce case, gave evidence to-day before the referee. She stated her husband left her Feb. 25, 1883. He left a note stating he had gone away because he was offended at some language she had used toward him. Mrs. Allen said her husband was very intemperate. He threatened once to kick her out of bed. She had an income of $1,400 of her own, and thought $200 a month would be necessary to enable her to keep up the style of living she had always been accustomed to. Witness said she resided in Cape May in 1882, but never had enough to eat there. She discovered her husband's infidelity by a letter she found in his pocket addressed to Edith de Belleville. She also found a letter from Walker to Col. Allen congratulating him on his "success with the ladies of Philadelphia." She made up her mind she would never again live with Allen under any circumstances when he failed to prove his innocence. In March, 1883, she saw on the blotter of the Tremont House the entry "J. Andrews and wife" in her husband's handwriting.

THE MUSKOKA CONTEST.

THE contest in Muskoka is over and no one at all familiar with the doings of the Mowat Government for the last twelve months will be surprised at the result. Knowing for nearly a year that another election in this constituency was inevitable, they have been steadily preparing for it. During the last session special provision was made therefor in more ways than one. Let us briefly notice some of these:—

1st. The law was changed so as to make the deputy returning-officers in the unorganized townships the sole judges of who had and who had not a right to vote; the said returning officer being practically men of their own selection.

2nd. They provided that the electors should record their votes at only the nearest polling places in the township in which the property voted upon was situated, thus enabling their officials to so locate the polling places in those districts as to favour particular settlements and to work against the polling of the vote in others—a favour which was taken advantage of in the recent contest by placing the polling places at convenient points where Reform majorities were probable, and in inconvenient places where the reverse was anticipated.

3rd. The right of voting was limited to owners who had been residents of the constituency for the preceding six months, and the patent for whose land had been issued at the time of voting, thus enabling Mr. Pardee, as Commissioner of Crown Lands, to qualify or keep disqualified many electors by issuing or withholding their patents—a power which there is too much evidence Mr. Pardee would not be slow to use.

4th. The amount appropriated for expenditure on the roads in Muskoka and Parry Sound during the present season was $37,600, as compared with $26,500 in 1881, and $27,250 in 1882—years when there was no election pending.

Thus armed by their Legislative majority, evidence is not wanting that the Mowat Government left no stone, fair or foul, unturned to secure the victory of which they are now boasting as another evidence of public opinion.

Take "their bribery fund" as an example: During the contest the $37,600 already mentioned (possibly more if Algoma is to be taken as an example) was being distributed under the immediate supervision of that "good hand at elections"—D. M. Card—ably assisted by Messrs. Pardee, Hardy, Ross, Dill, and chief organizer and Mowat political agent Preston, where it would do most good, and with greatest activity between the time the writ was issued and polling day—as was the case in Algoma last year.

But not content with the undue advantage which this unusually large expenditure in a single constituency was calculated to give their candidate, they evidently dreaded the result, and as a means of duly impressing the electors with the importance of casting their votes for Dill if they did not wish to remain for the next three years at least without road money, without patents, and suffer all the ills which Mr. Pardee and his minions know so well how to inflict upon the settler who will not sell himself to the majority that now rules in this Province, issued several fly-sheets, to three of which we think it will be well to call attention as further evidence of how completely and unblushingly the Mowat Government have adopted the "spoils system." The first to which we shall refer is one headed "Colonization Roads Expenditure," in which the electors of the constituency are informed that "the expenditure on colonization roads and bridges since 1872 has amounted to $1,207,708. Of that sum $509,350 have been expended in Muskoka and Parry Sound, showing an average annual expenditure in the district of $42,446." Secondly that "In the session of 1877 Mr. Patterson (Essex), a member of the Opposition, moved an amendment to the Government resolution, declaring that the appropriation for colonization roads should be reduced from $77,300 to $50,000."

And third that "For this resolution Mr. Meredith and the Opposition voted."

Consequently "the electors thus see what kind of favor the development of the newer portions of the Province is likely to receive from Mr. Meredith and his followers."

Now apart altogether from the merits or demerits of the colonization roads expenditure, the whole argument of this fly sheet is a deliberate falsehood, designedly intended to deceive those who have not access to the official records. "Mr. Meredith and the Opposition" never voted for the resolution, for which they are here represented to have voted, and we defy the whole Mowat party, from Pardee down to the notorious Secretary of the Ontario Reform Association, to prove that they did so.

Then, having in this and other equally unscrupulous ways impressed the electors of Muskoka and Parry Sound with the idea that they owed everything they received to Mowat and Co., they are informed in two other fly-sheets that the Mowat Government have already a good working majority at their back, and consequently, by inference, that the rejection of Mr. Dill meant a shutting of the Provincial treasury to their just claims upon it. In other words, that unless they supported the Mowat Government they need not expect the Mowat Government to do anything for them.

With such immoral and corrupting arguments committed to paper, from whence they may be brought up in judgment against them, it is more easy to imagine than suggest the kind of viva-voce arguments their authors would bring to bear on the electors as a means of inducing them to vote for the Mowat Government and Dill. In Muskoka, as in Algoma, their game has been successful, but it cannot always be so. The facts we have cited, combined with the indisputable doings of these men in the past, and combined with the fact that despite all their legislation, expenditure of public money, and the personal effort of three ministers and their camp followers, a change of one vote, or the non-polling of two votes at each of the sixty-eight polling divisions in the constituency would have converted their victory into a defeat, is very palpable evidence that Mr. McEachren, not Mr. Dill, is the true representative of the free and independent electors of Muskoka and Parry Sound, and that while their necessities have compelled them to endorse Mowat, their honest convictions and sympathies are with Meredith.

GLOBE SLANDERS.

The Toronto World, an Independent Reform journal, has the following trenchant but fitting rebuke of the dastardly and slanderous attacks of the leading Reform organ upon Canadian industries:—

"Untaught by experience the Grit organ recently organized a fresh crusade against the manufacturers of Ontario. The World said yesterday that if the statements published in that behalf were all correct there was nothing to be gained by advertising the facts to the prejudice of our industrial interests at home and abroad. We also gave the contradiction of a prominent citizen of Dundas as to the story told of that town, and added the prediction that it would probably not be long before similar contradictions were received from other towns. In yesterday's Globe we find a confirmation of our prophecy. Mr. John Cowan, President of the Oshawa Malleable Iron Company, compels the organ to admit that it totally misrepresented the condition of that industry. We hazard the further prediction that other sections will speedily be heard from, and that the Globe's latest blunder in regard to manufacturing industries will be found worthy of its predecessors.

The World has no party purpose to serve in calling attention to these facts. We take our position upon the well-worn ground that it is an ill bird that fouls its own nest. Were all that the organ has published against our industries true the truth could serve no good or patriotic end. When it is false the morality as well as the policy of such a course becomes obnoxious to criticism. If not as patriots, then as partizans, the leaders of the Reform party should enter some sort of practical protest against the employment of tactics which must drive the manufacturing and artisan classes into a more bitter opposition to a party that is struggling for a share of the manufacturing and artisan vote."

A SHARP TRICK.

The Grits tried to play a sharp game at the Muskoka nomination last week. The Returning Officer knew that the Conservative gentlemen, who were to nominate Mr. McEachern, were coming in by the boat with a large excursion party. The Conseratives of Rosseau were a waiting the arrival of the boat, and while in blissful ignorance of the Returning Officer's sharp intentions this functionary quietly opened the preceedings some distance off and immdiately Mr. Dill was nominated. When the Conservatives they did not wait until the boat came, nominated Mr. McEachern. There was a difference, however, and it was not until after the boat arrived that the Returning Officer would accept the nomination of the Conserative candidate. Mr. Creighton, M. P. P., pointed out that Mr. McEachren's nomination was the only legal one because the Returning Officer began the preceedings by his watch, which was set to standard and not legal time, and that, therefore, Mr. Dill was nominated from 18 to 20 minutes too soon. And this is the great thing the Globe tried to make out was a generous action on the part of Mr. Dill, who, we may be sure from his attempt to play a sharp game, would not have consented to the nomination of his opponent unless he had known his own nomination was illegal. It is best to put the bright face upon matters of this kind, although it is hardly possible for earnest men, anxious for the well-being of their province, to prevent feeling annoyance at such Grit tactics. However, the two candidates were duly nominated, and Mr. McEachren is likely member for Muskoka by this time.—Barrie Northern Advance.

A Female Burglar and Her Fate.

ROME, July 29.—A very brutal act of mob law was committed in this city to-day. A house well known as "Hilda's Abode," described in Hawthorne's romance of "The Marble Farm," is at present occupied by an American lady. A tall woman closely veiled presented herself to the Conarge at this house in the morning and asked for admission. Something in the demeanor of the stranger excited the suspicion of the Conarge, who denied him admission and called for the police. An officer quickly responded to the call, when the female pushed the porter aside, drew a revolver and dashed down the street. A crowd gathered and followed in pursuit. In the flight the woman's wig fell off and the unmistakable features of a man were revealed. The crowd finally caught the culprit and, after giving him a severe pummelling, hanged him to a tree.

THE FINAL ONE!

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by any Publisher.

RESIDENTS OF TORONTO INADMISSABLE.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER!

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable other Valuable Rewards

DON'T DELAY SENDING IN YOUR ANSWERS.

At the solicitation of many friends Truth announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Any one residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. We hope the publisher of Truth will meet with the success his enterprise so richly merits. Everything he has offered in previous Bible Competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. We most heartily commend the paper to our readers. They will find it all it is represented to be. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in Truth the week following the close of each competition. There will be no change, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is Gold first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was only one language and one speech on the whole earth?

3.—When is Inn first referred to in the Bible? by the word Inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment, commonly known now as an hotel).

Everyone competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months subscription to Truth. And aside from the rewards themselves they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. Truth is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, as you will get Truth for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided you answers are correct, and reach Truth office in time. Don't delay.

The further you live from Toronto the better you can compete for these last or consolation rewards. Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of Truth that gets number one in these consolation rewards. The offer is open only to the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the post mark, where mailed, of the date of 15th September, it will take its place in the order received at Truth office. Fifteen days after date of closing will be allowed for letters from distant points to reach Toronto, but don't forget your letter must not bear a later post mark than September 15. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six months' subscription to Truth, which will be sent to any desired address for the twelve months. Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now, and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaing a valuable reward in addition to Truth

SPECIAL CLUB OFFER.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50 each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid rolled gold brooch, new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopædia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact every Province was represented in the last, not excepting British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first, you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. Truth directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value. This we think exceedingly fair, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, as Truth says, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph or in any way but through the post-office or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S. Frank Wilson, Truth office, 33 and 35 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

CHAPTER XXVII.

For some days subsequent to Mr. Carew's departure, Regina saw little of her guardian whose manner was unusually preoccupied, and entirely devoid of the earnest interest and sympathy he had displayed at their last intervied. Ascribing the change to regret at the absence of the guest whose presence had so enlived the house, the girl avoided all unnecessary opportunities of meeting him, and devoted herself assiduously to her music and studies.

The marriage of a friend residing in Albany had called Olga thither, and in the confusion and hurried preparation incident to the journey, she had found, or at least improved no leisure to refer to the subject of the remarks made by Mrs. Carew and Mr. Chesley, relative to Mr. Eggleston.

Mr. Congreve and Mrs. Palma had accompanied Olga to the railroad depot, and she departed in unusually high spirits.

Several days elapsed, during which Mr. Palma's abstraction increased, and by degrees Regina learned from his stepmother that a long pending suit, involving several millions of dollars, was drawing to a close

As counsel for the plaintiff, he was summing up and preparing his final speech. An entire day was consumed in this delivery, and on the the following afternoon as Regina sat at the library table, writing her German exercise, she heard his foot-steps ascending with unwonted rapidity the hall stairs. Outside the door he paused, and accosted Mrs. Palma who hastened to meet him.

"Madam, I have won."

"Indeed, Erle, I congratulate you. I believe it involves a very large fee?"

"Yes, twenty thousand dollars; but the victory yields other fruit quite as valuable to me. Judges McLemore and Mayfield were on the defence, and it cost me a very hard fight; literally—'Palma non sine pulvere.' The jury deliberated only twenty minutes, and of course I am much gratified."

"I am heartily glad, but it is really no more than I expected; for when did you ever fail in anything of importance?"

"Most signally in one grave matter, which deeply concerns me. Despite my efforts, Olga's animosity grows daily more intense, and it annoys, wounds me; for you are aware that I have a very earnest interest in her welfare. I question very much the propriety of your course, in urging this match upon her, and you know that from the beginning I have discouraged the whole scheme. She is vastly Congreve's superior, and I confess I do not relish the idea of seeing her sacrifice herself so completely. I attempted to tell her so, about a fortnight since, but she stormily forbade my mentioning Congreve's name in her presence, and looked so like an enraged leopardess that I desisted."

"It will prove for the best, I hope; and nothing less binding, less decisive than this marriage will cure her of her obstinate folly. Time will heal all, and some day, Erle, she will understand you and appreciate what you have done."

"My dear Madam, I merely mean that I desire she should regard me as a brother, anxious to promote her true interests, whereas she considers me her worst enemy. Just now we will adjourn the object, as I must trouble you to pack my valise. I am obliged to start immediately to Washington, and cannot wait for dinner. Will you direct Octave to prepare a cup of coffee?"

"How long will you be absent?"

"I cannot say positively, as my business is of a character which may be transacted in three hours, or may detain me as many days. I must leave here in half an hour."

The door was open, and hearing what passed Regina bent lower over her exercise book, when her guardian came forward.

Although toil-worn and paler than usual his eyes were full of proud glad light that indexed gratification at his success.

Leaning against the table he said carelessly:

"I am going to Washington, and will safely deliver any message pou feel disposed to send to your admirer, Mr. Chesley."

She glanced enquiringly at him.

"I hope you reciprocate his regard, for he expressed great interest in your welfare."

"I liked him exceedingly, better than any gentleman I ever met, except dear Mr. Hargrove."

"A very comprehensive admission and eminently flattering to poor Elliott and 'Brother' Douglass."

"Mr. Chesley is a very noble-looking old man and seemed to me worthy of admiration and confidence. He did not impress me as a stranger, but rather as a dear friend."

"Doubtless I shall find the chances all against me when you are requested to decide between us."

A preplexed expression crossed the face she raised toward him.

"I am not as quick as Mrs. Carew in solving enigmas."

"Apropos! what do you think of my charming, fair client?"

Her heart quickened its pulsations, but the clear sweet voice was quiet and steady.

"I think her exceedingly beautiful and graceful."

"When I am as successful in her suit as in the great case I won to-day, I shall expect you to offer me your very sincere congratulations."

He smiled pleasantly as he looked at her pure face, which had never semed so lovely as just then, with white hyacinths resting in and perfuming her hair.

"I shall not be here then; but, Mr. Palma, wherever I am I shall always congratulate you upon whatever is conduces to your happiness."

"Then I may consider that you have already decided in favour of Mr. Chesley?"

"Mr. Palma, I do not quite understand your jest."

"Pardon me, it threatens to become serious. Mr. Chesley is immensely wealthy, and having no near relatives, desires to adopt some pretty, well-bred, affectionate-natured girl, who can take care of and cheer his old age, and to whom he can bequeath his name and fortune. His covetous eyes have fallen upon my ward, and he seriously contemplates making some grave proposal to your mother relative to transferring you to Washington, and thence to San Francisco. As Mr. Chesley's heiress your future will be very brilliant, and I presume that in a voluntary choice of guardians I am destined to lose my ward."

"Very soon my mother will be my guardian, and Mr. Chesley is a gentleman of too much good sense and discretion to entertain such a thought relative to a stranger, of whom he knows nothing. A few polite, kindly-worded phrases bear no such serious interpretation."

"Men, especially confirmed old bachelors, are sometimes very capricious and foolish, and my friend Mr. Chesley appears to have fallen hopelessly into the depths of your eyes. In vain I assured him that Helmholtz has demonstrated that the deepest blue eye is after all only a turbid medium. In his infatuation he insists that science is a learned bubble and that your eyes are wells of truth and inspiration. Of course you desire that I shall present your affectionate regards to your future guardian?"

"You may improvise any message you deem advisable, but I send none."

A faint colour was stealing into her cheeks, and the long lashes drooped before the bright black eyes that had borne down many a brave face on the witness stand.

The clock struck, and Mr. Palma compared his watch with its record.

CAAMPED FEET.

"A well-formed foot," says Chapman, in the "American Drawing Book," "is rarely to be met with in our day, from the lamentable distortion it is doomed to endure by the fashion of our shoes and boots. Instead of being allowed the same freedom as the fingers to exercise the purposes for which nature intended them the toes are cramped together, and are of little more value than if they were all in one; their joints enlarged, stiffened and distorted, forced and packed together, often overlapping one another in sad confusion, and wantonly placed beyond the power of service. As for the little toe and its neighbour, in a shoe-deformed foot they are usually thrust out of the way altogether, as if considered supernumerary and useless, while all the work is thrown upon the great toe, although that, too, is scarcely allowed working room in its prison-house of leather. It is, therefore, hopeless to look for a foot that has grown under restraints of leather, for perfection of form; and hence the feet of children, although less marked in their external anatomical development, present the best models for the study and exercise of the pupil in drawing." Camper, who wrote in the seventeenth century on "The Best form of Shoe," says that his treatise originated in a jest made with his pupils, who "did not believe I should dare to make a public work on such a subject," which indicates the small estimate that was put upon the foot as an organ of the body. He begins by deploring the perversity which wholly neglects the human feet, while forcing the greatest attention to the feet of "horses, mules, oxen and other animals of burden," and declares that from the earliest infancy the foot-coverings worn serve but to deform them, and make walking painful, and sometimes impossible; and he lays the blame on the ignorance of shoemakers. James Dowie, a practicle and scientific Scotch shoemaker, in his excellent little book, makes the same statement as the artist; and the great Dutch surgeon, whose treatise he had translated into the English language, also laments that the subject of the feet is so neglected by those who are competent to instruct us about them. Lord Palmerston said to Dowie that "shoemakers should all be treated like pirates, put to death without trial or mercy, as they had inflicted more sufferering on mankind than any class he knew.—Ada H. Kepley, in Popular Science Monthly. [A glance into any dissecting room gives abundant evidence of the above. Strangely, it is women's feet that are generally the more distorted.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

THE value of fish caught by Canadian fisherman during 1883 is placed at $17,000,000.

THE value of crushed ice as a dressing for burns and scalds, first pointed out by Sir James Earle, is confirmed by Dr. Richardson (Asclepiad, 164). The ice, after being reduced by crushing or scraping to a fine state of division as dry as possible is mixed with fresh lard into a paste, which is placed in a thin cambric bag and laid upon the burn. This is said to banish all pain until the mixture has so far melted that a fresh dressing is necessary.

NOTICES have been posted outside the various metropolitan hospitals in London, warning the public against the excessive use of mackerel and mild ale at this season of the year, as the larger fish are liable to contain a small worm, which would be injurious and likely to cause cholera and other diseases. The caution with regard to the drinking of large quantities of mild ale, is given especially to the working classes. The beverage produces profuse perspiration, and renders the body liable to a chill, which would be likely to lead to serious consequences.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Daily Evening Review

The rapid growth in public favor of THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW becomes more apparent every week. To advertisers it offers unexceptional advantages as a means of reaching a large section of the purchasing public of the town and surrounding suburbs not heretofore attained. Business men will please note this fact.

THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1884.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Heterogeneous.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Moderate to fresh, south-westerly to north-westerly winds, cloudy to fair weather, with showers and thunder-storms, stationary or slightly lower temperature, followed by finer weather to-morrow.

The Canadian Agriculturist.

Peterborough has produced a new aspirant for journalistic honours, and for pecuniary success. This is the "Canadian Agriculturist, published by Mr. W. H. Robertson at the Times office." It is to be published monthly and consists of 24 pages with a coloured cover, and contains a large amount of reading matter in the various departments of farm work.

Sale of Church Property.

The Murray Street Methodist Church, formerly the Bible Christian Church, has been purchased by the Baptist congregation for the sum of $7,000, the present Baptist Church being taken by the Methodists at $2,500 as part payment. We understand that Mr. James Stevenson will purchase the Baptist Church at the same figure paid for it by the Methodists.

Artillery Competition.

A team from the Durham Field Battery will go to Toronto about September 12th to take part in the target competition to be held there. They will also take part in the competition which includes dismounting and mounting the field ordinance, changing gun and limber wheel and firing a around at the target. Practice for this competition will be commenced in the drill shed this evening.

Grand Concert.

The concert which is to be given in Bradburn's Opera House on Friday evening, under the auspices of the Fire Brigade Band, promises to be a decided treat. In connection with the distinguished services of Madam C. C. Rossiter, the Band have secured Mr. M. Porteous, the favorite baritone. A. D. Weeks, of Uxbridge, writes as follows:—

"I had the pleasure of hearing Madam Rossiter on the pianoforte, and to me it was one of the grandest musical treats of my life. Certainly never had in Uxbridge one so gifted and skilful."

A Boat Race.

On Wednesday evening a double scull boat race took place on the Little Lake. The contestants were Messrs. G. Lech and F. Adams, and Messrs. G, Orde and A. Rogers. Mr. Ed. Brown acted as referee. The contestants got a good start, and Orde and Rogers pulled away at a lively pace, but they steered out of their course, going too close to the shore. Lech and Adams pulled a strong steady stroke, and steered well. They rounded the turning boy first and won the race by about ten boat lengths. Time 5¾ minutes.

Dr. Barnardo's Home.

The munificent generosity of Mr. and Mrs. George Cox has already been dwelt upon, and Hazel Brae, now the most beautiful and picturesque of the numerous establishments known as Dr. Barnardo's Homes, will long stand as a witness to the public spirit and love of doing good, which are well known to animate them. Mr. and Mrs. Duff and Miss M. B. Sanderson, as responsible heads of this new institution wish, however, publicly to acknowledge the fact that what has been wanting to make the establishment of this Home a complete success has been abundantly forthcoming, namely, the manifestation of a lively interest on the part of the inhabitants of Peterborough, and a warm welcome to the first arrival of children. Gifts of various kinds have been received from many kind friends, while not a few of the little ones have here found the blessings of a home which had been denied them in the land of their birth. A touching illustration has thus been afforded of the Divine words "I was a stranger and ye took Me in."

We are showing a nice line of Plain and Fancy Worsted Coatings in Summer weights. Habiliment Hall, George street.

"LABOR HATH SURE REWARD."

Another Industry Added to Peterborough's Already Long List.

Within the last few years the business men and in fact many private individuals have had neat and pretty blinds, known as the "Close Slat Window Blind" put on their windows, and some of them, especially those that adorn the windows of the stores on George street are picturesquely handsome, while they are just as useful as they are ornamental. These blinds have all been furnished by Mr. Edward Green, who from time to time, as he received orders, was necessarily compelled to buy his slats from the place of manufacturing. Of late his business has grown so rapidly that he determined to buy the slat machine (the only one in Canada) and accordingly negotiations to that effect were opened, and, as will be seen, consummated. Mr. Green has at a large outlay placed the machine in Peterborough, and secured the patent right for the Dominion. At present it is running at the furniture factory of Mr. M. McFadden, on the Ashburnham race, but it is the intention of the owner to eventually place it in position in his shop on Water street, where it is probable one of the Tuerk water motors will be brought into requisition to furnish power to run it. The knife, which is the entire length of the apparatus, cuts a slat seven feet three inches in length, and works with a vibration of about four or five inches. The planed board is placed in position, which is the only work to be done by hand, as the machine is self feeding. The weight of it is 1,630 pounds, and it is very massive in appearance. It makes a splendid slat, both strong and durable.

The purchasing of the slat machine is creditable to Mr. Green, and will in a measure be beneficial to Peterborough, as orders from a distance as well as local orders, can now be filled promptly and with satisfaction to all concerned. Mr. Green intends to ship slats wholesale to dealers in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, and other points, and no doubt he will find this last venture will reap him at not a very distant day a "golden harvest."

Town Council.

A meeting of the Town Council will, according to adjournment, be held this evening to consider the waterworks, and street watering questions.

Park Lot Sale.

At the sale of Messrs. Cameron and McKellar's park lots on Wednesday, conducted by Mr. C. Stapleton, three lots were sold, two for $700 each and one for $750. Nineteen lots were not disposed of.

Personal.

Mrs. Frank Dobbin, who has been seriously ill in Lindsay for the past few day, is now out of danger.

The Hon. Sydney Smith, was in town on Wednesday and paid the usual official visit to the Peterborough Registry Office.

Warm Weather Ties in great variety at Andrew McNeil's.

Our Dentists.

On and after the 6th of August the dentists of Peterborough will close their places of business for the space of two weeks for the purpose of taking a holiday. Those interested will please note this fact, and govern themselves accordingly.

The Sweeping Remnant Sale

still going on at the "Golden Lion." All ends marked very low in order to clear, and make room for their large importations of new fall goods daily arriving. Fair, VanEvery & Co purpose shewing the largest and most unique stock ever presented to an appreciative public in this town.

The Lacrosse Tournament.

On account of the unfavorable weather to day the lacrosse tournament had to be postponed until to-morrow afternoon, when all the teams entered will compete. This was a disappointment, but an unavoidable one, to many. The Norwood team arrived on the morning Ontario & Quebec train and the Captain of the Millbrook team was here. The Norwood boys will remain until to-morrow and the Millbrook team will be on hand in the morning. The Peterborough boys were also ready for the contest. The ball will be faced for the first game at 1:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The steamer Golden-Eye will run a moonlight excursion to-morrow evening, weather permitting.

The Collegiate Institute.

At a meeting of the Committee on Appointments of the Board of Education held on Wednesday evening the appointment of teachers on the staff of the Collegiate Institute was considered. Mr. J. H. Long, of Aylmer, Ont., was appointed leader of the Modern Language Department, and Mr. L. E. Horning, B. A., of Brantford, of the Mathematics Department. These appointments have to be ratified by the Board, but as all the members of the Board are members of the Committee they may be considered final. There was a deadlock on the appointment of the other teachers and the Committee adjourned—or, more correctly speaking, broke up in confusion—without coming to a decision. A regular meeting of the Board will be held on Tuesday evening next.

Club Swinging.

The club swinging contest for a medal, which was announced to take place in the drill shed on Wednesday evening between Messrs. T. McNaughton, of Peterborough, and S. Nunn, of Toronto, did not take place. Both the parties were present, but as there was a meagre attendance the Toronto man refused to swing, although, as the competition was for a medal, what difference the attendance would make to him, when he was there, we fail to see. The money paid for entrance by those who were present was returned to them, and Mr. McNaughton, who, in the many sporting events which he has managed in Peterborough, has always endeavoured to deal fairly with the public, gave a splendid exhibition of fancy club swinging. The City Band and Orchestra were present and furnished good music.

A PARTY FEUD.

The Montgomery Brothers and Carew Brothers and Friends in the Police Court.

On Saturday last a quarrel took place at the Stewart House and the disturbance having been quelled there, it was renewed later on the same day at Bridgenorth, where not only stones but more dangerous weapons were used. On Monday the chief parties in the row, the Montgomery brothers on one side and the Carew brothers on the other, came into town and laid informations in the Police Court.

The result was that Jeremiah Carew, Michael Carew, Lawrence Connors and P. Cains appeared on a charge of carrying revolvers, and John Montgomery and Francis Montgomery on a charge of assault. Robert Montgomery had been summoned, but did not appear.

Messrs. A. P. Poussette and H. O'Leary (Lindsay) appeared for the Montgomerys, and Messrs W. H. Moore and R. E. Wood for the Carew brothers, Connors and Cairns.

The parties, however, had agreed among themselves to settle the affair, and as no evidence was offered on either side the charges were all dismissed with costs.

The MAGISTRATE, in dismissing the cases, said that he did not wish to enquire into the origin of this feud, or into the question of who was most to blame, as no doubt they were all to blame. If the fights or feud were encouraged by the community it would be injurious to the community and to the parties themselves. The animosity between them was such that if it was allowed to continue it would result in bloodshed and murder, a result which none of them contemplated, yet such would be the result of it, and if they should have to carry a comrade home, or one of them should have to stand a trial for murder, the fact would be brought forcibly home to them. They were all young men, and were, he understood, respectably connected. Some of them had a reputation for fighting, but such a reputation would add nothing to their respectability. They happened to be of different religions and it was said to be a party fight, which was the worst kind of a feud, as it was apt to spread and the minds of their children were embittered. The Christian religion, which both professed, taught them to be brothers and not enemies. He was glad that they had decided on having a settlement. He interpreted this to mean that they dropped all animosity—that they extended to each other the hand of friendship. He congratulated them on thus giving way to their better judgment and was happy to assist them in carrying out these views. He was content that the charges should be dropped. If, however, complaints of this kind should ever come before him again he would not allow them to be settled in this way, and he felt it to be his duty to bind several of them over to keep the peace.

Lawrence Connors, Michael Carew, Jeremiah Carew, John Montgomery and Francis Montgomery then gave bonds to keep the peace for one year, and an order was made for Robert Montgomery, who was not present, to do the same.

Henderson, the Peterborough agent of the company, is almost jubilant over this purchase, as he considers that it shows the prosperity of the company, and is a favourable augury of the future of its business in Canada.

Ginger Champagne.

This refreshing and agreeing beverage is, according to a French recipe, made as follows:—Take sixty gallons of water; add forty pounds of ginger cut in small pieces; and gently boil for half an hour, carlessly removing any froth that may rise. (Cool the liquor as quickly as possible, and when at a blood-heat (100° F) add nine pounds of raisins chopped fine and the juice of six dozen oranges and six dozen lemons. Allow the liquid to ferment, and after standing a month it may be bottled in the usual manner.

If desired, the ginger may omitted, and the number of oranges increased to eighteen dozen.

Summer Dress Fabrics

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

Parasols and Sunshades

we mark down too, we began the season with about a dozen old ones. We want to end it the same way. In fact this remark applies to all lines of our stock. It was bought to sell, and sell it must. Our prices, like our goods, are proper.

Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

Daily Evening Review

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1884.

THE INVALID AWARD.

WE would venture to suggest to the Ottawa Free Press that it need not resort to misrepresentation when it differs in opinion from a contemporary. The Free Press says that "the Peterborough REVIEW seeks to justify Sir John Macdonalds obstructive policy on the ground that the new decision may secure to Ontario more territory than the arbitrators gave." We did not attempt to justify Sir John's obstructive policy for the very good reason that he had no obstructive policy to justify having for many years offered the present resort to the Privy Council, but we condemned the obstructive policy of Mr. Mowat, who, following Mr. Blake and Mr. Mackenzie, neglected for 12 years to accept that offer, thus depriving us of out rightful territory for that space of time for his own political ends.

The Free Press thinks that the Mackenzie administration could bind Canada; the REVIEW, and the Privy Council, have held that the executive could not do so, as the power was reserved to the Parliament of Canada. The Free Press thinks that the award should have been ratified although the abitrators substituted a natural boundary for the true boundary; the REVIEW, and the Privy Council, have held that the award was illegal because the arbitrators thus exceeded their instructions, even if they were valid. It is sad that we should differ from the Free Press on these points, but it is some consolation to know that the Privy Council agrees with the REVIEW. We yet hope that the further judgment of the Privy Council will also agree with the REVIEW that the award was insufficient.

The main facts are simple. Sir. John for many years past has advocated that Ontario should obtain her full rights by the decision of the Privy Council. Mr. Mowat has kept us out of our rights for years by clamouring for an award that was illegal. So we have said all along, and so the Privy Council decides.

THE CHOLERA.

CHOLERA ABATING.

PARIS, July 31.—Cholera deaths at Marseilles and Toulon are abating. All fears of the epidemic reappearing are subsiding.

MORTALITY IN MARSEILLES.

MARSEILLES, July 31.—There were twenty-four deaths from cholera during the day ending at 9 p. m.

WANT OF PRECAUTION.

BERLIN, July 31.—Dr. Koch, the cholera expert, criticizes the want of precaution shown by England to prevent the epidemic.

DEATH IN AN OPEN FIELD.

While a lad was working a farm near Arles he was seized with vomiting. The farmer refused to allow him to enter the house, and the boy died in the field. His father conveyed the boy on a wheelbarrow to the burial authorities, who refused to give him assistance, and he was compelled to bury it alone.

RESISTING THE DOCTORS.

The lower classes oppose the physicians, because they believe they have been instructed to help the cholera along in order to get rid of the surplus population. A paper read by a medical man in Berlin lauded the cholera for sweeping off beings unfitted for the struggle of existence. A doctor was chased out of the slums yesterday by men armed with knives.

H. M. S. Heroine.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A serious accident occured here a short time ago, by which Mr. Simon Holt came nearly loosing one of his hands. Mr. Holt attempted to hitch a two year old colt, the animal being apparently quiet. He managed to get the animal hitched to a one horse waggon, but as soon as the word of command was given to proceed, made a few bounds forward and then back, throwing the occupant out into the road. Mrs. Holt being thrown several feet away from the waggon, while Mr. Holt was thrown against a stump and the waggon ran over his arm close to the wrist, hurting it severely. The animal ran along the road till it came to another stump, where it severed itself from the waggon, taking with it the shafts, with which it galloped through the fields until a neighbour went and took them off. The water of Clear and Stony Lakes has fallen about 10 inches during the last 10 days, and is still going down.

MASONIC MEETING.—The regular communication of Clementi Lodge of A. F. & A. M. will be held in the Masonic Hall, Queen street, on Tuesday evening next, the 5th of August.

APSLEY.

From our Own Correspondent.

CROPS.—The crops in this vicinity, which, previous to the late wet spell, were very backward, now look much better, and there is every prospect of a bountiful harvest. The hay crop, although not so good as it was last year, promises to be better than was expected in the early part of the season.

PARDEE'S TEMPORARY ESCAPE.

THE London Advertiser says that "last December Mr. Meredith declared that he would arraign Mr. Pardee before the bar of the House, charging him with corruption," and is anxious to know why Mr. Meredith relented. We will supply the Advertiser's omission, that Mr. Meredith also threatened to bring Mr. Pardee before the law courts. These threats were partially carried out, but they were not fully accomplished for the following reasons. Telegrams were read in the House showing that a cypher telegraphic correspondence of a very disgraceful nature in regard to the fraudulent Algoma election had been carried on between Mr. Pardee and some of his officials. Further investigation in this direction was prevented by the Reform leaders. They refused or neglected to bring down official returns, some even though ordered by the House. They prevented the Public Accounts Committee from meeting or from forming a quorum to transact business on many occasions. They refused to produce telegrams though they were official correspondence. They even refused to give the names of the senders and receivers of official telegrams for which they were asking the people of Ontario to pay. Their only line of defense was the false charge that the incriminating telegrams were stolen, a falsehood which would naturally occur to them when they remembered the Reform feats of stealing private correspondence from the post office and from private desks. As the Reform leaders thus obstructed proof by a secrecy which was a virtual confession of their knavery in imposing their fraudulent ally, Lyon, upon Algoma, it was impossible to proceed with this matter.

So much for the charges in the House; and now for those in the law courts. Proceedings were taken against some of the chief culprits, and the first of the gang, Apjohn, who was brought to justice had to pay the penalty of his rascality. As to Pardee and the others, the same obstruction as was practiced in the House placed obstacles in the way. But even this was not considered sufficient safeguard. To make sure that no more Apjohns should be brought to justice a disgraceful piece of legislation was rushed through the House, enatching these fraudulent officials from the hands of the law courts and legalizing the disfranchisement of Conservative votes.

The suggestion of the Advertiser that the bribery conspiracy may have had something to do with the temporary immunity of these offenders, may have something in it. In fact the conspiracy of Mr. Mowat's colleagues and supporters to procure bribery or to manufacture evidence of it was conceived by these conspirators for the very purpose among others of burking the investigation into the Algoma frauds. The theatrical scene, which they worked up, was designed to divert public attention from their own misdeeds and to hasten the close of the session with its inconvenient enquiries. This and the necessity for buying back their deserting supporters were we believe the two chief reasons for the plot.

Mr. Pardee and his allies have however only escaped for a time.

Mr. McKenzie Ignored.

It has been alleged that Sir John Macdonald has been a "traitor" to Ontario's interests. If, as we have before shown, he has been a 'traitor so was Mr. Mackenzie; for it was Mr. Mackenzie's Government that engaged Mr. Hugh McMahon, R.C., of London, a Grit of good standing, if not a lawyer of profound learning and legal acumen, and Mr. Monk, of Montreal, to fight the Dominion case against the Ontario case before the arbitrators to whom the matter was referred by the two Grit Governments. The Grit Governmenment of Mr. Mackenzie, represented by the Grit lawyer, Mr. McMahon, fought the Grit Government of Ontario, represented by Mr. Attorney-General Mowat and Mr. Thos. Hodgins, Q.C. At the time Mr. Mackenzie was custodian of Dominion interests, not the officeless politicion of to-day. This is a phase of the case which the Grits conveniently ignore.—Ottawa Citizen.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

STREET WATERING, FIRE PROTECTION AND WATER WORKS DISCUSSED.

The Cow By-law and the Sabbath — The Brock Street Junction Again — The Council Chamber Becomes a Real Estate Exchange.

A meeting of the Town Council was held on Thursday night, July 31st.

PRESENT — His Worship Mayor Cox, and Councillors Davidson, Allen, Kelly, Yelland, Douglas, Menzies, Kendry, Green, Rutherford, Hartley, and Millar.

The minutes of the last meeting were read confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A statement from the Liquor License Commissioners of the West Riding of the amount due to the town.—Finance Committee.

From R. Kingan, in reference to the arbitration regarding the damage done to his property by the Missing Link at the Brock Street Junction.—Received.

From E. C. Hill, asking for information regarding the Cow By-law and asking to be heard.

From the Committee of the Orange Celebration, asking to be allowed to put up an arch on the street and also for the use of the drill shed grounds on August 12th.—Granted.

THE COW BY-LAW.

Mr. E. C. HILL was heard and said that Mr. Roberts, a pound keeper, had his boys out on Sunday looking for cows, and his (Mr. Hill's) cows on Sunday last got out for a few minutes and they were driven into the pound. He wished to know what the pound keepers' duties were?

Councillor ALLEN said he understood that anybody or everybody could impound cattle found at large.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that he had been told that it was the practice of the poundkeeper to watch for cows, and if boys in driving them to or from pasture left them for a minute or two they were driven into the pound. It was particularly wrong to keep boys at this work on Sunday.

The MAYOR read a clause of the By-law, which required the poundkeeper to impound cattle. He said that he knew that there were several cows running at large in that section, and he had threatened to suspend the Constables for not doing their duty.

Mr. HILL said he wished to make an offer. He had a lot suitable for a pound, and if they took it for that purpose he would give the town half the receipts.

The matter was referred to the Committee on Appointments.

THE WATER QUESTION.

The CLERK, in reply to a question, said that Mr. E. B. Edwards' opinion was that petitions for the hydrants had to be presented yearly.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that the yearly petitions were a nuisance. This was the last day of the contract, and there were no petitions from George street. To-morrow the hydrants would be shut off, and if the firemen took the water the town would be held for it. They might first consider the claim of the company for water taken for watering the streets outside of the fire limits.

Councillor MILLAR read Clause 3 of the By-law (No. 427) as follows:—"It is also further enacted that in any arrangement that may be made with the said Water Company for supplying of hydrants for fire protection, it shall be and form part of such arrangement, that without any further charge all such hydrants shall be used for all such public purposes as the the Council of the said town may from time to time direct." He said that this clause covered the question of the company's claim.

Councillor DAVIDSON did not think that the company had any claim on them for the water used outside of the fire limits for street watering.

Counillor RUTHERFORD said that the clause read referred to hydrants taken by the town and paid for by general tax.

Councillor MILLAR said that it made no difference to the company how they applied the tax.

At the request of several Councillors, the Clerk read the Waterworks By-law. The contract with the company for the hydrants on George street was also read.

Councillor MILLAR said the contract made out a case for the company.

The MAYOR said that the better way would be to meet the Directors of the Company and come to a reasonable arrangement, or to take a larger number of hydrants to cover the streets watered. The interests of the town and company were so closely allied that there should be no difficulty about it. They should deal liberally with the company, as the gentlemen who had the enterprise to go into this undertaking had not made much out of it.

Councillor YELLAND said that the company should not be too exacting.

The MAYOR said they had not been in practice, although they had threatened to be exact.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that the company had not been stingy with the water. They had been at large expense—he was informed that they had expended $64,000—and they could not be blamed for looking after their own interests. The Council could do nothing now, as the people had not petitioned for the hydrants, unless they paid for them by a general tax, which he did not feel disposed to do.

The MAYOR said that in re-arranging this matter George street should be relieved of the expenses of keeping up the fire engine and the expenses connected with it.

Councillor HARTLEY said that the Company deserved credit for undertaking such a large enterprise. There had been a feeling against the company in some parts of the town on account of some indefinable fear. Many, however, who were opposed to the Company formerly were now favourable to them and were taking water from them.

Councillor RUTHERFORD—Mr. Menzies, for instance.

Councillor MENZIES—Yes, I am taking water from them.

Councillor KENDRY moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That the Fire, Water and Gas Committee be requested to confer with the Water Company as to renewing arrangements for fire protection and street watering, and to report to this Council at a special meeting to be called for that purpose.

The MAYOR said that he would undertake to see the President of the Water Company in the morning, and get him to let matters stand as they are for a week, and to get petitions circulated among the ratepayers asking for hydrants in accordance with the By-law.

The motion was adopted.

THE RATE

Councillor RUTHERFORD said that the rate for this year should be struck.

The CLERK said that the Chairman of the different Committees had not reported how much they would require this year.

CHARITY.

Councillor ALLEN moved, seconded by Councillor GREEN,—That the Clerk be instructed to issue a cheque for $1,000 for the maintenance of Isabella Drummond in the Home for Incurables, in accordance with the report of the Charity Committee, adopted at the last meeting of this Council, which provides for the repayment of $750.—Carried.

APPLICATION FOR A GRANT.

Councillor ALLEN moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—That the application for a grant of $100 on Westcott street be referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.—Carried.

TEE COLLECTOR'S ROLL.

Councillor DAVIDSON moved, seconded by Councillor KELLY,—That the Clerk instruct the Collector to return the roll for 1883 at once.—Carried.

BROCK STREET BRIDGE.

It having been moved that Mr. Kingan be heard, the Mayor called Councillor RUTHERFORD to the chair.

Mr. KINGAN then addressed the Council. He said that the Grand Trunk Railway Company had not paid the award made by the arbitrators as requested by the Council and he asked the Council to take steps in accordance with the resolution formerly passed.

Councillor ALLEN said that all they could do now would be to request the company to take up the rails.

Councillor DOUGLAS said the Company would not take them up, and the question was whether the Council could do it.

Councillor RUTHERFORD feared a term in the Penetentiary if they took the rails up.

The MAYOR said the whole difficulty would be settled if Mr. Kingan would meet the company half way. His was the only case that he knew of between Peterborough and Omemee that was not settled. It was simply a difference of opinion as to the amount of damage done to Mr. Kingan's property. Mr. Kingan thought the damage amounted to $2,000, and the company were willing to pay $1,000, which they thought sufficient. If Mr. Kingan was afraid to risk taking up the award, let him accept $1,000.

MR. KINGAN did not think it just that he should take just what the railway company would give him. Councillor ALLEN—Are you willing to take $1,000.

Mr. KINGAN—That is not the question. He wished the Council to take up the rails. He contended that the Council was liable for the damage done.

Councillor YELLAND said that if Mr. Kingan was paid $500, in addition to the yearly amount he received now, he would be well paid.

Mr. KINGAN said that witnesses at the arbitration stated that his lot was worth $3,500 before those rails were laid, and that now it was worth only $1,000.

Mayor COX said that he would give Mr. Kingan $3,500 for the half-acre lot now, and run his risk of getting damages from the Company.

Mr. KINGAN—That shows how valuable the lot is. (Laughter).

Councillor MILLAR—It shows how little the Mayor thinks the lot is damaged.

Mayor COX said he would give $1,000 to get this matter settled and off his mind.

Mr. KINGAN agreed to accept the offer.

The Council adjourned to meet again at the call of the Mayor.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

He was loath to quit that charming quiet room which held the fair innocent young queen of his love, and hasten away upon the impending journey; but it was important that he should not miss the railway train, and he smothered a sigh.

"This morning I neglected to give you a letter which arrived yesterday, and of course I need expect no pardon when you ascertain that it is from 'India's coral strand. If 'Brother Douglass' is as indefatigatigable in the discharge of his missionary as his epistolary labors, he deserves a crown of numerous converts. This letter was enclosed in one addressed to me, and I prefer that you should postpone your reply until my return. I intended to mention the matter this morning, but was absorbed in court proceedings, and now I am too much hurried."

She put the letter into her pocket and at the same time drew out a small envelope containing the amount of money she had borrowed. Rising she handed it to him.

"Allow me to cancel my debt."

As he received it their fingers met, and a hot flush rushed over the lawyer's weary face. He bit his lips and recovered himself before she observed his emotion.

"That alms-giving episode is destined to yield an inestimable harvest of benefits. But I must hurry away. Pray do not take passage for the jungles of Oude before I return, for whenever you leave me, I should at least like the ceremony of bidding my ward adieu. Good bye."

She gave him her hand.

"Good-bye, Mr. Palma. I hope you will have a pleasant trip."

As she stood before him, the rich blus of her soft cashmere dress rendered her pearly complexion fairer still, and though keen pain gnawed at her heart, no hint of her suffering marred the perfection of her face.

"Lily, where did you get these lovely white hyacinths? Yesterday I ordered a bouquet of them but could procure none. Would you mind giving me the two that smell so deliciously in your hair? I want them—well—no matter why. Will you oblige me?"

"Certainly, Sir; but I have a handsomer, fresher spike of flowers in a glass in my room, which I will bring down to you."

She turned, but he detained her.

"No, these are sufficiently pretty for my purpose, and I am hurried. I trust I may be pardoned this robbery of your floral ornaments, since you will probably see neither Mr. Roscoe, Mr. Chesley, nor yet Padre Sahib this evening."

She laid the snowy perfumed bells in his outstretched hand, and said:

"I am exceedingly glad that even in such a trifle I can contribute to your pleasure, and I assure you that you are perfectly welcome to my hyacinths."

The sweet downcast face and slightly wavering voice appealed to all that was tender and loving in the cold undemonstrative nature, and he was strongly tempted to take her in his arms and tell her the truth, which every day he found more difficult to conceal.

"Thank you. Some day, Lily, I will tell their mission and fate. Should I forget, remind me.'

He smiled, bowed, and hurried from the room, leaving her sadly perplexed.

At dinner Mrs. Palma said:

"I have promised to chaperone the Bruce sisters to-night to the opera, and shall take tea at their house. Were I sure of a seat for you, I should insist upon taking you, for I dislike to leave you so much alone; but the box might be full, and then things would be awkward."

"You need have no concern on my account, for I have my books, and am accustomed to be ing alone. Moreover, I am not particularly partial to the music of 'Martha,' which will be played to-night."

"Did your guardian tell you he has just won that great 'Migdol' case, that created so much interest?"

"He mentioned it. Mrs. Palma, I thought he looked weary and jaded—as if he needed rest rather than a journey."

"Erle is never weary. His nerves are steel, and he will speedily forget his court house cares in Mrs. Carew's charming conversation."

"But she is not in Washington?"

"She told me yesterday she would go there this afternoon, and showed me the most superb, maize-coloured satin just received from Worth, which she intends wearing to-morrow evening at the French ambassador's ball or reception. You know she is very fascinating, and though Erle thinks very little about women I really believe she will succeed in driving law books, for a little while at least, out of his cool clear head. My dear, I am going to write a short note. Will you please direct Hattie to bring my opera hat, cloak and glasses?"

With inexpressible relief Regina heard the heavy silk rustle across the hall when she took her departure, and rejoiced in the assurance that there was no one to intrude upon her solitude.

The thought that her guardian had hastened away to accompany that gray-eyed, golden-haired witch of a woman to Washington was intolerably bitter and as she contemplated the possibility, nay the probability of his marriage, a wild longing seized her to make her escape and fly to avoid such a spectacle.

When she recalled his proud, handsome, composed face, and tried to imagine him as the husband of Mrs. Carew, bending over, caressing her, the girl threw her arms on his writing desk and sunk her face upon them, as if to shut out the torturing vision.

How cruelly mocking that he should take her favorite snowy hyacinths to offer them to Mrs. Carew! Did his keen insight penetrate the folly she had suffered to grow up in her own heart, and had he coolly resorted to this method of teaching her its hopelessness?

PORT HOPE.

BODY RECOGNIZED.—The young woman who was killed on the Midland Railway on Monday evening, July 28th, proves to be Minnie Victoria, daughter of Mr. Richard Dawson, Lot No. 4, broken front, South Monaghan, aged twenty-two years. She had been subject to fits of melancholy for the past six years, and at times would wander away from home. She left home on Monday about ten o'clock, in her ordinary every day apparel, with only a coarse straw hat on, print dress and linen apron or slip. Search was immediately made for her by her father and brother, but only on Wednesday night they accidentally heard that a woman had been killed on the track here, and came out on Thursday to make enquiries; on examination it was found to be the lost daughter. She must have walked twelve or perhaps fourteen miles from the time she left home up to the time the accident happened. The body was exhumed and taken by her friends to their home for interment. The afflicted parents and relatives have the sympathy of all their friends in their sad affliction.—Guide.

THE WORLD'S HARVEST.

Harvest prospects and the prices likely to rule are two things on which, in this country, much depends. The harvest will probably be good in Ontario, and the area sown in Manitoba justifies the expectation of a large aggregate increase in the amount of wheat for export.

Prices of wheat will depend upon the total production of the world relatively to the demand, the rates of freight and the quantity left over from last year's crop. In Europe the price of wheat is nearly as low as it has been at any time within a century; and it is the more remarkable that this occurs a few weeks before the new harvest, a time when prices are generally above the average of the year. Even before the average price can be reached, there will be much leeway to be made up. It is too soon to ascertain what the prospect of the world's crop will be; the indications are that there will be a full average, and it is certain there is a tendency to increase exportation from certain countries. The wheat exporting countries of previous years are meeting new and more formidable competitors. Of these India is the most powerful, with, apparently, great possibilities of increase. The Australian wheat crop, by this time harvested, is reported to be much above the average. In Great Britain the prospects are that the year's crop will be better than that of 1883, and France is expected to produce an average crop. From Germany, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Italy, only unfavorable weather between now and harvest can reduce the yield below the average. Egypt and Morocco are assured a full measure. From Austro-Hungary and Roumania come whispers of damage to the crops; and in Russia the prospect varies, in different localities, but on the whole seems to be good.

Stocks in Europe are believed to be large for this time of year; and in India there remains a good deal of wheat to come forward. Only a deficient harvest, of which there is no sign, or an extraordinary demand, of which appearances do not favor the expectation, could cause any material increase in prices. There is no question that, relatively to the demand, there has been an increase of production. The extra competition has been much felt by European agriculturists, where land is dear and rents high. The complaint is made that much European wheat has been sold below the cost of production. If this be true, the production of wheat for exportation, in countries outside of Europe, is determining the price at the centre of consumption. But wheat cannot long be sold below the cost of production, though the cost of production may be lessened by a lowering of rent; otherwise, the growing of wheat on soils where it would not pay the cost of raising, must cease. If this should happen, there would be a tendency for prices to recover, by contracting the circle of competition.

The reduction of freights, which has been carried to an abnormal point, favors the European consumer and the distant producer, at the expense of the European farmer. Cheap freights enable the American, the Indian, the Russian, and other producers, to place wheat in London and Paris, at lower figures. But in all the exporting countries the competition has been keen; it has been said that many of them have been sending their surplus wheat to Europe, at prices which do not cover the cost of production. This somewhat startling averment needs confirmation. If true, it shows a state of things which cannot last; no country can long afford to sell wheat below cost; wheat culture would, if the price did not cover cost, have to be diminished out of Europe as well as in Europe, until the equilibrium was restored. The carriers of the wheat, sold below cost, are said to have been working without profit; and if so, this is a state of things which must right itself. The building of new vessels must, in such a state of things decrease. This has actually happened, and, on the supposition that the facts are correctly stated, a diminution of tonnage must be brought about by the natural process of wear and tear. But some exaggeration may be suspected in the statement that part of the world's tonnage engaged in the shipping of wheat has latterly been altogether unproductive. Still, if not absolutely true, it is very near the truth. Great Britain is reported to have a surplus carrying power of three millions of tons; hundreds of vessels, steam and sail, are unable to find employment on any terms.

Are, then, the Malthusian laws being repealed? It is true that population nowhere presses on the means of subsistence, and that the fact of a superabundant production of wheat places an abundance of food within the reach of all? Unfortunately it is not true. Take an example from the facts before us. The excess of tonnage throws shipbuilders out of employment, and men without wages, in a time of plentiful crops and low prices, are liable to suffer the pangs of hunger. The pressure of population on the means of subsistence is not universal—it never is—the contact is confined to certain points, which are, according to circumstances, more or less numerous. In the midst of the greatest abundance there will always be men without the means of buying food.

The present is a period of transition, which must lead to a readjustment. If it be true that in Great Britain, France and Germany, wheat is being grown at a cost which prevailing prices do not cover, and if the same thing is happening in wheat exporting countries outside of Europe, the loss cannot be long sustained; where rents do not come down in Europe, wheat lands must go out of cultivation; and out of Europe something that will pay the cost of production must be grown instead of wheat. This diminution of culture would of itself raise prices. The world's production of wheat can never, for any length of time, exceed the consumption. If production was greatly increased, additional mouths would come into existence to restore the equilibrium. Starvation freights are already regulating themselves. When the transition period, through which we are passing is over, things will, through a readjustment in harmony with the new conditions resume a normal condition.—Monetary Times.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Daily Evening Review

The rapid growth in public favor of THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW becomes more apparent every week. To advertisers it offers unexceptional advantages as a means of reaching a large section of the purchasing public of the town and surrounding suburbs not heretofore attained. Business men will please note this fact.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1884.

Cricket.

A team of the Peterborough Cricket Club went to Campbellford this morning to play a match with the Club of that village.

The Lacrosse Tournament.

The team sent to represent the Victoria Lacrosse Club, of Millbrook, arrived at noon today, and the matches for the "Brewery Cup" are being played this afternoon.

An Interesting Event.

An interesting sporting event takes place this afternoon in the driving park, namely, a matched race between Mr. E. Brown's "Fanny B," and Mr. McGregor's (Norwood) mare.

Championship Lacrosse.

The Secretary of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club received a despatch from the Secretary of the Beaverton's to-day stating that they would play for the District Championship on August 8th. The Beaverton Club has arranged for an excursion from that place to Peterborough on that date.

"Association Notes."

The above is the title of a small periodical which has just been issued from this office for the Young Men's Christian Association. The Notes gives an outline of the Association's work for the month, and other interesting information regarding the society. It will be issued monthly and will no doubt be of great service to the Association.

A. C. A. Camp.

The first detachment of the Peterborough members of the A.C.A. started this morning for the camp of the Association at the Thousand Islands. Messrs. Stevenson, Cox. Rutherford, Leeb, H. E. T. Haultain and T. G. Haultain, and several others made this early start and we hope that their numbers will be largely augmented from this district.

Dominion Express Co.

Mr. Alex. Elliott has been appointed agent in Peterborough of the Dominion Express Co., which runs in connection with the C.P.R. and its branches, including, of course, the O. and Q. Mr. Elliott's well-known business abilities, and his combined energy and steadiness make this an excellent appointment, and will ensure the pleasantest relations between the Company and its local customers.

"Crescent Camp."

The "Crescent" camping party, one of the largest parties which have gone north this year, has returned from Stony Lake, where they enjoyed a period of rest and recreation. They report that the fishing and berries were very fair. The Port Hope party are a lot of "jolly good fellows," some of them going home Wednesday evening and the others remaining over until Thursday. It is the intention of the same party to go back again next season.

To-Night.

If you are disengaged this evening go to Bradburn's Opera House and hear the renowned authoress, orator and musician, Madame C. C. Rossiter, in her surprising feats on the pianoforte and her astonishing performance on an English concertina, the cost of which alone was $125.00. This entertainment will without a doubt be a rich musical treat, and if there is any music in your soul go and spend "two hours with poets and musicians."

Huckleberries by the quart or basket. Orders for any kind of fruit, either in or out of season, will be promptly filled by giving reasonable notice.

August Meteors.

According to the universal concensus of astronomers, the earth this month passes close to the orbit of the meteors which in countless numbers circle round the sun. Should we be favored with cloudless skies it will be well worth while watching for these brilliant celestial phenomena. Perhaps the first of the batch—and one probably seen by very few of our inhabitants—was a very bright one that fell about two o'clock this morning. It could not be compared with the beauty seen a few weeks ago, but was none the less interesting, leaving, as did its predecessor, a long and lasting train of light. A glance at some of the works of Lockyer, Proctor, Smyth, &c., will reveal many wonders connected with these little planets worth knowing.

A Riot.

There was a riot at the glass works on Wednesday afternoon at Bradford, Pa. Two non-unionists were attacked by unionists and severely beaten. One was seriously injured. The police arrested four ringleaders. More trouble is feared.

Ex-Governor Hendricks.

Ex-Governor Hendricks, of Indiana, while on a visit to Saratoga, was waited upon by the Notification Committee, which visited Governor Cleveland yesterday. The Committee formally tendered the nomination in the name of the Democratic party of the United States for the office of Vice-President to Mr. Hendricks, who made a short pithy speech accepting the honour.

The British Association.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Mail writing under date July 31st says:—Last night the advance guard of the British Association bivouacked at the Union Station in the magnificent Pullman car St. Lawrence, one of the new Pullmans built for the Ontario & Quebec Railway. The party is composed of Captain Bedford Pim, R. E., one of the warmest friends Canada has; Sir James Douglass whose forthcoming paper on coast lighting is looked forward to with great interest; Prof. Glaisher, whose aeronautic voyages have made him famous, the Professor having gone more miles up into the air than any other man; Mr. Pim, son of "the Admiral," as his friends call the hearty navigator of the Arctic waters; Mr. George Douglas Palmer, whose great grandmother Washington wanted, but failed to secure; Dr. Buxton Shillitoe, Mr. Geo. Russell, Mr. Christopher Smith, Mr. A. Prankard. The ladies of the party are Lady Douglas and daughter and Mrs. Russell.

REFORMERS SELF-PICTURED.

In the days when Mr. Mills was in office as a member of Mr. Mackenzie's Government he brought into the Department of the Interior as his Private Secretary Mr. A. M. Burgess, a gentleman who had had some experience in connection with the Grit press, and who, of course, was looked upon as thoroughly in sympathy with the Reform party. Mr. Mills secured Mr. Burgess a good position in the Department and left him there. The change of government far from injuring Mr. Burgess' fortunes, improved them. It was not long before he was made Secretary of his Department, and a year or so ago he was raised to the still higher position of Deputy Minister. The funny thing, however, is to see him now described in the Toronto Globe as "a Government Toady." Alas for the Reform party if the men whom they place in the public service, under the impression that they are their own devoted partisans, become "toadies" to the Conservatives as soon as they get the chance. Mr. Burgess' first great offence in the eyes of the Globe was a rather too cheerful estimate that he formed last session of the amount of money the Government would probably get from land sales in the North-West during the next few years. Now he has been investigating North-West grievances on the spot, and reports that there is nothing in them. Such conduct is positively shocking in a man who was once private secretary to the present editor of the London Advertiser. We believe, however, that Mr. Burgess, with all his fallings away from grace according to the Grit idea, is a most efficient departmental officer.—Montreal Star (Independent).

LADIES' JOURNAL

Bible Competition No. 7.

Closing September 11th,

OPEN TO THE WORLD

The Leading Rewards are Lot 50 x 150 at Toronto Junction, Pianos, Organs, Sewing Machines, Gold and Silver Watches, Silver Tea Sets, &c.

The proprietor of the Ladies Journal now announces a magnificent list of rewards for correct answers to Bible questions. It is surprising how little is known of the Bible. The questions are not so difficult this time as last, and we should be glad if there was a hearty response so as to encourage the proprietor of the Journal to persevere in his good work. It was announced in the June issue of the Ladies' Journal that the competition which closed last month would be the last for the present, but it has been decided to try one more.

All money must be sent by post office or express. No information will be given to any one more than is stated here. So send on answers, and don't waste time writing. Do not send postage stamps unless six cents is added for the discount. Remit by postoffice order, scrip or small coin.

THE BIBLE QUESTIONS:

1.—Is Diamond referred to in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

2.—Is Emerald made mention of in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

3.—Is Sapphire spoken of in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

These all refer to the precious stones.

Now, any one having a knowledge of the Scriptures ought to be able promptly to answer these questions with a little study, and so secure some one of those rewards. Bear in mind every one competing must send FIFTY CENTS with their answers for which the Ladies' Journal will be sent one year to any address. Fifteen days will be allowed after closing day for letters from distant points to reach the Ladies' Journal office. But you can, of course, send in any time between now and the 11th of September, and your letter will take its place at the publication office in the order it arrives there. All letters are carefully numbered as they arrive, and there can be no mistake. If your answers are correct, and they reach there in time, you will surely get some reward in addition to the Ladies' Journal, which alone is big value for the half dollar. If you don't get anything but the Journal you will be well pleased with your investment, as it consists of 20 pages of fashions illustrated, short and serial stories, poetry, newest music, household hints, etc., etc.; in fact, just the paper to suit every lady.

By subscribing in a club with your neighbors you will secure some considerable advantage—that is, there must be at least thirty of a club, and all who send correct answers to the Bible questions may have their choice of a handsome ring, heavily gold-plated ladies' gold brooch, which retails at about one dollar and a half, or a triple-plated butter knife. Either of these you may wish will be sent postage paid. You will thus secure to a certainty one or other of these two presents, and in addition will have as good an opportunity of gaining some one of the other large rewards in lists given above just as well as though you had sent in singly. This is simply an inducement to get up clubs. We are sure our readers could not do better than to try their skill in hunting up these questions and competing for these rewards. Everything will be carried out exactly as promised.

Prizes in last competition went all over Canada and to many parts of the United States.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

LACROSSE TOURNAMENT.

Peterborough Juniors Win Two Matches and the Brewery Cup.

The Lacrosse tournament for the cups offered for competition by Commodore Calcutt should have commenced on Thursday, but the steady fall of rain up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon compelled the postponement. The captains of the three clubs entered for the "Brewery Cup" then met in Mr. Calcutt's office and it was arranged, by lots, that Norwood and Millbrook should play at 10 o'clock in the forenoon on Friday and the Peterborough second twelve play the winners in the afternoon. The Millbrook team, however, did not arrive here until noon on Friday, and the arrangement could not be carried out.

The Ontarios, of Toronto, were unable to be present, on account of their match with the young Shamrocks in Montreal for the Intermediate Championship.

THE FIRST MATCH.

At about two o'clock the Fire Brigade Band and the City Band proceeded to the cricket ground, followed by the three teams. Mr. H. P. Eckardt, of Toronto, was chosen referee. A protest had been entered against the Peterborough team, because the Peterborough Club held the championship, but after considerable talk the teams took their positions on the field as follows:—

| Norwood. | | Peterborough. |
|---|---|---|
| H. Pearce | Goal | R. Stevenson |
| M. Higgins | Point | J. Coughlin |
| T. Brennan | Cover Point | W. Welsh |
| R. Stewart | Defence Field | E. Rogers |
| A. Clark | " " | J. Canning |
| W. J. Stephenson | " " | J. Shevlin |
| F. C. Stephenson | Centre Field | J. Carveth |
| A. J. Eaton | Home Field | A. Mooney |
| S. Hendren | " " | E. Begley |
| A. J. Robertson | " " | S. Heaps |
| D. Denison | 2nd Home | H. Myers |
| J. R. McKelvie | 1st Home | D. Deyell |
| F. Brennan | Field Captain | J. J. Sheehy |
| T. Hill | Umpire | G. McBain |

The ball was faced by Carveth and F. C. Stephenson at 2.25 o'clock. Carveth drew the ball out to Mooney, who ran down the field and and made a drop in front of the Norwood goal. Brennan got the rubber and threw it to the other side of the field. Then the playing continued lively, and both goals were frequently in danger, but finally McKelvie got the rubber and made a fatal shot, winning the game for Norwood in 18 minutes.

The second game was very brief. Mooney again got the ball from Carveth and made a shot on the Norwood goal. Myers secured the rubber and dropped it on the goal, but it was knocked out. Myers again got it and scored the game. Time, about 20 seconds.

The third game was well contested, but the ball was kept the greater part of the time in the vicinity of the Norwood goal. However, after 36 minutes Robertson made a low shot from near centre field which scored another game for Norwood.

The fourth game was won by Peterborough. After two close calls on the Norwood goal, which were so close that the crowd thought the ball was through, Canning made the winning shot from near centre. Time 23 minutes.

The fifth game was commenced at fifteen minutes after four. Each team had won two goals and there was a long struggle for the final game, but the Peterboroughs kept the ball close to the Norwood goal the greater part of the time, when Myers, Deyell, Begley, Canning and Shevlin did good work in trying to pass it through. When it was sent out to field Mooney and Carveth sent it back, and in defence, when called on to do so, Welsh played an excellent game and Rogers made good play. Coughlin and Stevenson guarded the goal well, the latter making a really good goal keeper. Brennan and F. C. Stephenson showed some splendid play on the Norwood side. At a few minutes to five o'clock game was claimed by the Peterboroughs, but the Umpire decided against them, and at five o'clock a similar claim was made with the same result. A few minutes after this Deyell got the ball in front of the goal and passed it through. Time, 51 minutes.

The Peterboroughs had thus won a closely contested match by three games to two. The usual cheers were given and the Norwood boys left the field.

PETERBOROUGH AND MILLBROOK.

The Peterborough boys, after such a long match, did not feel like playing another immediately with the fresh Millbrook team, but they were called out to do so after a rest of half an hour. Heaps, however, was unable to play, and Kelly supplied his place. The Millbrook team was composed as follows:

|---|---|
| J. McKeiver | Goal |
| H. Richards | Point |
| J. Nattrass | Cover Point |
| W. Coomb | Defence Field |
| R. McMann | " " |
| S. True | " " |
| A. Duncan | Centre Field |
| C. Duncan | Home Field |
| G. Brown | " " |
| H. Smith | " " |
| J. Richards | 2nd Home |
| W. Powell | 1st Home |
| G. Duncan | Field Captain |
| R. Kells | Umpire |

The ball was faced by Carveth and Duncan, and was at once carried to the Millbrook goal, where a close shot was made on the flags. Myers got the ball and passed it between the stakes. Time, about half a minute.

The second game lasted three minutes and was won by a throw from Canning from near centre. The third game was won in 2½ minutes by Kelly. The match was thus won by three straight games in twelve minutes after the ball was first faced, or by six minutes of play—the shortest match on record.

The result of the matches was that the junior twelve of the Peterboroughs hold the "Brewery Cup." It has to be won three times to become the property of a club.

There was a very good attendance of spectators at the tournament and music was furnished by the two bands playing alternately.

The next tournament will be held in the forenoon of the Civic Holiday, August 12th, on the same ground. We understand that the Norwood Club has already entered for this competition for the "Brewery Cup."

THE TURF.

Mr. E. Brown's "Fanny B." Wins a Match with the "McGregor Mare."

The first event which took place in the new driving park was a trotting race on Friday afternoon for $100 between Mr. E. Brown's "Fanny B." and the "McGregor Mare," owned by Mr. R. McGregor, of Norwood. There was a very fair attendance of sports, and a few ladies graced the occasion with their presence. Mr. Charles Stapleton acted as starter and referee. The race was a mile one, on the half mile track, the winner to take three heats out of five. In the first two heats the "McGregor Mare" drew a heavy four-wheeled vehicle, but in the third that was discarded, and she was attached to a driving sulky. The track was heavy from the recent rain and a little rough.

In the first heat "Fanny B" took the lead and held it all the way around. She trotted steadily and kept down to her work, while the "McGregor Mare" broke often and left her feet badly on the second turn. "Fanny" won the first heat by about four lengths. Time, 3.14.

The second heat was much the same as the first and was won by "Fanny B." by three or four lengths. Time, 3.21½.

In the third heat better time was made, the "McGregor Mare" having discarded the heavier vehicle and "Fanny" having to put on more speed. The latter animal, however, still kept down to the trot, and came in about the same distance ahead as in the previous heat. Time, 3.10.

The next event in the driving park will be, we understand, a pedestrian contest for a medal held by A. Strickland, of Lakefield. It will be a quarter mile amateur running race.

POLICE COURT.

A VETERAN IN COURT.

SATURDAY, Aug 2.—John Smith, of Port Hope, was charged by Constable Pidgeon with having been drunk. He acknowledged his guilt, but pleaded eloquently to be allowed to go. He said that he had been a soldier in the Crimea war, and exhibited a bare spot on his scalp and a scar which he said he received at the storming of the Redan. The Magistrate said that he did not wish to be rough on an old veteran, but while discharging him, advised him to take better care of himself.

Smith's Market.

Huckleberries by the quart or basket. Orders for any kind of fruit, either in or out of season, will be promptly filled by giving reasonable notice.

Why is Turnbull now offering large ranges of fresh goods at prices that will compete favorably with clearing sales? Because his goods are never marked over a fair living profit, which any reasonable customer is willing to pay. His steadily increasing trade enables him to clear out lines in the proper season. Also because his long experience and close attention to business puts him in a position to secure any really desirable job lines which are sometimes thrown on the market.

SENTENCE OF THE DYNAMITERS.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—In the trial of the dynamiters at Warwick Daly began his address to the jury to-day, and made a powerful argument on his own behalf. He argued that there had been nothing of a criminal character proved against him, except that he had travelled under an alias. This he did not consider criminal, as the Queen had repeatedly travelled under an assumed name. The men, however, were convicted. Daly was sentenced for life, Egan for twenty years, and McDonnell, who pleaded guilty, was released on bail to appear whenever called upon.

DO NOT GALL THE HORSES.

The rush of mid-summer farm work is very trying on horse-flesh. The side draft of the reaper or mowing machine frequently causes galled necks and shoulders. The usually tough skin of the horse is softened by the flow of perspiration, and a rough, ill-fitting collar, a useless chafing back-pad, or a projecting buckle quickly produces pain. No one can blame the horse for faltering, when ordered to press its raw and bleeding shoulder against the collar, that will sink into its bruised flesh. To avoid galls, all parts of the harness should sit closely. A laboring man is careful in buying boots of, proper size. He could not endure twelve hours of hard labor while his feet were cramped within an unusually small space, or in boots so large that his feet slip in them and wear the skin away by constant friction. As a rule, horses are worked in too large collars. A soft pad placed under such will prevent galling. When the animals are brought in from work, the harness should be removed at once and cleaned, and the neck and shoulder well washed with castile soap and water. After bathing the worn parts at night, rub on some softening oil. Use no oil in the morning. The collar should not be oiled, as it will then gather dirt through the day and form a rough coating, that will chafe the exposed parts. Keep all parts of the harness clean, especially those that press upon the horse, and see that the same is true of the portions of the horse against which the harness presses. It is much easier to prevent than to cure a gall.—American Agriculturist.

DIVORCE IN FRANCE.

It is of course difficult to rid ourselves of the principle—so strongly urged on every hand—of the necessity of a large amount of difficulty in obtaining a separation between husband and wife. Home, we all believe, is the basis of society. The family has influences impossible to enumerate or define. That of the mother, and, during some years of life, in hardly less degree, of the sister is, we may unhesitatingly assert, eternal, and for the utmost good.

Nevertheless, laws which may have indubitable effect in encouraging morality and the family tie in one latitude, may have a diametrically opposite effect in another. In India, in many of the Southern States, in short in all tropical climates, where physical maturity is reached long before intellectual, and where marriage, on the part of the woman, takes place as early as at the age of ten or twelve, it is impossible to think otherwise than that, in a very large majority of cases, the home-life must be in a high degree prejudicial, not only to the partners in such union, but also, and in a far greater measure to their offspring. Still, taking everything into consideration, the extreme facility with which now applications for divorce can be made in France, is apt at first sight to shock the ordinary reader. Accustomed as Englishmen are to the relative rarity of such proceedings in the British Isles; accustomed, too, theoretically and practically to the obstacles which English morals, and Sir James Hannen or the Queen's Proctor—the abstract and concrete forms of social ethics—place in the way of suits for absolute divorce and even for judicial separation, one is naturally at first somewhat astonished, in looking over the clauses of the new act, to find no such restrictions similar to those which we regarded as not only beneficial but as necessary to the preservation of society properly so called. But in criticising the French Government in passing this new bill, it is of the utmost importance to take consideration the circumstances and influences that obtain in the nature of French society. There is, for example, to be remembered the method of contracting marriage in France; the universally avowed laxity of morals compared with those of her neighbours; and, above all, the prae-existing state of her laws of divorce. These were such that at the time of the passing of the new bill, some hundred thousand married persons were living in a state of judicial separation—a mode of life than which few others could be imagined more conducive to the undermining of all morality both in principle and practice. Added to this is the fact that every year augmented this list by nearly twelve thousand. For the benefit of this large class, as M. Nanquet argued in the Senate, some reform was a necessity. And, apparently, while engaged in this task, the whole law of divorce was re-considered, and the measure passed as we now see it. To pass decisive judgment on the wisdom or unwisdom of these changes no one—not even probably the Chamber of Deputies or the Senate itself—will at present attempt. In a few years its influence for good or the reverse will be felt, and, meanwhile a large number of persons are directly morally benefited—a benefit that, without doubt, will indirectly spread to all with whom they come in contact.

Mr. Mackenzie Responsible.

The Dominion claim, in reference to the Boundary, under the present Government has been precisely the same as that put forward by Mr. Mackenzie, when Premier of Canada, and it would have been the same whoever was at the head of affairs. Mr. Mackenzie, however, first made the Dominion responsible for the claim that the line ran due north from the junction of the Ohio and Mississippi river. And every government was bound in the interest of the whole Dominion to contend for that line, which was declared, by the decision in the Rheinhardt case, to be the true boundary until the decision was over-ruled, as it now appears to have been by the decision of the Privy Council.—London Free Press,

A "CONSTITUTIONAL" QUACK.

Our local contemporary has a high opinion of the standing of its editor in chief, the Honorable David Mills, as a constitutional lawyer, and strange to say it bases its opinion on the course of Mr. Mills on the Boundary question. Surely there must be some mistake about this. If we remember correctly, when poor Mr. Mowat was driven into a corner by the persistent efforts of the Dominion Government to induce him to refer that question to the Privy Council and was looking about for some excuse for refusing to go there, and to enable him to keep it before the public as a rallying cry for the disorganized and discredited party of which he is the Ontario leader, his attention was turned to Mr. Mills, who, from his inner consciousness evolved and gave to an astonished world the proposition that the award was binding without ratification by the Parliament of Canada, and was for putting forward the ancient prerogative of the Crown as the foundation for the absurd position that the Executive Government of the Dominion might of its own authority and without the assent of the Imperial or Dominion Parliaments, dispose of the territory of the Dominion, a theory which besides being almost centuries behind the enlightened doctrines of modern days, would have justified the Government of the day in handing over, say, the Island of Manitoulin to our American neighbors. Absurd as this contention was, repudiated as it was by Mr. Blake, it was not too absurd to be taken up by Mr. Mowat, and at once the shout went up in chorus from the Grit press, the Award, the Award, nothing but the Award! and with this battle song they went to the country at the general elections for the Dominion of 1881 and for the Province of 1883. And when at length Mr. Mowat found himself compelled to submit the question of the Boundary to the Privy Council he insisted upon making the first and main question for decision that of the validity of the Award. Mr. Mills was then retained to argue this all important question before that eminent tribunal, and to England he went, heralded by a great flourish of trumpets; and what has been the result? So untenable was his contention that the Privy Council on the spot overruled it and determined that the Award had no validity.

Surely, it requires a great deal of effrontery to put forward such a man as a great constitutional authority, and we incline very much to the opinion that when the people of Ontario have paid Mr. Mills' bill for airing his absurd vagary they will have arrived at the conclusion that they have paid very "dearly for their whistle," and will be inclined to insist that if in future he has any "crank" ideas to air he will do it at his own or his party's expense, and not at the expense of the country.—London Free Press.

FENELON FALLS.

From our Own Correspondent.

A FINE RAFT.—Mr. J. M. Irwin's raft of square timber is now (August 1st) passing over the Midland Railway. It is loaded on the cars at Fenelon Falls and several trains pass here daily on their way to Belleville, where the timber is dumped into the Bay of Quinte and rafted and taken to Quebec. This is the largest raft that ever came down the Gull river waters in one block. The timber was cut in the township of Eyre, and landed on Saw Log creek. This creek was made navigable for square timber last fall and winter at considerable expense by Mr. Irwin, one of the features being a slide of over 1,400 feet long. This is the largest slide on any of the waters north of this, even if it is not the longest in Canada. Some idea of the roughness of the creek may be imagined when we mention the fact that one lumberman, who owned limits six miles up this creek, and who one winter landed several thousand logs upon a marsh about four miles up this creek, decided that the creek could not be made navigable and left the logs in the creek, and the winter following reskidded the logs out of the creek and hauled them some three miles to another lake. No difficulty, however, was found this spring in driving the out their large drive of timber, and Mr. Irwin also anticipates that he will have no trouble in driving out the large quantities of timber and saw logs which are yet to be cut and brought down this creek. We understand Mr. Irwin has already had one very good offer made for his raft. The timber is mostly waney, very large, and of a very fine quality, and if any lumber sells well this should. In conclusion we may remark that the creek improvements, timber making and driving was done under the superintendence of our townsman Mr. Geo. S. Thompson, who for many years past has superintended the woods department of Mr. Irwin's business.

WOMEN'S BOWS.

If man's sphere is the controlling and subjugating the great things of this world, it is woman's sphere to draw from the small things unlimited power. Man, in the language of Horace, bends circumstances to himself, not himself to circumstances; woman, on the other hand, takes circumstances as they are, and by her so delicate plastic or fictile art, so moulds her use of them as that these shall be the symbols of great things: shall shadow forth deeply hidden meanings; shall reveal her subtlest thoughts; make known her innermost feelings. Do you want proof of this, reader? See that modest rustic maid toy with her apron's corner; watch that gay Spanish senorita with her fan; that dark eyed daughter of the Celestials with her chopsticks; or that oriental lady deftly use her veil; see, too, that fair maid of more western empires with her parasol, her handkerchief, her gloves. Above all note your beautiful country-women in the act of bowing to you.

There are as many different varieties of the feminine out-door greeting of her masculine acquaintances as there are of the sweet smiling ones themselves. And what a resemblance there is the one to the other, the bow and the bower, the smile and the smiler! Phrenology reads character from the head; palmistry from the hand; physiognomy from the features: we trust to meidematology, let us call it, in the science of smiling. And what an infinite science it is. Custom decrees that she shall smile, or at least move, however slightly, her lips; and trust women to discover for themselves a myriad ways of doing this; and trust them, too, to be able to throw into this slight perpendicular or horizontal motion of the mouth meaning enough to puzzle the acutest observer.

Is there no power in such things. I would that the fair only knew how great a power they had. Who will say through how many distinct phases of emotion a man will pass in traversing a short street in which he has chanced to meet several of his fair friends? First of all there is the handsome (apparently) well-developed wife of Mr. So-and-so. A smile certainly greets him, but one that causes him to ejaculate to himself "What does it mean?" The eyes certainly said something; they were favorable. But the rest? There was no gracious cervical flexion, so pleasing to his vanity, rather there was a haughty straightening of the back, a rigid stiffening of the neck incomprehensible to him. Puzzled and questioning, he proceeds. Ah! there comes the sprightly, well-dressed little Miss Blank. She notes him afar, but this she conceals. Approached near, a hurried machine-like smile he is favoured with, accompanied by a "duck" that does duty for obeisance. Satisfactory, were it not artificial. As it is, more unintelligible than the last. By no means tending to restore his equanimity. Now, however, come they who will. Two often seen fair acquaintances. They see him afar off also, from the other side of the road, it may be, and eyes, lips, figure, all smile; smile much, perchance too much. Now he is happy, and goes on his way rejoicing. Foolish youth; soon shall thy laughter be checked. Behold another two approach; these also driving. Sharp visaged; somewhat scarcastic looking. So also is their greeting: sharp, momentary, a duty to be done, and that an unpleasant one, as if lately their names had not been in some certain wealthy kinsman's will, and thou, innocent youth, had been the cause of it. Trouble not thyself, they mean no harm. It is their nature to. Yet another advances towards him. Yesterday she was profuse in her greetings—perchance some ticket she wished him to purchase. To-day what will she do, this elderly dame, mother of more than one fair daughter? Lo! she does scarce anything, a scanty recognition is all he gets. Truly incomprehensible. While yet he is meditating comes another, a fair fragile girl rolling in ponderous carriage. To her he makes low obeisance; but she—she is she and none other, and her bow tells thee as much. Beware. Best of all perhaps is the genial bow of that portly dame; fat, comfortable, at peace with the world, listening to no unkind rumor, ignorant of gossip—all this so visible in her sober, lady-like smile. The mother of daughters is she also; and with much pleasure does our youth receive her gracious recognition.

But what need further to give examples of what doubtless all have observed? Even these perhaps which we have lightly touched on not a few will recognize.

Strange that in so slight a gesture: an almost imperceptible inclination of the head; a drooping of the eye-lid; a parting of the lips; nay, sometimes a grimace only, there should lie such great power; power such as shall suffice to make a man follow the owner block after block in order once more to enjoy that enchanting elongation of the mouth, or lie sleepless, tossing restless the whole night long vainly trying to interpret the meaning of that so speaking look. Not a small thing, then, is a woman's bow. Fair dames, look to it that ye use it with discretion.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

IT ISN'T Extravagant to claim that Zopesa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

NO SUCH WORD AS FAIL.—A failure to relieve or cure summer complaints can never be truthfully applied to Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All dealers sell it.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists, 50 cents.

DEAR SIRS,—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants tell us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed recovered.

Believe me, dear sir, gratefully and faithfully yours.

HER BONNET.

When the meeting bells began to toll,
And pious folks began to pass,
She deftly tied her bonnet on,
The little, sober meeting lass,
All in her neat, white-curtained room, before her tiny looking-glass.

So nicely, round her lady cheeks,
She smoothed her bands of glossy hair,
And innocently wondered if
Her bonnet did not make her fair;
Then sternly chid her foolish heart for harboring such fancies there.

So square she tied the satin strings,
And set the bows beneath her chin;—
Then smiled to see how sweet she looked;
Then thought her vanity a sin,
And she must put such thoughts away before the sermon should begin.

But, sitting 'neath the preached word,
Demurely in her father's pew,
She thought about her bonnet still,—
Yes, all the parson's sermon through,—
About its pretty bows and buds which better than the text she knew.

Yet sitting there with peaceful face,
The reflex of her simple soul,
She looked to be a very saint,—
And maybe was one, on the whole,—
Only that her pretty bonnet kept away the aureole.

CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

If she could leave New York before his return, and never see him again, would it not be best? His eyes were so piercing, he was so accustomed to reading people's emotions in their countenance, and she felt that she could not survive his discovery of her secret.

What did his irony relative to India portend? Hitherto she had quite forgotten the letter from Mr. Lindsay, and now, breaking the seal, she sought an explanation.

A few faded flowers fell out as she unfolded it, and ere she completed the perusal, a cry escaped her. Mr. Lindsay wrote that his health had suffered so severely from the climate of India, that he had been compelled to surrender his missionary work to stronger hands, and would return to his native land. He believed that rest and America would restore him, and now he fully declared the nature of his affection, and the happiness with which he anticipated his reunion with her; reminding her of her farewell promise, that none should have his place in her heart. More than once she read the closing words of that long letter.

"I had intended deferring this declaration until you were eighteen, and restored to your mother's care; but my unexpectedly early return, and the assurance contained in your letters that your love has in no degree diminished, determine me to acquaint you at once with the precious hope that so gladdens the thought of our approaching reunion. While your decision must of course be subject to and dependent on your mother's approval, I wish you to consult only the dictates of your heart; believing that all my future must be either brightened or clouded by your verdict. Open the package given to you in our last interview, and if you have faithfully kept your promise, let me see upon your hand the ring, which I shall regard as the pledge of our betrothal. Whether I live many or few years, God grant that your love may glorify and sanctify my earthly sojourn. In life or death, my darling Regina, believe me always,

"Your devoted,
"DOUGLASS."

Below the signature, and dated a week later, were several lines in Mrs. Lindsay's handwriting, informing her that her son had again been quite ill, but was improving; and that within the ensuing ten days, they expected to sail for Japan, and thence to San Francisco, where Mrs. Lindsay's only sister resided. In conclusion she earnestly appealed to Regina, as the daughter of her adoption, not to extinguish the hope that formed so powerful an element in the recovery of her son Douglass.

Was it the mercy of God, or the grim decree of fatalism, or the merest accident that provided this door of escape, when she was growing desperate?

Numb with heart-ache, and strangely bewildered, Regina could recognize it only as a providential harbour, into which she could safely retreat from the storm of suffering that was beginning to roar around her. Recalling the peaceful happy years spent at the parsonage, and the noble character of the man who loved her so devotedly, who had so tenderly cared for her through the season of her childhood,—a gush of grateful emotion pleaded that she owed him all that he now asked.

When she contrasted the image of the pale student, so affectionate, so unselfishly considerate in all things,—with the commanding figure and cold, guarded, non-committal face of Mr. Palma,—she shivered and groaned; but the comparison only goaded her to find safety in the sheltering love that must at least give her peace.

If she were Douglass Lindsay's wife, would she not find it far easier to forget her guardian? Would it be sinful to promise her hand to one while her heart stubbornly enshrined the other? She loved Mr. Lindsay very much:—he seemed holy, in his supremely unselfish and deeply religious life—and after a while perhaps other feelings would grow up toward him?

In re-reading the letter, she saw that Mr. Lindsay had informed Mr. Palma of the proposal which it contained; as he deemed it due to her guardian to acquaint him with the sentiments they entertained for each other.

Should she reject the priestly hand and loyal heart of the young missionary, would not Mr. Palma suspect the truth?

She realized that the love in her heart was of that deep, exhaustive nature which comes but once to woman, and since she must bury it forever, was it not right that she should dedicate her life to promoting Mr. Lindsay's happiness? Next to her mother did she not owe him more than any other human being?

As she sat leaning upon Mr. Palma's desk, she saw his handkerchiff near the inkstand where he had dropped it early that morning; and taking it up, she drew it carressingly across her cheek and lips. Everything in this room, where, since her residence in New York, she had been accustomed to see him, grew sacred from associations with him, and all he touched was strangely dear.

For two hours she sat there, very quiet, weighing the past, considering the future, and, at last she slowly resolved upon her course.

She would write that night to her mother, enclosing Mr. Lindsay's letter, and if her mother's permission could be obtained, she would give her hand to Douglass, and in his love forget the brief madness that now makes her so wretched.

From the date of the postscript she discovered that the letter had been delayed en route, and computing the time from Yokohama to San Francisco—according to information given by Mr. Chesley—she found that unless some unusual detention had occurred, the vessel in which Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay intended to sail should have already reached California.

Mr. Palma's jest, relative to India, was explained; and evidently, he had not sufficient interest in her decision even to pause and ask it. Knowing the contents, he had with cold indifference carried the letter for two day in his pocket, and handed it to her just as he was departing.

She imagined him sitting in the car, beside Mrs. Carew—admiring her beauty—perhaps uttering in her ear tender vows, never breathed by his lips to any other person, while she—the waif, the fatherless, nameless, obscure, young girl—sat there alone desperately fighting the battle of destiny.

Bitter as was this suggestion of her aching heart, it brought strength; and rising, she laid aside the handkerchief and quitted the apartment that babbled ceaselessly of its absent master.

Among some precious souvenirs of her mother she kept the package which had been given to her by Mr. Lindsay, with the request that it should be kept unopened until her eighteenth birthday, and now she unlocked the small ebony box that contained her few treasures.

The parcel was sealed with red wax, and when she removed the enveloping pasteboard, she found a heavy gold ring, bearing a large, beatifully tinted opal, surrounded with small diamonds. On the inside was engraved "Douglass and Regina," with the date of the day on which he had left the Parsonage for India.

Kneeling beside her bed, she prayed that God would help her to do right—would guide her into the proper path—would enable her to do her duty, first to her mother, then to Mr. Lindsay.

When she rose, the ring shone on her left hand, and though her face was worn and pallid, her mournful eyes were undimmed, and she sat down to write her mother frankly concerning the feelings of intense gratitude, and perfect confidence, which prompted her to accept Mr. Lindsay's offer—provided Mrs. Orme consented to the betrothal.

Ere she had concluded the task, her attention was attracted by a noise on the stairs that were situated near her door.

It was rather too early for Mrs. Palma's return from the opera, and the servants were all in a different portion of the building.

Regina laid down her pen, and listened. Slow heavy footsteps were ascending, and recognizing nothing familiar in the sound, she walked quickly ro the door which stood ajar, and looked out.

A tall woman, wrapped in a heavy shawl, had reached the landing, and as the gas light fell upon her, Regina started forward.

"Olga! we did not expect you until to-morrow—but you are disguised! Oh! what is the matter?"

Wan and haggard, apparently ten years older than when she ran down these steps a week previous—departing for Albany, Olga stood clinging to the mahogany rail of the balustrade. Her large straw bonnet had fallen back, the heavy hair was slipping low on the neck and brow, and her sunken eyes had a dreary stare.

"Are you ill? What has happened? Dear Olga, speak to me."

She threw her arms roung the regal figure, and felt that she was shivering from head to foot.

As she became aware of the close clinging embrace in which Regina held her, a ghastly smile parted Olga's colorless lips, and she said in a husky whisper:

"Is it you? True little heart;—the only one left in all the world."

After a few seconds she added:

"Where is mamma?"

"At the opera."

"To see Beelzebub? All the world is singing and playing that now, and you may be sure that you and I shall be in at the final chorus. Regina"——

She swept her hand feebly over her forehead, and seemed to forget herself.

Then she rallied, and a sudden spark glowed in her dull eyes, as when a gust stirs an ash heap, and uncovers a dying ember.

"Erle Palma?"

"Has gone to Washington."

"May he never come back! Oh God! a hundred deaths would not satisfy me! A hundred graves were not sufficient to hide him from my sight!"

She groaned and clasped her hand across her eyes.

"What dreadful thing has occurred? Tell me, you know you can trust me."

"Trust! no, no; not even the Archangels that fan the Throne of God. I have done with trust. Take me in your room a little while. Hide me from mamma until to-morrow; then it will make no difference who sees me."

Regina led her to the low rocking chair in her own room, and took off the common shawl and bonnet, which she had used as a disguise; then seized her cold nerveless hand.

"Do tell me your great sorrow."

"Something rare nowaday. I had a heart, a live warm loving heart, and it is broken;—dead—utterly dead. Regina I was so happy yesterday. Oh! I stood at the very gate of heaven so close that all the glory and the sweetness blew upon me, like June breezes over a rose hedge; and the angels seemed to beecon me in. I went to meet Belmont, to join him forever, to turn my back on the world, and as his wife pass into the Eden of his love and presence. * * * * Now, another gate yawns, and the fiends call me to come down, and if there really be a hell, why then"——

For nearly a moment she remained silent.

"Olga, is he ill? Is he dead?"

Look Out.

In a communication to the Lancet, Mr. Lawrence puts forward the theory that typhoid-fever is capable of being set up de novo by bovine evacuations. In support of it he cites a number of cases that came under his observation while practising medicine in South Africa, in which, although the sparse population of the country was favorable to the tracing of infection, no connection with a previously existing case of typhoid could be detected; whilst there was always evidence of the access of cattle manure to the drinking water. In no case was he able to ascribe the disease to horse manure or the sheep manure, the latter of which, at the large sheep farms of the Boers, is said to lie in enormous quantities close by their dwelling houses. It certainly is a curious fact, as pointed out by Mr. Lawrence, that many typhoid epidemics of which the history has been traced in this country have originated from dairies, although this has hitherto usually been attributed to the great susceptibility of milk to contract contamination.

"Poison in the" Tin Can.

A practical tinner writes to an exchange that he knows that cans made from leaded tin are being sold in great quantities and offers for publication the following warning; When buying cans see that they are not made of roofing tin, which is coated with lead, and is a slow but sure poison. They should be made of bright tin, which is harmless, providing the fruit is emptied out of the cans as soon as opened. The difference will be easily told, as the leaded tin has a dull look, while the bright tin looks like burnished silver. One is poisonous and the other is harmless.

I would respectfully state that the prices I have decided to sell at are for the SPECIAL BENEFIT OF THE PUBLIC rather than for my neighbouring competitors, who will, no doubt, commene ticketing their goods for the purpose of selling at prices largely in advance of mine.

A base ball match has been arranged to take place here on the Civic Holiday between the Silver Stars, of Peterborough, and the Uxbridge Club, which is said to be one of the best base ball clubs east of Toronto.

The Market.

There was an average attendance on the market this morning. There was little or no change in prices. About the only thing worthy of note was the large amount of lamb offered for sale, some of which sold at 7 cents.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—Winds from south-east and south-west; fair, warmer weather.

Coal Oil.

Owing to a "combination" having been formed among the refiners, coal oil is advancing every week. Consumers therefore should take their cans to "China Hall" at once and have them filled, and thereby save money. China Hall has the best quality of oil in town. Try it once.

A Correction.

We find that we were mistaken in stating that John Montgomery was bound over to keep the peace in consequence of the disturbance at Bridgenorth. Some of his brothers were called upon to give bonds, but John Montgomery was not called upon to do so, and of course was not bound over.

Mr. Wm. Spence, who for the last five years has been living in New South Wales and Queensland, California, is back to his old home once more. ## FIRE BRIGADE BAND CONCERT.

A First-Class Programme of High Art Music Well Rendered.

The audience that assembled at the Opera House on Friday evening to witness the performance of Madame C. C. Rossiter on the pianoforte and English Concertina, and listen to the sweet and melodious strains of the Fire Brigade Band, (if one may judge from the enthusiastic and prolonged encores) were pleased immensely well. The band opened the evening's entertainment by a very creditable rendering of Verdi's Il Trovatore, and it is needless to say that in this, as in their second number, Kyrie and Gloria, from Mozart's Twelfth Mass, they acquitted themselves in that finished and refined manner that long ago stamped them as one of the leading musical organizations of this province. Madame Rossiter followed with a piano solo that at once had the effect of winning the good opinion of the select and critical audience. As a lady pianist she is much above the average, and her rendering of Beethoven's Sonata in G was a brilliant and, we may perhaps say, faultless performance. Mr. Porteous, so well and favorably known in musical circles, gave Jude's "Down in the Mines" with charming effect; and later on in the second part captivated the audience with his excellent rendering of Hutchinson's beautiful song "Dream Faces." The outburst of applause that followed his dissapearance from the stage had the double effect of showing the keen appreciation of the audience and at the same time enticing Mr. Porteous to respond to the hearty encore, which he did by singing "The three Jolly Sailors." Madame Rossiter as a concertinaste is no doubt a very capable performer, and her "Illegro from the 12th Symphony" together with the "Scotch Airs" was first-class. We might here mention that if Madame Rossiter, who evidently brings all the music out of the instrument possible—would adopt the practice of swinging the concertina, just as male performers do, her selections would, perhaps, have a better effect on the audience. This is a difficult thing for a lady to do, but a concertina soloist is at a disadvantage when the matter is overlooked. This lady is a good lecturer, and with that, anecdote and recitation she was successful in holding the attention of the audience during the whole of the entertainment.

Mr. Heathfield presided at the piano during the rendering of the solos on the concertina, and also accompanied the vocalists with his well-known good taste and precision.

The members of the band and Mr. Millar, the efficient and painstaking bandmaster, deserve praise for bringing Madame Rossiter to Peterborough, and we hope that this will not be their last venture, as the concert on Friday evening was really good.

The Ontario and Quebec.

On account of the difficulty with the sink hole in Kaladar, and the desire of the company to have it pertectly safe before heavy trains are run over it, the Ontario and Quebec Railway will not be opened through to Ottawa until August 11th.

Fruit Jars.

Every person putting up fruit should give the the jars the first-attention; without a perfect sealing jar, it is useless going to the expense and trouble of canning fruit, China Hall is the only store in Peterborough selling the improved perfect fitting "Crown Jar" in firsts. Every jar warranted. It costs no more to have the best as the enormous quantities, we handle enables us to sell our jars as low as any house in the trade and give a better jar, Stone Jars and Jelly Cans all sizes at CHINA HALL.

Turnbull has just received the first shipment of his immense fall importations, including many desirable lines in Dress Goods, Black Cashmeres, Linens, Flannels, Prints, &c.

Bridge Contract.

We are glad to learn that Mr. W. H. Law of the Peterborough Central Iron and Bridge Works, has secured the contract for the iron truss bridge to be erected at Omemee for the County of Victoria. The length is to be sixty six feet, the roadway eighteen feet wide with two sidewalks of four feet each. Mr. Law has thus obtained contracts from the counties of Victoria, Durham and Northumberland and we hope that with this beginning our town will soon have established extensive bridge works to the great benefit of the whole community.

The Art Exhibition.

As our citizens have responded so willingly to the Committee's request for the loan of works of art, a fine collection will be the result. Already seventy or eighty pictures have been promised; also a large quantity of interesting curiosities from all parts of the world. A catalogue, (giving among other particulars, the names of lenders) will be issued for the convenience of those attending the exhibition. If any others would like to be included, the committee will be glad to hear from them. The work of receiving and arranging will commence on Monday morning next, and contributions will be received up till Tuesday evening. As before stated, the exhibition will open on Wednesday evening at half-past seven o'clock. The music that evening will be furnished by the Fire Brigade Band who have kindly offered their services. The following is a list of oil paintings and water colours from the Fine Art Rooms of Messrs. William Scott & Son of Montreal. The attention of art lovers is called to this opportunity of adding to their galleries at reasonable rates.

Summer Dress Fabrics

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. We must have room for our new stock—hence our wish that you buy at once. We'll make the prices to help the goods go out.

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubboraly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

MALICE AND DISGRACE.

The Toronto World, an independent Reform journal thus condemns the malicious attack of the Globe upon Canadian industries:—

"The Globe's crusade against Canadian manufacturing interests has come to an ignominious conclusion, somewhat after the fashion of its crusade in favor of the Scott act. In the latter case certain well-known reform liquor dealers gagged the deacon, and there is little doubt that certain reform manufacturers profited by the successful example of their liquor dealing confreres. Mr. Glen, M P., (reformer) solemnly declares that the manufactory over which he presides is in a florishing condition, and Messers. McKechnie and Bertram, of the celebrated Dundas tool works, brand the organ's statement of their affairs as untruthful. This anti-industrial crusade was begun in malice and has been abandoned in disgrace."

LINDSAY.

CRICKET MATCH.—A cricket match played here on Friday between the East Toronto and Lindsay cricket clubs, resulted in a victory for the home team by 15 runs.

FENELON FALLS.

ACCIDENT.—The Gazette says that Mr. John Cummings, a farmer who lives near Ball Point, in Fenelon, had his left shoulder dislocated by being thrown from a buckboard in which he and a neighbor, Mr. John Coppin, were driving home Fenelon Falls on the night of Friday July 25th

FIRE AT THE PULP MILL.—On Saturday, July 26th the iron smoke stack of the Pulp mill, which had been in use almost day and night for several months, burnt out, and became so heated as to cause the ignition of the shingles on the gable of the engine room, which appears to us to be perilously near to it. Some ten minutes or so after the first fire was extinguished another broke out—or, rather, tried to break out—in the cupola on the liquor house; but the men instantly quenched it with a dash or two of water

Cricketers Mobbed.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—A Mob attacked the English cricket players at Kenningtan Oval to-day and compelled them to retire, surrounded by police. Several arrests were made and finally the mob allowed the game to proceed, cheering the Australians who won by nine wickets. The mob were incensed by the belief that the English players were careless after the gate money was received.

Bass' English Ale.

Another large shipment of Bass' Ale, October brewing, just arrived at W. Chamberlain's Restaurant. Imported direct.

Huckleberries.

A fine supply of choice ripe Huckleberries, fresh from the pickers, just received at CARTON BROTHERS', opposite the Market square. Selling at very reasonable prices.

Special to Gentlemen.

NO REFORM POLICY.

Mr. Blake depicted from an Independent Standpoint.

The electors are against the Government, we believe, but not with the Opposition. Why? Because they do not know where the opposition is going nor what it wants to do. No more does the Opposition seem to know. Take great questions on which Liberals should have definite opinions! Do the men who would compose a Blake Cabinet want Free Trade, or a Tariff strictly for Revenue, or merely reductions of certain taxes in the present tariff? Who can tell till they tell? And what elector, primarily a trader, will work to put men in, who, if they have a customs policy, have not made it understood? Here the people will not take another leap in the dark. They require clear definitions. Many Liberals would prefer the perpetual exclusion of Liberalism from office to the abandonment of free trade principles by soi-disant Liberals in office. They may be doctrinaires, cranks, what you will, but they are honest men and not few. So with many electors, primarily protectionists, who would follow Mr. Blake it they dared. He does not set at ease anybody who thinks first of the fiscal question. And without satisfying either one side or the other he can get nothing from either. Voters cannot be caught by a straddle on a matter wherein they have distinct beliefs. Then there is the aspiration to Independence. Where is Mr. Blake on this question? Fighting shy, non-committal, apparently trying to tickle Young Canadians and Old British, failing to please either, irritating both? What would he do with the Pacific Railway if he had power? Would he put an end to construction? Would he let Manitoba out of bondage? To point out the folly of the Government in this matter is almost idle; neither criticism nor invective do the people want, but a plan for getting the country out of the scrape. Commercial Union with the States is a scheme widely favoured and widely disliked. It is a question that probably will and certainly should before long decide the fate of Ministries. Where is Mr. Blake on it? Where are his lieutenants? We know where the Globe was and is, hence we understand that no human being can tell where it is likely to be. Facing south-by-north on questions so important, Mr. Blake is found with a policy against the Senate, and for some nondescript thing in its place. He has also a dislike for Orangeism. Now the people care little whether the Senate stands or falls, it is a useless not an injurious institution; a Government cannot be put in or out by any agitation on this matter. As for Orangeism a Premier who should obtain office in consequence of having cleverly captured the Catholic vote would not exactly have won a victory for liberalism.

"But," say the Grit organs, "our side ought to have support on the ground that its administration would be honest." Now if the people could be convinced of that, the opposition would, of course, make great gains. But it is clear that the electors never can be so convinced while the opposition invites support mainly by assertions of its honesty. All politicians are honest perforce when out of office. How can the electors know that the Outs who ask for office to display their shining honesty would prove purer men than they who have power now? Clearly an opposition must be deeply pledged to bring about some change that the people have been taught to desire, before good administration by the opposition, leaders will be taken for granted by the majority of voters. To ask leave to administer is simply to ask for office, and the electors, except when shocked by some such exposure as the Pacific Scandel, will not give office to men who treat its acquisition as the main thing. The conclusion is that the country retains Sir John, not because it is in despair of better government from Outs who propose nothing, agitate nothing, blink at everything and seem in mortal terror lest the adoption of a clear policy on any important matter should imperil their chances of power. Messieurs of the opposition! have you any good beliefs? If so stand up for them at all hazards and you shall find that the people are still honest enough to back true men.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

The T.V.C. and our Northwest.

It is for the carrying trade of our own Northwest territory that the Trent Valley Canal is peculiarly adapted, and would appear to have been intended by nature as its outlet. This canal is sometimes objected to by those who have not studied the subject, because it is not intended to be a ship canal of fourteen feet capacity, and if it were to be such a canal then it would be objected to on account of the cost of construction. The situation of the great Northwest and the position of the T.V.C. waters are in perfect harmony with each other. For the grain trade of the Northwest a ship canal is not desirable, in fact would be practically useless for the reasons so clearly and forcibly set forth to Sir Chas. Tupper by Mr. Hillard, M. P. for East Peterboreugh, a member of the deputation that waited on that Minister last February to urge on him and the Government the desirability of placing in the estimates of the last session a farther sum for the prosecution of a work on the T. V. C. Mr. Hilliard showed that on account of the scarceness of lumber and its consequent dearness, barns will be few and far between in the Northwest; that grain is and will be generally threshed in the field, and consequently will be more or less damp; that to put wheat in that state into large vessels to be sent to Montreal without being turned would be to spoil it. We know that the dried Ontario wheat cannot be left in store in large quantities for any length of time unless regularly turned without musting. Consequently damp wheat carried in barges containing 25,000 bushels would not be in this danger, and every time it would be put through an elevator would dry and improve it. The Trent Valley Canal is not only peculiarly suited for the grain trade of the North-west, being a barge canal, but would be between 400 and 500 miles nearer the ocean, avoiding the very dangerous navigation of Lakes Erie and Huron, where, it is estimated, $1,000,000 annually are lost in shipwrecks.—Fenelon Falls Gazette.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company, as a part of their double track to the east of the city, decided upon enlarging the bridge across the River Don.

M. Waddington advises the French Government to reject England's proposal to reduce the rate of interest on the Egyptian debt contingent upon the revenue from the land tax.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC IN A BOAT.

LONDON, August 2.—Captain Johnsosen, a Norwegian, is preparing to make a trip across the Atlantic in a three masted boat, twenty-two feet long by five wide, with eighteen inches draught. He will take a cat as a companion. Johnsosen is fifty years of age, and was formerly a gold miner in California. He is at present testing his craft in a coasting cruise, at the conclusion of which he will provision his boat and tempt the ocean.—Mail.

TEEMER DEFEATS ROSS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The four mile race between Wallace Ross and Teemer to-day was won by Teemer by one length in 26. 32 ½ secs: the fastest time on record. Ross led to the turning boys, where Teemer made a wonderfully scientific turn and collared Ross. Teemer led all the way home. The best previous time four miles is Hanlan's 27 57 ½.

INTERMEDIATE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Young Shamrocks Defeated by the Ontarios of Toronto.

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—The Ontarios of Toronto came here yesterday morning to play the Young Shamrocks for the intermediate championship and beat them for it by three straight games. The games were taken in 18, 10, and 6 minutes respectively and the changes favoured the Young Shamrocks or the time of the games would have been very much shorter.

THE LACROSSE CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Shamrocks Defeat the Montrealers by Three Games to Nothing.

The match for the Lacrosse Championship of the World was played at Montreal on Saturday between the Shamrocks and the Montrealers and ended in a victory for the former by three straight games. The first was won in a minute and a half; the second in seventeen minutes and a half; and the third in thirteen and a half. The lack of a team play beat the Montrealers. They also appeared to be afraid of their opponents.

Lachine Cup.

MONTREAL, Aug. 2.—In the four-oared race for the Lachine Cup at Lachine, to-day, three miles with a turn, the Argonauts of Toronto finished first by what looked nearly a quarter of a mile, with the Chathams second. The Argonauts were disqualified for having turned a wrong buoy, and the Chathams were disqualified for having crossed the winnig line outside the finish buoy. The race and cup were awarded to the Lachine crew.

Maud S.'s Record Surpassed.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 1.—The annals of the American turf have yet to chronicle two more brilliant and successful achievements than those performed at Narragansett park to-day in the trials of the trotting wonder, Jay Eye See, to beat his record of 2.10½ and that of Maud S. of 2.10½, and of the famous black gelding, H. B. Winship and mate, to beat their double team record of 2.09½, and that of Frank and mate of 2.08½. A great crowd was present from all quarters, including horsemen, owners and jockeys. The Grand Stand, accommodating 6,500 persons, quickly filled, and carriages lined the west side of the track. The aggregate attendance was 10,000. The track was in fair condition, but not first-class. The first event was the trial of Jay Eye See. After warming up he started at the word "go." First quarter, 1.3½; second, 1.05; third, 1.30; fourth, 2.10. Never on the race track has been a scene of wilder excitement than followed this announcement. Hats, canes, handkerchiefs, and fans waved, while men shouted themselves hoarse in cheering the king of the American turf. Mr. Case, the owner of the horse, was overjoyed. He received a shower of congratulations with the plainest manifestations of delight.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—Maud S. trotted a mile without mate and without skip, break or urging to-day in 2 minutes 9½ seconds.

Steamer Disabled.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The steamer Lydian Monarch from London, July 19, for New York, was spoken Thursday, disabled. She refused assistance.

QUEENSTOWN, Aug. 4.—It was the steamer Austral which spoke the Lydian Monarch. Mr. Secord, Galesbury, Ill., who was a passenger on the Lydian Monarch, boarded the Austral. He narrates that after leaving London the Lydian Monarch experienced some rather severe weather. Everything went on very well until six on the evening of July 25th. At that time when the saloon passengers were at dinner a sharp, quick explosion was heard, terrifying many passengers and shaking the steamer as though she had struck upon a rock. The chief engineer rushed promptly to the engine-room, the passengers hastily followed. There was for a brief space of time very considerable excitement until it was discovered that the damage was confined altogether to the bursting of the cylinder. All efforts to repair the damage failed, and notwithstanding all available canvas was set the steamer made very little headway, owing to long prevalence of the north-west wind, and for six days the Lydian Monarch drifted helplessly in the trough of the sea.

Daily Evening Review

MONDAY, AUGUST 4, 1884.

STILL SLANDERING.

THE papers are now teeming with denials and indignant protests from manufacturers, both Conservative and Reform, who repudiate the statements of the Globe that their factories are shut down, are working part time, and so forth. These slanderous and mischievous statements are made by the leading Reform journal with the two disgraceful objects of misrepresenting its political opponents by picturing the National Policy as a failure, and of injuring the country so long as it choses Conservative advisers. To carry out these two objects the Globe and its numerous imitators do not hesitate to strike a blow at the credit of the Canadian manufacturers. What care they even if they ruin the manufacturers and throw the artisans out of employment, if at the same time they can aim a blow at the Conservative leaders? This time, however, Mr. Blake's organ has overshot the mark, for its calumnies have called forth undoubted evidence of the success of many industrial establishments thus maligned.

NEITHER LEGAL NOR MORAL.

MR. BLAKE has been telling a public meeting that he never considered the award to be legally binding. If so why had he not the honesty to communicate his opinion to Mr. Mowat and his colleagues, when they clamoured for the award and nothing but the award, when they threatened civil war for the territory included in it, in fact waged civil war by means their Lieutenant Boston O'Brien and others? It could not be because Mr. Blake had no influence with Mr. Mowat and his colleagues, for he could get them to purchase Mr. Wheler, in order that he might force upon West Ontario a supporter who might render him more assistance than his present insufficient aids in the House of Commons.

Mr. Blake was not more fortunate in his remarks when he went on to maintain that the award, though not legally valid, was morally binding. We cannot see what moral obligation there could be to enforce an award that was not legal, constitutional or regular. Its ratification would have been an immoral not a moral act. The Privy Council has decided that the Reform ministers then in office in Canada and Ontario exceeded their powers by usurped the jurisdiction given by our constitution to the Legislatures in such matters. The Privy Council has also decided that the arbitrators exceeded their powers by awarding a natural and convenient boundary instead of the legal boundary.

If Sir John Macdonald had endeavoured to force Parliament to ratify the award he would have been guilty of a similar act of usurpation to that practiced by Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Mowat, for upon Parliament was placed the duty of considering such matters and it was for the members to judge. They did decide that the award was irregular and invalid, and they have the satisfaction of knowing that the highest court in the realm agrees with them.

THE ONTARIO EXPERIMENTAL FARM INCORPORATION.

We are indebted to the Stock-Raisers' Journal for the following information with regard to the stock just imported for the Model farm under the supervision of Prof. Brown and for which $25,000 was voted by the Legislature during its last session :—

Rob Roy (45484), a prince amongst Canadian Short-horn bulls, or indeed those of any country, heads the list of Durhams. This massive, compact, beautifully symmetrical and evenly proportioned bull, cost £450. In addition to his own competitive laurels we may add that his dam Luxury won first at Birmingham, and that his son Rosario was awarded the red at the Royal English, Royal Irish, and Highland and Agricultural Society's Shows, thus giving him an exalted rank as a stock-getter. Although the highest priced cow is Princess Royal, 8th, £200, bred by Mr. Duthie, of Collynie, and possessing high individual merit, the 6-year old cow, Mademoiselle, outdoes her in the nobility of her relations, though costing but £150. Her sire, Earl of Derby II., (31061), was first in 1874 at the Formantine, won Highland Society's medal as best bull, cup at the Royal northern for the best Short-horn, and also best animal in the show.

The two-year old Aberdeen Angus Poll bull Strathglass, (2,357), vol. vii., and the cow Kyma (4,969), nobly represent this breed, the former costing £500 and the latter £100, although we do not take Strathglass to be so perfect a specimen of Aberdeen polls as Rob Roy is of the Short-horns.

Conqueror, (7,510) two year old, bred by the late T. J. Carwardine, Stocktonbury, Leominster, and sired by Lord Wilton (4,740), out of one of the greatest if not the greatest Hereford stock-getter of any land, is a fine specimen of a Hereford bull. His price is £500. The six-year-old cow Bloomer, vol. xiii., page 277, purchased from Mr. Hill, Felhampton Court, is said to have been the largest Hereford cow in England. She was sired by Merry Monarch and is now due to calve.

The Galloways are an excellent lot, the first ever sent to Canada from the unrivalled herd of the late Duke of Buccleugh. The two-year bull Stanley III., of Drumlanrig (1,173), does honor to this breed. His grandsire, Black Prince, in addition to his having been a noted prize-winner, has sired more prize Galloways than any animal that ever lived. Berta of Drumlanrig (4,222), the best representative female, a two year old heifer, cost £90.

The Devon lot are headed by Rose's Duke, bought from the Stowey Court herd by Mr. Tait, steward to Her Majesty, for £45, and obligingly handed over to Professor Brown at the same price. He is one year old. The best female, Esmeralda (4433), now seven years old, was bred by Mr. Whimple, Devonshire, and a singularly fine specimen.

The £42 bull, Campbell of Drumlanrig (462), heads the Ayrshire list. His dam, Myres, (319) was in 1884 1st wherever exhibited, except at the Ayr Derby, where she stood fourth. The cow Stately 3rd, of Dumlanrig, now four years old, possess the size of a Holstein with the beauty of an Ayrshire. She was but once exhibited and won first as a milker. Her dam Rosie of Drumlanrig, was a noted prize-winner in her day, of which Mr. James Cranston, of Thornhill, the very competent manager of the Duke of Buccleugh, has said that "she is the only Ayrshire cow that was never beaten in the howyard."

As with the Aberdeen-Angus some years ago, the Farm has taken the initiative in introducing the Guernseys into Ontario—a breed that is now receiving so much attention in England for dairying purposes. This lot consists of a bull and two cows, bought from Mr. L. P. Fowler, of Bushey, England. These animals are direct from Guernsey, having been just quarantined in England. The bull, Cetewaye, No. 37, was bred by John LePage, of Guernsey, and cost £50.

The Jersey lot were procured similar to that of the Guernseys. The one year bull St. Mary's Boy (535) was bred by Mr. E. P. DuFeu, and cost £45. Holsteins could not be purchased in Britain, but will be secured where it may be thought best.

The Lincoln sheep were purchased from Mr. Robert Right, of Nocton Heath, Lincoln, England. The ram is of the Needham flock blood, and cost £30, the ewes costing £10 each, the whole lot being pedigreed, some to the seventh remove.

The cotswolds are from the flock of Mr. Russel, Swanwick, of Cirencester Agricultural College, of Mr. S. J. Jillett, Killenny, Bampton, Oxford, two of the most noted breeders of England. The ram cost £23, and is sired by the winner at the royal in 1883, and was shown in a pen of five that were first at Oxford the same year.

The Leicesters were purchased from Mr. Robert Wallace, of Auchinbrine and Mauchline, Ayrshire, Scotland, and are of the border type, the ram costing £50. His sire, of the Messrs. Clark's stock, of Oldhamstock, Mains, Co., Perth, sold for 90 guineas at the ram sale in Edinburg, 1882.

The Hampshires are from Mr. W. Parson's flock; of West Stratton, Micheldever, England. The two-shear ram was best in a pen of four ram lambs that were first at the Royal, 1882, one of his ancestors renting at 175 guineas. The shearling ram was also in the first prize pen at the Royal. One of the lot of six ewes is the grand-daughter of the ram hired by Mr. Parsons from Mr. Morrison, of Fonthill, Salisbury, for six weeks at £100, the highest price ever given for a Hampshire Down ram. £110 were given for the lot of two rams and six ewes.

The Southdowns consisting of two rams and five ewes, are a good lot, from the flock of Lord Walsingham, Thetford, Norfolk. The shearling ram cost £100, and the two-shear £50. The latter was rented last year for 50 guineas. The ewes cost £10 each.

The Oxford Downs are from Mr. A. Brassey's flock, Heythrop Park, Chipping Norton, Oxford. The sire of one ram won first prize at the Royal, 1882; the other was sired by Tyfield, of the Duce Flock, and bought by Mr. Brassey at 66 guineas. These rams cost £20 each.

The Shropshires are from Sir H. Allsop, of Hindlip, Hall, Worcester, and Mr. John Evans, of Uffington, Shrewsbury.

Perhaps the finest ram of the lot is that named Royal Stamp, from Mr. Evans, which rented to Mr. Thomas for 70 guineas, obtained for the Ontario Agricultural College at £65. A large lot of Shropshires were brought over, owing to the brisk demand for this breed. They are grandly wooled, and all pedigreed, as are the sheep in all the classes.

To show what can be done with Cheviots, a ram and two ewes were brought over from the flock of Mr. W. W. Marshall, of Thornhill, Dumfriesshire. The three cost £15, and are of course not pedigreed. They are a famous mutton sheep.

The lot of the three black faced Highland breed cost also £15. The ram is a distinguished prize winner. They were purchased from Mr. James Craig, of Craigdarroch.

Prof. Brown pays a high compliment to our Canadian breeders when he says that he could not secure better Berkshires in England than can be found in Canada, and therefore he did not invest in these, but on the recommendation of two prominent Ontario farmers, purchased specimens of the middle York breed, remarkable for their length of frame, from which the famous English is produced. They resemble the Suffolk, to which they are allied, and also the Windsor. They were purchased from the herd of the Earl of Ellesmere, Manchester, and cost £16 and £12 respectively.

Two bitches and two dogs were also purchased at £5 each, prize takers at the Ayrshire Derby.

LADIES' JOURNAL

Bible Competition No. 7.

Closing September 11th,

OPEN TO THE WORLD

The Leading Rewards are Lot 50 x 150 at Toronto Junction, Pianos, Organs, Sewing Machines, Gold and Silver Watches, Silver Tea Sets, &c.

The proprietor of the Ladies Journal now announces a magnificent list of rewards for correct answers to Bible questions. It is surprising how little is known of the Bible. The questions are not so difficult this time as last, and we should be glad if there was a hearty response so as to encourage the proprietor of the Journal to persevere in his good work. It was announced in the June issue of the Ladies' Journal that the competition which closed last month would be the last for the present, but it has been decided to try one more.

All money must be sent by post office or express. No information will be given to any one more than is stated here. So send on answers, and don't waste time writing. Do not send postage stamps unless six cents is added for the discount. Remit by postoffice order, scrip or small coin.

THE BIBLE QUESTIONS:

1.—Is Diamond referred to in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

2.—Is Emerald made mention of in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

3.—Is Sapphire spoken of in the Bible? If so, state first reference.

These all refer to the precious stones.

Now, any one having a knowledge of the Scriptures ought to be able promptly to answer these questions with a little study, and so secure some one of those rewards. Bear in mind every one competing must send FIFTY CENTS with their answers for which the Ladies' Journal will be sent one year to any address. If you answer each of the questions correctly and your answers are in time you are sure to secure one of these costly rewards.

But you can, of course, send in any time between now and the 11th of September, and your letter will take its place at the publication office in the order it arrives there. All letters are carefully numbered as they arrive, and there can be no mistake. If your answers are correct, and they reach there in time, you will surely get some reward in addition to the Ladies' Journal, which alone is big value for the half dollar. If you don't get anything but the Journal you will be well pleased with your investment, as it consists of 20 pages of fashions illustrated, short and serial stories, poetry, newest music, household hints, etc., etc.; in fact, just the paper to suit every lady.

By subscribing in a club with your neighbors you will secure some considerable advantage—that is, there must be at least thirty of a club, and all who send correct answers to the Bible questions may have their choice of a handsome ring, heavily gold-plated ladies' gold brooch, which retails at about one dollar and a half, or a triple-plated butter knife. Either of these you may wish will be sent postage paid. You will thus secure to a certainty one or other of these two presents, and in addition will have as good an opportunity of gaining some one of the other large rewards in lists given above just as well as though you had sent in singly. This is simply an inducement to get up clubs. We are sure our readers could not do better than to try their skill in hunting up these questions and competing for these rewards. Everything will be carried out exactly as promised.

Prizes in last competition went all over Canada and to many parts of the United States.

Address, Editor LADIES' JOURNAL, Toronto, Canada.

A Maine Skipper's Ghost Story.

Capt. James T——, an old Portland shipmaster, told the following ghost story to a citizen. He said that one night on the voyage from which he had just returned, while lying off the Battery, at New York, waiting for the crew to come on board, he heard some one on the top of the house calling "James T ——, James T ——." Now, this was not only the Captain's name, but also that of his son, who was his mate on this voyage. Only the captain, mate and steward were on board, and on hearing the voice they all went on deck, but saw no one. The stewards' dog, which slept in front of the cabin door, lay quiet on his rug. The next day the bark sailed for Rio Janeiro, and several strange occurrences took place on the passage. One morning his son, the mate, said to him: "Captain, the ship is haunted, I turned out on my watch at four o'clock in the morning, and as I went out of the cabin door, I saw some one in white, but before I could distinguish whether it was male or female it disappeared around the mainmast. The steward said he saw it also and was frightened." Some days after this the steward called the captain and told him the mate had not yet come on deck. The captain went to the mate's stateroom, and on opening the door saw the mate apparently laughing at him; but on taking hold of him he found he was dead. From his distorted countenance it appeared that he had been frightened to death. Several other strange occurrences happened on board, and on arriving at Rio the steward left the vessel on account of feeling that she was haunted. Strange noises continued to be heard on board, such as the working of the windlass in heaving the anchor, but on going forward no one was to be seen. Now comes the strangest part of the story. During the captain's absence on this voyage another son of his, Samuel T——, arrived home from a voyage, and remarked that he would go down for his dunnage. He came back with it and lay down for a nap. Not coming down to tea, some of the family went to call him and found him dead. This was about the time that the mate and steward saw the figure in white. —Portland (Me.) Press.

Another Victory.

A Startling important discovery was made when, after long and patient experiments, the combination of Nerviline was reached. A grand victory indeed, for the suffering have an ever ready, prompt, efficient, and cheap remedy at hand. Do you know that for 10 cents you can buy a trial bottle of Polson's Nerviline and test its great power over pain of every description? Polson's Nerviline cures chills, pain in the stomach, side and back, rheumatism; in fact all pain. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

The Housewife.

A popular domestic journal for American homes, will be sent for one year free to every lady who will send at once the names and address of 10 married ladies, and 50 cents (no stamps taken). Best paper for either young or old housekeepers in existence. This offer is made only to secure names to whom to send sample copies, as we know every lady who once sees THE HOUSEWIFE will subscribe for it at once. Regular price $1 per year. Address, the HOUSEWIFE, Rochester, N. Y.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough it never fails. This explains why more than a million bottle were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's porous plaster. Sold by J. D. Tully.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

IT ISN'T Extravagant to claim that Zopesa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists, 50 cents.

CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

A cry as of indeed one broken-hearted came from her quivering lips, and she clasped her arms over her head.

"Oh! if he were indeed dead! If I could have seen him and kissed him in his coffin! And know that he was still mine, all mine even in the grave"——

Her head sank upon her bosom, and after a brief pause she resumed in an unnaturally calm voice:

"My world, so lovely yesterday, has all gone to pieces; and for me life is a black crumbling ruin. I hung all my hopes, my prayers, my fondest dreams on one shining silver thread of trust—and it snapped—and all fall together. We ask for fish, and are stung by scorpions; we pray for bread, only bare bread for famishing hearts, and we are stoned. Ah! it appears only a hideous dream; but I know it is awfully, horribly true."

"What is true? Don't keep me in suspense."

Olga bent forward, put her large hands on Regina's shoulders, as the latter knelt in front of her, and answered drearily:

"He is married."

"Not Mr. Eggleston?"

"Yes—my Belmont. For so many years he has been entirely mine, and oh! how I loved him! Now he is that woman's husband. Bought with her gold. I intended to run away and marry him; go with him to Europe, where I should never see Erle Palma's cold, devilish black eyes again, where in some humble little home, hid among the mountains, I could be happy with my darling. I sold my jewelry, even my richest clothing, that I might have a little money to defray expenses. Then I wrote Belmont of my plans, told him I had forsaken everything for him, and appointed a place in this city where we could meet. I hastened down from Albany, disguised myself, and went to the place. After waiting a long time, his cousin came, brought me a letter—showed me the marriage notice. Only two days ago they—Belmont and that woman—were married—and they sailed for Europe to-day in the steamer upon which I had expected to go as bride. He wrote that with failing health, penury staring him in the face, and despairing at last of being able to win me, he had grown reckless, and sold himself to that wealthy widow, who had long loved him, and who would provide generously for his helpless mother. He said he dared not trust himself to see me again.—And so, all is over forever."

She dropped her head on her clenched hands, and shuddered.

"Dear Olga, he was not worthy of you, or he never would have deserted you. If he truly loved you, he never could have married another, for"——

She paused, for the shimmer of the diamonds on her hands accused her. Was she not contemplating similar treachery? Loving one man, how dare she entertain the thought of listening to another's suit. She was deeply and sincerely attached to Douglass, she reverenced him more than any living being; but she knew it was not the same feeling her heart declared for her guardian, and she felt condemned by her own words.

Olga made an impatient motion, and answered:

"Hush—not a word against him; none shall dishonor him. He was maddened—desperate. My poor darling! Erle Palma and mamma were too much for us, but we shall conquer at last. Belmont will not live many months; he had a hemorrhage from his lungs last week, and in a little while we shall be united. He will not long wait to join me."

She leaned back and smiled triumphantly, and Regina became uneasy as she noticed the unnatural expression of her eyes.

"What do you mean, Olga? You make me unhappy, and I am afraid you are ill."

"No, dear—but I am tired. So tired of everything in this hollow, heartless, shameful world, and I want to lie down and rest. For eight years nearly, I have leaned on one hope for comfort; now it has crumbled under me, and I have no strength. Will you let me sleep here with you to-night? I will not keep you awake."

"Let me help you to undress. You know I shall be glad to have you here."

Regina unbuttoned her shoes, and began to draw them off, while Olga mechanically took down and twisted her weighty hair. Once she put her hand on her pocket, and her eyes glittered.

"I want a glass of wine, or anything that will quiet me. Please go down to the dining room, and get me something to put me to sleep. My head feels as if it were on fire."

The tone was so unusually coaxing, that Regina's suspicions were aroused.

"I don't know where to find the key of the wine closet."

"Then wake Octave, and tell him to give you some wine. He keeps port and madeira for soups and sauces. You must, I would do as much for you. I will go to Octave."

She attempted to rise, but Regina feigned acquiescence, and left the room, closing the door, but leaving a crevice. Outside, she knelt down and peeped through the key-hole.

Alarmed by the unnatural expression of the firey hazel eyes, a horrible dread overshadowed her, and she trembled from head to foot.

While she watched, Olga rose, turned her head and listened intently; then she drew something from her pocket, and Regina saw that it was a glass vial.

"I win at last. To-morrow, mamma and her stepson will not exult over their victory. If I have an immortal soul, may God—my Maker and Judge—have mercy upon me!"

She drew out the cork with her teeth, turned, and as she lifted the vial to her lips, Regina ran in and seized her arm.

"Olga, you are mad! Would you murder yourself?"

They grappled! Olga was much taller and now desperately strong, but luckily Regina had her fingers also on the glass, and dragging down the hand that clenched it, the vial was inverted, and a portion of the contents fell upon the carpet.

Feeling the liquid run through her fingers, Olga uttered a cry of baffled rage and despair, and struck the girl a heavy blow in the face, that made her stagger; but almost frantic with terror Regina improved the opportunity afforded by the withdrawal of one of the large hands, to tighten her own grasp, and in the renewed struggle succeeded in wrenching away the vial. The next instant she hurled it against the marble mantle piece, and say it splintered into numberless fragments.

As the wretched woman watched the fluid oozing over the hearth, she cried out, and covered her face with her hands.

"Dear Olga, you are delirous, and don't know what you are doing. Go to bed, and when you lie down, I will get the wine for you. Please dear Olga! You wring my heart."

"Oh you call yourself my friend—and you have been most cruel of all! You kept me from going to a rest that would have no dreams—and no waking—and no to-morrow. Do you think I will live and let them taunt me with my folly? my failure? Let that iron fiend show his white teeth, and triumph over me? People will know I sold my clothes, and tried to run away, and was—forsaken. Oh! if you had only let me alone! I should very soon have been so quiet; out of even Erle Palma's way! Now"——

She gave utterance to a low distressing wail, and rocked herself, murmuring some incoherent words.

"Olga, your mother has come, and unless you wish her to hear you, and come in, do try to compose yourself."

Shuddering at the mention of her mother, she grew silent, moody, and suffered Regina to undress her. After a long while, during which she appeared absolutely deaf to all appeals, she rose, smiled strangely, and threw herself across the bed; but her eyes were beginning to sparkle, and now and then she began to laugh most hysterically.

When an hour had passed, and no sound came from the prostrate figure, Regina leaned over to look at her, and discovered that she was whispering some unintelligible words.

Once she started up exclaiming:

"Don't have such a hot fire! My head is scorching."

Regina watched her anxiously, softly stroking one of her hands, trying to sooth her to sleep; but after two o'clock, when she grew more restless and incoherent in her muttering, the young nurse felt assured she was sinking into delirium, and decided to consult Mrs. Palma.

Concealing the shawl and bonnet, and gathering up the most conspicious fragments of glass on the hearth, she put them out of sight, and hurried to Mrs. Palma's room.

She was astonished to find her still awake, sitting before a table and holding a note in her hand.

"What is the matter Regina?"

"Olga has come home, and I fear she is very ill. Certainly she is delirious."

"Oh! then she has heard it already! She must have seen the paper. I knew nothing of it until to-night, when Erle's hasty note from Philadelphia reached me, after I left the opera.

I dreaded the effect upon my poor, unfortunate child. Where is she?"

"In my room."

PREPARING TO SOW WINTER WHEAT.

If winter wheat is to be sown after early oats, peas, beans, early potatoes, or corn fodder, the moment the crop is off the ground, stick in the plow, or gang, or cultivator. Do not wait for rain. The weeds and stubble will pump up more water from the soil than any ordinary rainfall at this season will be likely to furnish. your plow, or in anywise work the land, it will not only destroy the weedsand check the rapid evaporation of water, but should we have a shower, the rain will penetrate deeper into the worked soil, and render it soft and mellow. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose by promptness in plowing immediately after the previous crop has been harvested.

In four years out of five, the principal difficulty in sowing winter wheat in proper season is to get the soil moist enough to cause the wheat to germinate vigorously and evenly. We must recollect that the soil, even during a severe drouth, contains in the first two or three feet a great many thousand gallons of water per acre, and still more at a greater depth. This water is certainly rising towards the surface. Any growing plant pumps it up our of the soil, and evaporates it into the atmosphere. The amount of water thus evaporated is enormous. The bare soil evaporates water from the surface as long as there is any to evaporate, but the loss of water from a bare soil is nothing in comparison with the loss on land upon which plants are growing.

In the winter wheat section of Western New York we sow our wheat from the 1st to the 20th of September. It is ready to cut from the first week in July to the first of August, varying greatly in this respect according to the season. As we go South, wheat is sown latter in the autumn, and is ready to harvest earlier in the summer.

Where the Hessian fly is troublecome, we have to avoid early sowing in the autumn. The fly lays its eggs in the young wheat plants in the autumn, and late sowing is one of the remedies. On the other hand, when wheat is liable to injury from the Midge, we have to avoid late sowing. The Midge flies lay their eggs in the ears of wheat when it is in blossom, and an early crop of wheat is far less liable to injury than a late crop.

Fortunately neither the Hessian fly nor the Midge has done much damage of late years, and the tendency among our best wheat-growers is towards earlier sowing. After the first of September it is thought desirable to sow as soon as the soil can be got sufficiently moist and mellow. It is just here where promptness, good judgment and science, are all requisite. Rain will help us but it will help us still more if we go to work as though no rain was expected. As we said before, there is water enough in the soil, but it is not near enough to the surface to cause the seed to germinate. What we have to do is to bury all the weeds, stubble, and growing plants, and to keep the surface soil fine by the frequent use of the cultivator, harrow, and roller. We know this is easier said than done—but on our strong wheat land it is the general experience that much of our success will depend on our ability to get the wheat well started in the early autumn. —American Agriculturist.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores begun to discharge freely, and rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. CANNON,
Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not being able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

His show rooms have been fitted to receive the stock of caskets, coffins, &c., of which he has the best assortment ever offered in town. Those who require the services of an undertaker will find everything needed in that line, including shrouds, robes, and all funeral requisites. Mr. Clegg has spared neither pains nor money in fitting out this department. Funerals in both town and country will receive careful and punctual attention in every case by a fully competent man.

Trent Valley Canal.

The Fenelon Falls Gazette of August 2nd contains the following in reference to the progress of the Trent Valley Canal works:—

"The canal works are now progressing favourably; but the contractors for some time past have been greatly troubled by leaks at the lower end of the cut, where the rock is so full of seams and fissures that it was almost impossible to keep the water out. They are now pushing ahead the last platform for the gates at the lower entrance, and to realize the difficulties to be overcome and the labour to be performed one has to visit the scene of operations. Three check timbers twelve inches square are rock-bolted in trenches two inches square cut out of the solid bottom, and the sides are then thoroughly packed with Portland cement and concrete, which prevents any possibility of any leakage under the gates. The depth of water at this point when the locks are in use will average about twenty-eight feet on the platform. The upper lock has been delayed on account of the mill race which has been under discussion so long, and which we are now pleased to know will soon be an established fact and will form part and parcel of the canal. The abutment for the Victoria Railway swing bridge is to be commenced next month, and the water will be lowered in Cameron Lake for a few days to allow the contractors to get in the foundations. There will then remain only a small amount of excavation at the head of the canal to complete the work, and that can only be done when the gates of the locks are in position or stop-logs put in. This excavation will of course have to be done under water, and the dredge will be employed to pick up the stuff removed. Every week several barges arrive from Bobcaygeon with cut stone, of which there is so much at the Falls that only about one hundred yards more will be required to complete the canal; but the mill race may necessitate a few months' extra work at the quarry."

THE RIFLE.

The Monthly Matches on the County Association Range.

During the months of May, June and July competitions were held on the County Association range on the last Thursday afternoon in each month, and a similar competition will take place this month. As a prize, 400 rounds of amunition was offered at each match, and in addition to that, the Ontario Rifle Association medal will be awarded to the marksman making the highest aggregate score in three out of four matches. The ranges were 200, 500 and 600 yards, five shots at each range. At the June match a very unusual wind was blowing, which accounted for the low score made that day. The following are the principal scores for the three matches which have been held:—

Bodega.

Fine Spanish wines, Ports and Sherries drawn from the wood, at William Chamberlain's Restaurant.

Moonlight Excursion.

The moonlight excursion on the steamer Golden-Eye on Saturday evening was very well patronized. Music was furnished by Reynold's orchestra for the dancing, which amusement was thoroughly enjoyed.

A Good Crop.

A few days we mentioned that Mr. John Doherty, our genial market clerk, expected to reap two and a half tons of timothy to the acre of his nine acre lot. The hay has been cut, and, although some sports were light, it averaged over three tons to the acre.

The Sweeping Remnant Sale still going on at the "Golden Lion." All ends marked very low in order to clear, and make room for their large importations of new fall goods daily arriving. Fair, VanEvery & Co purpose shewing the largest and most unique stock ever presented to an appreciative public in this town.

Temperance Address.

A devotional meeting of St. Luke's Church of England Temperance Society will be held in the school room, Ashburnham, on Tuesday evening, August 5th, commencing at 8 o'clock. At the conclusion of the service an address on Temperance will be delivered by the Rev. W. J. Allen, Millbrook, formerly curate of St. John's Peterborough. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Fired by Electricity.

On Saturday night between ten and eleven o'clock three or four strokes were given on the fire alarm, The cause of it was a small fire in the bar room of Mr. A.D. Faucher's hotel. Mr. Faucher had formerly four electric lights in his house, but the one in the dining room had been taken out. He removed the bar room light into the dining room himself, but in turning the switch after taking the light off the hanger, he did not turn it far enough around to make connection. This left a small space that the current had to jump and it caused a small spark, which burned the brass and enlarged the space. The spark therefore grew larger and finally ignited the board on which the lamp was hung. Then it was that the alarm was sounded, but the current was turned off and the fire was easily extinguished. This should be a warning to persons using these lights to be careful and not try to do too much with them without consulting the company's agent in charge. We have also been requested to mention that persons getting in electric lights, who have their property insured, should notify the insurance company,

Railway Notes.

The Montreal correspondent of the Mail writes that the opening of the Ontario and Quebec railway has had to be again postponed to the 11th of August, the Kaladar sink hole still proving insecure. Mr. George Nash, General manager, of the Detroit Grand Haveh, and Milwaulkee railway, has resigned his appointment on that road and transferred his services to the Grand Trund in this city. Mr. Spicer succeeds him, and this makes the Grand Trunk practically masters of the Michigan line. Mr. C. W. Spencer, late of Ottawa, has taken up his duties here as Assistant General Superintendent of the Eastern division of the Canadian Pacific railway. Mr. Spencer's brother, Mr. H. B. Spencer, has taken charge of the Ottawa and Brockville and St. Lawrence and Ottawa line to Prescott as Assistant Superindent.

Mr. J. Stephenson, General Passenger Agent of the G.T.R., came from Belleville this morning in a special car on the Grand Junction train.

The spring hanger on engine No, 634 of the Midland Railway, which was on the afternoon train on Saturday, broke at Stouffville, twenty nine miles this side of Toronto. After a delay of over an hour, the train proceeded to Uxbridge where it waited for another engine. The train left Uxbridge two hours and a half behind time, but it made up twenty-five minutes in the run from then to Peterborough.

Two cows were killed by the train from Midland on Saturday afternoon, one of them being decapitated by the wheels.

The Ontario and Quebec station has been connected with the telephone system, an instrument having been put in this morning.

REVIEWS.

MANHATTAN.—The frontispiece of the current number of The Manhattan is a beautiful view of Onray with the Sierra San Juan for a back ground, being one of the numerous illustrations of Mr. A. W. Cole's paper on "The Yellowstone Park" in which the writer graphically discribes the wonders of this natural pleasure ground. Canada should follow this example, and reserve some tract or tracts so as to preserve some of our now beautiful scenery in its native state. Earnest Knaufft gives a lively account of "Paul Delaroche and his pupils" with their chief works some of which are admirably reproduced. "Women Artists of the Olden Time," J. L. Corning, with illustrations from pictures in the Petti Gallery. Julian Hawthorne discourses on "Emerson as an American," and Lewis Rosenthal on "Poe in Paris" both authors finding appreciative critics. In "My Diary in London" Kate Field, chats pleasantly on the great city, and on "Knickerbocker Eyes in Mexico," F. A. Bartlett Von Gluemer introduces us in a lively manner to a very different scene. "The The New Produce Exchange" in New York is discribed somewhat critically by Montgomery Schuyler. The "Retrospections of the American Stage" by John Bernard are continued. The serial story "Trajan" grows in interest. Some good poetry, sparkling tales, town talk and reviews of recent literature complete an excellent number.

COOKERY FOR BEGINNERS.—Marion Harland is an acknowledged authority on cookery and her new book which is really for "beginners" will be very useful. It does not take too much for granted, but clearly explains matters that seem simple to professors but are a puzzle to novices. Some of the hints contained in this little volume would be serviceable even to many experts. The publishers, D. Lothrop & Co., of Boston have sensible bound it in limp waterproof cloth, so that it may not suffer from use on the spot.

A Canoe Upset.

An accident which might have terminated in a very serious manner occurred on Saturday afternoon at the locks. A canoe with three occupants—one of them a lady—being upset. We are glad to learn that none of the party was injured.

Cricket.

A cricket match was played at Campbellford on Friday between the club of that village and a team from Peterborough, which resulted in the defeat of the Peterborough by three wickets. As will be noticed by the names, only three of those who usually play in Peterborough's first eleven were present. The score was as follows:—

of every sort are on our shelves, in the fullest assortment of styles, shades and effects. Our stock of Muslins, Prints and wash goods are especially worthy of your inspection.

Now, you may think this "old news"—the third week in July, unless we say that our stock while full in all lines has been shorn of half its bulk by quick sales. The "news" we offer to-day is in the prices for which the goods may grow old on our hands, not so quickly with you when in wearing. ## Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN Hair Renewer.

Seldom does a popular remedy win such a strong hold upon the public confidence as has HALL'S HAIR RENEWER. The cases in which it has accomplished a complete restoration of color to the hair, and vigorous health to the scalp, are innumerable.

Old people like it for its wonderful power to restore to their whitening locks their original color and beauty. Middle-aged people like it because it prevents them from getting bald, keeps dandruff away, and makes the hair grow thick and strong. Young ladies like it as a dressing because it gives the hair a beautiful glossy lustre, and enables them to dress it in whatever form they wish. Thus it is the favorite of all, and it has become so simply because it disappoints no one.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

DIPLOMACY.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—A yellow book published today gives the following information concerning the negotiations between France and China. France at first demanded an indemnity of 25,000,000 francs for the affair at Langson. After China had ordered her troops to withdraw from Tonquin, France only asked that China should compensate the families of the soldiers killed at Langson, and pay the extra expenses incurred by the attack. China

OBJECTED TO THE INDEMNITY,

but on July 19th appointed the viceroy of Nankin to negotiate with M. Patenotre, French Minister. China then announced that she had submitted the indemnity questions to the Powers. Between 27th and 28th July, M. Patenotre telegraphed it was impossible to arrive at an understanding with the Chinsse delegates, who refused to pay the indemnity and asked that the time granted to accept be extended. M. Ferry thereupon telegraphed Mr. Patenotre to extend the respite if necessary. Mr. Patenotre replied that China had offered to pay an indemnity of 100,000,000 francs, and he had refused it. On July 13th France informed Admiral Courbett of her intention to occupy Foo Chow and Kelung in case China refused the French ultimatum. Admiral Caurbett was ordered to use force only if attacked.

THE FRENCH ULTIMATUM

PROPOSED ARBITRATION.

A despatch from Foo Chow says it is reported that China and France have agreed to accept the arbitration of America, but that the matter remains uncertain.

INSPECEING THE FORMS.

A Foo Chow correspondent telegraphs that he had inspected the river Forts this morning and found that no changes had been made,

The Egyptian Conference.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—At a meeting of the Egyptian Conference yesterday the German Ambassador repeated his proposal regarding the discussion of the reform of the Egyptian sanitary system. The proposition as before was declined.

The French plan would have entailed financial confusion in Egypt. Mr. Gladstone hoped that the idea that the Government had ever proposed to constitute international control similar to dual control might be dismissed. The Government was unable to consider any plan incompatible with the just and moderate though firm Government of Egypt. The Conference had adjourned—indefinitely. The Government had no proposals to submit to the House. The Anglo-French agreement had ceased to be in force and England's responsibilities in Egypt had been greatly increased.

ACTION OF THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT.

The Liberal and Radical members are satisfied with the collapse of the conference as leaving free handed. It is reported that Mr. Gladstone will make a proposition to carry out the English proposal without further reference to the other powers. The Conservatives are divided on the subject, but they generally approve of the Governments refusal to yield to France.

Libel Suits.

Suits for libel, in $25,000 each, have been instituted by two professors of Victoria University medical faculty against Dr. Lachapelle, secretary of Laval University, the latter having accused the former of giving examination papers to students previous to matriculation, and having declined to substantiate his charges before a Committee appointed by the Montreal College of Physicians to investigate the matter.

Customs Seizures.

Several extensive seizures have been effected by Customs officers in Montreal of valuable goods imported from the other side, and entered under their value, with the intention of defrauding the revenue. Some of the wealthiest and largest wholesale firms in Montreal are implicated in the transaction. Other important seizures are expected to follow.

Special to Gentlemen.

Fair, VanEvery & Co. have received a large consignment of boys' and Gents' English Fur Felt Hats (intercepted on transit to Winnipeg.) The styles are most recent and the prices so very low as to warrant a speedy sale. Go early for first choice.

MEASURES AGAINST CHOLERA.

Dr. LaRocque, Medical Health Officer of Montreal, gives some Good Advice.

Dr. LaRocque, medical health officer of Montreal having been interviewed said he did not desire to alarm the public, but there could be no doubt that cholera was spreading, and it was necessary for the inhabitants to be on their guard. He thought our quarantine regulations should be made more stringent regarding the detention of infected vessels and the people on board them. Vessels from infected districts should, whether infected or not, be held in quarantine until the period of the incubation of the disease was unquestionably over. Our trade relations with Toulon and Marseilles were, he remarked, very close, and on this account, our communication with them should be very careful. The disease could be carried in clothes or baggage, and with respect to

OUR HOTELS AND THEIR GUESTS

from Europe the closest vigilance should be exercised. Our drains ought at once to be thoroughly cleaned and flushed in such a manner that there could be no danger of deposits, however small, remaining. In Paris men were accustomed to traverse the drain for this purpose. The scavenging of the city should be so thorough that the surface of our streets, lanes and yards should be entirely free of animal and vegetable matter. All privies, drains and cellars should not only be washed and purified but should be thoroughly ventilated. All buildings and outhouses of all descriptions should be whitewashed and all swamps and watercourses should be cleansed, and placed beyond all possibility of their becoming stagnant. He would reiterat, his previous warnings against slaughter houses chandleries and soap factories. The Corporation was already proceeding before the courts against a number of these with a view to having them removed from the city. Down every grating disinfectants should be thrown, and care taken that the public markets should not cause the

CORPORATION THEMSELVES TO BE GRIEVOUS OFFENDERS

against the laws of health. He believed the water which the city consumed was comparatively good; fortunately it was not the practice here as in some other cities for the people to have wells in their own houses. All the water which was drunk should be either filtered or boiled. In order to be successful in placing the city in a proper condition, it was necessary that the authorities have the co-operation of the people, who had already been addressed as to the best means of securing the general health. Chloride of lime and other disinfectants should be freely used, and care taken that drains and waste pipes be kept in good order. Too much stress could not be laid on the necessity of ample ventilation, especially of bedrooms and workshops, which must not be over-crowded. It would be well if householders would burn their refuse as much as possible, this would not only prevent disease but would be the means of

ECONOMIZING FUEL.

Refuse which was not thus disposed of should be placed on the streets in close boxes or barrels not larger than a flour barrel. Anything larger was inconvenient to handle.

Should privies and ash pits happen to become filled to within eighteen inches of the surface, the Board of Health ought to be informed and the place cleared and washed by the aid of a hose, after which buckets of water, in each of which four pounds of copperas had been dissolved, should be poured down them. The slightest derangements in water closets should be at once attended to, and if bad odors were discovered arising from street gratings, or if any or other noxious matter were met with, the Board of Health should be at once communicated with. The fact of the existence of any contageous disease should also be made known without delay. Of all others, cleanliness was the greatest safeguard. He did not go so far as to say that people must alter their ordinary diet, but they must be careful to avoid whatever might derange their bowels. They must steer clear of every kind of excess, whether in eating, drinking, exercise, labor or sitting up. Those who were the most liable to cholera, as well as to many other diseases, were persons whose systems had been allowed to run down.

DEAD ANIMALS

Dr. LaRocque objected to the consumption of unripe fruits and such dangerous vegetables as

CUCUMBERS AND RADISHES.

Food should be well cooked; water should only be drunk when fresh, and, were there any doubt about it, it should be boiled. Alluding to the present excessive death rate among children from infantile cholera, he attributes it to improper diet and the lamentable ignorance that existed among parents as to the proper treatment of children.

Letter from Parnell.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A letter from Mr. Parnell to the local secretary of the Nationalist league in Ireland has just been published. Mr. Parnell says it is anticipated that the outcome of the Parliamentary Committee's report will be that an important improvement in the labouring classes in Ireland may be expected. The officials of the Local Government Board have given evidence confirming the report circulated by the Irish party that a measure will be prepared giving the local authorities power to take or lease land compulsorily whether attached to labourers' cottages or not, to let it to labourers at moderate prices. The measure will also impower the authorities to make repairs in the cottages. The return made to Parliament regarding the operation of the Irish arrears of rent act shows that the £2,570,000 which was owing to landlords by farmers has been wiped out since 1882. Of this Ulster gained £820,000 in remissions of rent, Leincester £250,000, Connaught one million, and Munster half a million. The Nationalist papers commenting upon this state that the Land Act has already secured to farmers a permanent reduction of rent exceeding half a million yearly. The Bishop of Limerick, the Earl of Belmore, and other members of the Commission, which has been considering the condition of education in Ireland, state that the curtailed rents were better and more regularly paid last year than since the Parnell agitation began. The relations existing between landlords and tenants are amicable. Parish schools, established for the benefit of tenants, are everywhere appreciated. The Government has resolved upon a large reduction of the forces in Ireland.

THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

He is abstemious, cautious, thoroughly capable, and whatever he does or has done since the Lydian Monarch was disabled will upon investigation, be found to have been the best and wisest course. THE PLOTS AGAINST THE CZAR.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Thus far two thousand persons, suspected of conspiracy against the Czar, have been expelled from Germany.

THE WARSAW PLOT.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 4.—A number of additional arrests have been made in connection with the palace plot against the Czar.

THE CONFERENCE.

LONDON, Aug 2.—The Egyptain conference reassembled to-day, and after session adjourned sine die, without arriving at any agreement—provisional or otherwise. Immediately after the adjournment of the Egyptian conference a meeting of the Cabinet was held to discuss the result. Mr. Gladstone admits that the conference has failed to attain its objects. The delegates were unanimous in their views respecting the protective changes in Egypt and the necessity of a fresh loan; put England and France differed irreconcilably respecting charge and receipts. France refused to assist to any diminution of the dividends payable under the law of liquidation. England was unable to accept any plans which do not provide for the necessary charges of administration.

THE EGYPTIAN CONFERENCE.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Toward the close of the Egyptian conference the French ambassador asked that a vote be taken. Earl Granville declared whatever vote was recorded, England, in respecting the French proposals, resumed her entire liberty of action. Count Von Munster then intimated that Germany would remain passive, and the Austrian and Russian representatives adopted the same attitude. M. Weddington proposed that the conference adjourn until October, but Earl Granville refused, claiming that he had the right to call the conference together whenever the emergencies of the situation required.

REFORM OF THE FRENCH SENATE.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—M. Leroyer, President of the French Senate, will preside over the National Assembly which opens Monday. The first business to be done will be the nomination of a commission of fifteen members to report on the prospect for electoral reforms in the Senate. The Government will submit a new scheme for the election of senators, whereby life senators will be replaced by senators elected for nine years, by each chamber. The present life senators are to be retained. Senatorial delegates are to be increased in ratio with the municipal councillors composing the different municipal councils throughout France. The Committee of the Chamber of Deputies has adopted the principle of the scrutin de liste for the election of deputies.

THE GREELY SURVIVORS.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H. Aug. 2.—Greely saw his children to-day for the first time since his return, and was overcome with emotion. The survivors have been declared well enough to come ashore and be cared for. They will be kept at the Navy Yard Hospital for a fortnight.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—General Kent, Vice President of the Order of Lafayette, has offered the Government a beautiful plot in Rockland Cemetry, Sparkill, as a burial place for the unclaimed dead of the Greely expedition. Seven of the thirteen bodies are thus far unclaimed.

VARIATIONS OF SPEED.

The contrivance of step cones with shifting belts is a cumbersome and troublesome one for procuring gradation of speed. In many cases it answers its purpose, but in others some more sensitive and intermediate device would be better. A change of speed is readily obtained by a change of position of a driven wheel on the face (side) of a driver wheel or disk. The face of this disk may be either straight or slightly dished, and the driven roll or small pulley traverse the face of the disk from the shaft to circumference. It is evident that while the driven wheel is nearest the shaft of the disk it will revolve the slowest; and also it is evident that as the driven wheel is run out toward the circumference of the disk it will revolve the faster.

The shaft of the driver—the disk—is, of course, at right angles to that of the driven pulley; these relative positions must be maintained. But it does not matter, in practice, whether the disk is on a horizontal or a vertical shaft, so long as the driven is so arranged as to be permitted to be placed in contact with the disk at any point from centre to circumference.

This device, with some modifications, has already been employed in the machine driving of potters' wheels and in the foot of driving of sewing machines. But it is capable of a wider adaptation, especially in the machine shop, where sudden changes or quick variations of speed are frequently necessary. The large disk may be of cast iron turned and finished, and the driven wheel of iron, leather faced, or of wood. The progress of the driven wheel from shaft to circumference of the disk—from low speed to high speed—could be controlled by lever, worked by hand or by foot treadle. It is a much closer and more sensitive device than the present system of absolute changes of speeds on our lathes and drilling machines.

TELEGRAPH MONOPOLY.

The Port Hope Times in a very able editorial discusses the present telegraph monopoly, and the best means of remedying the evil under which the business men of Canada are now suffering. It is notorious that since the amalgamation of the Montreal and Dominion Companies, the telegraph service has been both inferior and more costly. Our contemporary makes out a strong case in favour of the Government taking the telegraph into their own hands, as has been found to work successfully in Great Britain and other countries. We would feel disposed to add our voice to advocating this change, were we not in hope that the C. P. R. will shortly extend its system and that Peterborough among other places will benefit by this competition. If w are disappointed in this expectation we will certainly be prepared to advocate a change from the present unsatisfactory system, either by Government intervention or the establishment of a competing company.

THE MOWAT DEBT.

Now that Mr. Mowat is on his return and his alleged feats are being noisily proclaimed with a great deal of falsehood mingled with the panegyrics by his friends, supporters and organ, the public would like to have some light upon one of his recent undertakings. It is certain that Mr. Mowat's name will be remembered if it is only because he has been the first to lay a burden of debt upon the shoulders of the people of Ontario. Mr. John Sandfield Macdonald was tricked out of power on the false pretence among others that he was wrong in giving aid to colonization railways to develop the country, but his scheming opponents gave far larger grants, till now they are obliged under Mr. Mowat's leadership to start a Provincial debt to pay them. J. S. Macdonald left a large cash surplus from the proceeds of the conversion of our real estate capital into money; Oliver Mowat pretends to have increased this surplus, and should have done so, for he has alienated a far larger portion of the Provincial real estate, but he cannot meet his engagements without establishing a public debt of Ontario.

Reform journalists and politicians, when Sir L. Tilley recently negotiated a loan on the most favourable terms ever obtained by Canada, forgetting for a time their assertions that the country was ruined, argued that his success was due to our improved credit, and that the terms should have been even better. We have a right then to expect that Mr. Mowat would be vastly more successful in his attempts to place his new and virgin loan upon the money market, for are we not told that he is so honest and able and economical as to inspire the whole world with confidence? Yet singularly enough we hear nothing from his friends and organs of Mr. Mowat and his success with his loan, offered far higher rates than those obtained by Sir L. Tilley for the Dominion.

Is it possible that Mr. Mowat has obtained the money but that he is "keeping it dark" in contemplation of another theatrical scene, that he is arranging with the Speaker to throw the money bags down on the table of the House the next time he finds that some of his followers have made up their minds to bolt from him on his timber policy or other question, so that they have to be wheedled, coerced or purchased back, in order to save his official position and salary?

United States Customs Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The Customs revenue collected during the fiscal year ending June amounted to $194,173,000, against $213,401,000 for the previous fiscal year. It was estimated that the reduction under the tariff law of 1884 would be forty to sixty millions, but the result shows it was only nineteen millions.

Manchester Ship Canal.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Committee of the House of Commons has rejected the Manchester Ship Canal bill, and the House of Lords has thrown out the measure.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

BY LIVING ON OUR CAPITAL.

The Award saves Ontario for many years from direct taxation.—Trenton Courier (Reform.)

AN N.P. FAILURE.

The Globe says that the N.P. has failed. The Fargo, Dakota, Republican tells us that there is now no immigration from Canada to that section of country. It may be inferred, then, that the failure of the N.P. consists in its inability to drive Canadians to Dakota, as, according to the Globe, it once did.—Hamilton Spectator.

ADMIRABLE FORM.

When, then, a Federation of the Colonies or a Federation of the Empire is discussed abroad, it is natural that we in Canada should be sensative on the point; how is this Federation to affect our rights and interests? Will it interfere with our admirable form of self-government?—Montreal Herald (Reform.)

CHEAPENED BY THE N.P.

The failure of the National Policy is working good results as well as evil. There are cheaper goods in Canada now—of certain classes, than there could have been had there been no N.P. so called—cheaper sugars, for no one will deny that the multiplication of refineries has tended to lessen the price of sugars—cheaper cottons, for the multiplication of factories has surely lowered the price of cottons and so forth. And the men who are suffering are not the poor of the country or their families.—St. Catherines News (Reform.)

WEST ONTARIO JOBBERY.

No sooner is the name of some prominent gentleman made use of as the 'coming Cromwell' than the dispirited intimation follows that the situation has been made agreeable to the anticipated hero—the anti-conventionist somehow obtains new light—and through some sort of mesmeric metamorphosis the current of his political sentiment undergoes a change, transforming the party rebel and recalcitrant patriot into a rampant loyalist to machine denominations.—Newmarket Era. (Indep. Ref.)

TIRED OF THE GLOBE.

Some of the Grit journals are getting tired of the Globe's continual dinging against the National Policy, and naturally express a desire to know what the Globe's policy, or the policy of the Globe's party will be when the National Policy will have been Globed to death.—Hamilton Spectator.

MOWAT'S BACK DOWN.

Mr. Mowat declined to go before the Privy Council until the beginning of the present year, when he decided on a back down, as he discovered that the policy he was pursuing would never result in a settlement.—Ottawa Citizen.

GRAND AND JUST,

This great fabric has been built up, little by little, year by year, by Colonists; its grand and just proportions owe little to other than colonial architects; and Canada stands to-day the greatest of all Colonies that any Empire ever saw in the history of the world.—Montreal Herald (Reform.)

STATE YOUR SUBSTITUTE.

The impression conveyed by the organ, viewed in connection with its antecedents, leaves the inference very fairly put that free trade is commanded and recommended to supersede the protective policy it is doing so much to tear down, or at least render obnoxious to the people. The Globe ought to make its point and its purpose more clear. There ought to be left no room for cavil or argument. It ought to fix in the public mind what it proposes to offer as a substitute for the policy it is destroying and leave no possible room for doubt. Our suggestion is that the thing offered for that to be supplanted should be impressed simultaneously with the supplanting argument that the public might choose between the two theories.—St. Catherines News (Reform.)

THEN AND NOW.

The times have changed since the days when Mr. Mills attacked the Senate in the House of Commons. The Globe of that day sneered at him as a "schoolmaster meagrely educated," described him as "a liliputian politician," and informed him that while Providence had not gifted him with the tongue of the eloquent there existed a danger of his pursuading himself that he had been privileged to be profound.—Ottawa Citizen.

LINDSAY.

New Steamer.—The new paddle steamer Dominion, built and owned by Burke Bros. of Lindsay, made her trial trip Tuesday night, with a party of friends, accompanied by the Citizens' Band. The steamer ran up the river a few miles and returned treating the party to a genuine moonlight excursion. The Dominion is a well built and powerful boat, and will form a valuable addition to the fleet plying on the waters of the Scugog and lower lakes.

Chapter Second.—Another chapter has been developed in the mystery connected with the money lost by Mrs. Hickey, of Downeyville, and found by an Ops farmer living near Mount Horeb. It is stated that the second party, who gave the information to Mr. Hickey recently that led to the recovery of the money, did not pass the intervening time in Michigan as he said at first, but was living in Lindsay and vicinity all the time. It is understood he got a good sum from the finder for keeping quiet, but in due course had some difference with him, and resolved to "inform" in order to get even. He asked and got $50 for "informing." Those who know all the circumstances and the parties condemn the finder severely for his dishonesty; but their condemnation of the "informer" is much more severe. He should have given the information at first.—Post.

BOBCAYGEON.

Fire.—The fire that was observed last week during the storm, and that was supposed to be only a short distance away, was on the property of Mr. Christopher Fell, of Somerville. Three large, first class frame barns were destroyed, together with twenty tons of hay, and all the miscellaneous contents. A flash of lightning struck the building. As is quite customary among farmers, during the hot weather, Mr. Fell and the hired man were sleeping in one of the barns, on the hay, and Mrs. Fell, who first observed the fire from the house, which was near by, had some difficulty in awakening the men in time to get out. The buildings were insured for $2,200, but the loss will still be heavy.

Mishaps.—Several mishaps have occurred during the last few days. Mr. Richard Garlick while engaged at the Planing machine, in Mr. Trotter's Furniture Factory, had the ends of three fingers taken off. Mr. Marshall dropped off the new steamer into the canal, and was fished out by Mr. Lancaster. Marshall got dreadfully moist. The Cain Bros'. delivery horse, whilst standing in front of their store took a sudden freak into its head, and made off for Collin's hotel. It struck a lively gait at the start, and a particularly staid one at the finish. The hotel gate was right there, solid, and the horse, and the waggon, and the miscellaneous groceries were everywhere.—Independent.

Corn in Iowa.

The condition of corn in Iowa is 117 per cent; winter wheat, 95; spring wheat, 99; and oats, 99 per cent.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.

The Journal of the Young Men's Christian Association in Peterborough.

We take from the first number of Association Notes, which is being published monthly by the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association, the following extracts. They will be of interest to our readers, and will at the same time show plainly how worthy of patronage is this new periodical, which is full of interesting matter and is attractive in appearance:

YOUNG MEN'S MEETING.

We are glad to see this meeting is increasing again, both in numbers and interest. We consider it a very important one and hope soon to see the room full of young men. We have had several enquirers in connection with it, and were rejoiced the other day when one of them told us he had found peace.

NOON PRAYER MEETING.

This meeting has been very small lately and, except in large cities, is always found to be a difficult one to sustain. Those who do make time to attend even if only for a few minutes, testify to the strength received, enabling them to fight more successfully the temptation of the rest of the day. All who can meet with us from twelve to a quarter to one each day will be cordially welcomed.

REV. A. H. MUNRO'S BIBLE CLASS FOR YOUNG MEN

We have had many testimonials from those in attendance at this class of their appreciation of it. We are certainly very much indebted to Mr. Munro for the trouble he takes in connection with it. The attendance has been very fair for the hot weather, there having been an average during last few weeks of 35 young men. The class will meet (D.V.) on August 4th and 11th, after which it will be suspended for a month during Mr. Munro's absence. The subjects for the above dates will be the Gospels of Luke and John, as a whole. We give a hearty welcome to all young men to attend this interesting class.

OUR READING ROOM.

Many young men do not know what an interesting stock of reading matter we have on file. In magazine literature, we have Harper's, Chamber's, Cassell's, Leisure Hour, Sunday at Home, Continent, Punch and Grip. Also Peterborough, Montreal and Toronto dailies, and a large number of secular and religious weeklies and monthlies.

We tender our acknowledgments to the publishers of the following papers for sending them to us gratis. Peterborough Review, Examiner and Times, Omemee Herald, Lindsay Post, Midland Free Press, Orillia Packet, Port Hope Guide, Bowmanville Statesman, Campbellford Herald, Brantford Courier, St. John's News, Sherbrooke Examiner, Moose Jaw News, Calgary Herald, Winnipeg Commercial, Neepawa Canadian, Evangelical Churchman, Messiah's Herald, etc., etc.

OUR ART EXHIBITION.

In consequence of the kindness of many of our townspeople, we shall be able to exhibit a collection of works of art and curiosities that will certainly be well worth seeing. Nearly all who have been approached have willingly consented to lend us their valuables, even at a certain amount of inconvenience and risk, and for these favours we extend our hearty thanks. In addition to those collected in this town and neighbourhood, we are having some fine paintings from the Art Rooms of Wm. Scott and Son Montreal. Prices are attached to them, and if any of our citizens wish to purchase excellent works of Art, the present is a good opportunity. Friends in Sarnia and Hamilton are sending us a quantity of interesting curiosities through Mr. Gardner. We also hope to get some articles from Toronto. Among those in town who have promised to loan paintings, &c., are Messrs John Carnegie, W. Cluxton A. P. Poussette, J. H. Roper, Geo. Stethem, W. W. Johnston, J. M. Irwin. W. Law, G. M. Roger, G. B. Sproule, A. Clegg C. S. Dudman D. B. Gardner, McFarlane Wilson, D. W. Dumble, Rev. V. Clementi, T. Workman, Miss Dixon and Mrs. Haultain. Mr. Morrow has very kindly granted usthe use of the rooms over the Post Office free, for which he deserves and has our warm thanks. We believe there are a number of gentlemen in town whom we have not yet approached, who are in possession either of pictures or curiosities suitable for our object. We should be very glad if such would kindly notify the Secretary if they are willing to lend them. We will be collecting the articles up to Wednesday next 6th August. The price of admission has been placed very low and we hope the rooms will be thronged all the time the exhibition is open. Music will be provided every evening. Other attractions will be presented. Admission will be ten cents in the afternoon and fifteen cents in the evening. The exhibition will be opened Wednesday evening next 6th August and will be kept open every afternoon and evening till Saturday afternoon. Our members are asked to do all they can to make it a great success.

NOTES.

Our members should be on the look-out for our annual meeting which takes place in September. The public anniversary will be held about the same time.

We have to thank some of our lady friends for the means of making our rooms more attractive with flowers both in pots and bouquets. They are much appreciated.

The Peterborough Association will have the privilege of entertaining the Convention of Ontario and Quebec, in October. There will probably be in the neighborhood of 125 delegates. Further particulars later.

We would like some more volunteers for Invitation committee duty—to distribute printed invitations on the street half an hour before the meetings commence.

If any of our friends have old magazines or religious papers to spare, we can make good use of them by sending them to localities much in need of reading matter.

We continually have young men applying to us for assistance in getting employment. If any vacancies come under your notice please drop a card to the Secretary.

If possible, we wish to have some educational advantages for our members this winter, both on the way of Evening Classes and by "Talks" in instructive subjects. Let us have the views of our members on this matter.

The Tenth World's Conference of Young Men's Christian Associations will be held in Berlin, Germany, on August 20th to 24th. Canada will be represented by Rev. Dr. Burns, of Halifax; Rev. Dr. McVicar, of Montreal; Rev. R. Mackay, late of Kingston, and Mr. W. J. Orr, R. R. Secretary, St. Thomas.

Several Letters of introduction have been given lately to young men going to other places. If any young man of your acquaintance is leaving for a strange city he can have a letter introducing him to the Secretary of the Association there, who will help him in obtaining a boarding house, employment if needed, and friends.

PALATABLE PRESCRIPTIONS.

If we must take medicine, it is desirable that it should be made as palatable as possible. The patient is less likely to "dodge" the dose (and to get well without it, as Dr. Holmes would say), and more likely to be benefited by it if he really needs it and does take it.

Simply chewing a piece of licorice-root before and after taking the quinine will very effectually hide its bitter taste. The same methods for administration apply equally well to most other bitter medicines.

Ipecac has a repulsive, acrid taste, even as syrup. If, however, instead of sugar, glycerine is used in making the syrupy mixture, the objectionable features are materially improved.

Castor-oil in most easily given with an equal amount of glycerine, and a drop of oil of cinnamon to the ounce. The oil is not recognizable; and the mixture has only the hot, sweet taste of cinnamon, agreeably modified by glycerine. This is the best way to give this valuable medicine to children. It is also readily taken by children when mixed with coarse brown sugar, and having the mass made firm by placit it for a few minutes on ice.

A very nauseating and unpalatable medicine is cod-liver oil. One of the easiest methods for its administration is with the yellow of an egg, a drop or two of an essential oil, and half a glass of sweetened water; or it may be given with glycerine and whiskey, or glycerine and compound spirits of lavander.

Another Victory.

A Startling important discovery was made when, after long and patient experiments, the combination of Nerviline was reached. A grand victory indeed, for the suffering have an ever ready, prompt, efficient, and cheap remedy at hand. Do you know that for 10 cents you can buy a trial bottle of Polson's Nerviline and test its great power over pain of every description? Polson's Nerviline cures chills, pain in the stomach, side and back, rheumatism; in fact all pain. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

The Housewife.

A popular domestic journal for American homes, will be sent for one year free to every lady who will send at once the names and address of 10 married ladies, and 50 cents (no stamps taken). Best paper for either young or old housekeepers in existence. This offer is made only to secure names to whom to send sample copies, as we know every lady who once sees The Housewife will subscribe for it at once. Regular price $1 per year. Address, the Housewife, Rochester, N. Y.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottle were sold the past year. It relieves croup or whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest use Shiloh's porous plaster. Sold by J. D. Tully.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does noes not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the pars, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet sceptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others.

It isn't Extravagant to claim that Zopesa is a sure cure for Dyspepsia and the Liver. It is a regular prescription of a doctor of large practice, and for these troubles it is as good as the doctor himself on the spot. Ask J. D. Tully.

"OUR INDUSTRIES."

A True and Impartial Statement Correcting the Globe's Slanders.

The Monetary Times which certainly cannot be called a strong advocate for the National Policy, by giving the true version disposes of the villanous attempt of the Globe to ruin our manufacturers and their employees by inventing falsehood injurious to their credit. In spite of the length of the report of the Monetary Times we feel bound to republish it to do our share towards counteracting this dastardly attempt of the Reform organ to ruin those whose only offence is manufacturing in Canada. The Monetary Times says :—

"Reports upon the condition of various Canadian manufacturers appeared in the Toronto Globe of last Saturday and Monday, the tenor of which was so uniformly unfavorable as to excite suspicion of their truth. The object of the writers appeared to be to prove that all industries were as badly off as the cotton industry. The proprietor of the Monetary Times deemed it worth while to ascertain the correctness of many of the statements made, and accordingly a representative of this paper visited Hamilton, which the Globe's informants asserted to be in an especially dreary and despondent state, consequent upon the so-called 'flattened condition' of the iron trade. The result of his interviews with a number of the manufacturers in that important manufacturing centre will show how little ground the Globe has for its misleading and damaging statements. It is shameful that the truth should be so distorted, and the condition of many industries misrepresented, to serve political purposes.

HAMILTON.

The Monetary Times man called first upon the Messrs. Wanzer, the sewing machine makers, and inquired if it were true as the Globe states, that the "largest sewing machine factory ran short-handed and on short time until June, and there was a cut in wages six weeks ago. This statement, said Mr. Wanzer (for the statement must have referred to the Wanzer factory) is untrue, we have run right through since January, all but a fortnight, whereas in other years we have stopped as long as four or five weeks.

Another of the Globe's statements is that "this factory ran all winter with 60 or 70 men, where there was capacity for 350 men." This, said Mr. Wanzer, is distinctly untrue. "At no time last winter did we have so few hands as that. We have now from 250 to 270 men on our pay roll. As to the statement that we have fewer men employed now than we had a year ago, that is not the case. We are running full time, bar Saturday afternoon, and that half day we stop at the request of the men who desire to have it for themselves.

Proceeding next to the establishment of the Messrs. Gurney, stove founders, &c., our reporter saw two members of that firm, and enquired as to the truth of the Globe's story, that "Moulders report trade very slack. Some of the foundries were shut down lately for several weeks, and for a long time about Christmas. Some have not had their full force on at full time since then, and those which are busiest now are employing only the minimum number of hands. None of them have as many hands as they can give work to when the trade is brisk, and none of them have all their floors occupied." Mr. Gurney said, "We do not know of any Hamilton foundry of which this is true; it certainly is not of ours. We have not stopped more than 3½ days this year. Between Christmas and New Year's Day we never run, so that is nothing new."

Now as to the statement of the Globe, that "the public have to pay more for their stoves, the moulder has less work to do and less pay for doing it.' the Messrs. Gurney say : "We never paid higher wages, even during the American war, than we are paying this month. Our wages to employees are fully 25 per cent. higher than they were in 1877-8. Indeed, dull as matters were then, our payments for labor were reduced to 20 per cent. less than List prices, and continued so up to the 16th May, 1879. On the 23rd May that year we advanced our wages to 10 per cent. off list prices, a rate which lasted until April, 1880. During that month we increased them to "Board prices," as the men call them, or List rates. In May, 1881, we advanced wages to 10 per cent., above List prices, and again in March, 1892, to 20 per cent. above. It was not until December, 1883, that wages were reduced to the ordinary List prices, and they are now as great as they have ever been since. As to the statement of the Globe, that 'All the moulding shops are slack, and those that are working are only piling up stock and not selling it, it is transparent nonsense to make that an argument that hollow-ware business is exceptionally bad, for every stove foundry makes stoves ahead and 'piles them up' in July and August in preparation for winter demand. We are at present making 150 stoves per week, besides furnaces, &c.

"We have made and sold more goods last year than in any year since we have been in business," said the senior, "and we are as busy as we usually are at this season, notwithstanding the fact that we have to pay full List prices to our hands, where ten years ago or so ago we were getting them made at 20 per cent. off List or Board prices.

Passing the telegraph office, our reporter met Mr. J. H. Killey, of the engine and machine shops of Osborne, Killey & Co., and asked him how he felt, in view of the deplorable state to which the iron industries of Hamilton had been reduced. "Deplorable state!" said Mr. Killey, "what do you mean? Have ye been reading Saturday's Globe, that you talk like that?" Well, I for one don't feel 'flattened out' just yet, and I am forced to believe my own eyes as to the continued growth of manufactures here. Our own works have supplied additional or fresh machinery for a number of factories in Hamilton, and are going to do so still further. To speak of ourselves first, we shall be ready to start up next week with a shop three times its former size, gotten up this year and still being fitted. We have had steam up for the first time this week, and shall begin with fifty or sixty men.

We ourselves have made, or I know of the making of, new machinery just now for various concerns. For instance :—The Hamilton Glass Works, which will start in September with a full complement of men. Greening's Wire Works have doubled their capacity this year, and form now an important establishment. The Olmsted Works, ornamental iron, &c., have added this year new machinery and power which trebles their capacity. Into Z. Pattison's biscuit and confectionery works there has recently been put a new boiler and engine and new machinery, which practically doubles his capacity. We have recently fitted new power into the Tuckett's Tobacco Factory, and these works at any rate are not among those which, as the Globe puts it, have been, or expect soon to be, on a short time. Since whip factories are mentioned as included under this phrase, I would say that Morgan's whip factory is quite busy just now, and it is not true that they "expect to be on short time. Then the Globe man says that "the straw hat factory and the knitting factory have disappeared.' This is an extraordinary story. They have neither stopped nor disappeared, for I 'myself see them at work."

Further enquiries among manufacturers, and visits to factories, resulted in the impression that the alarmist reports to which we have referred were derived largely from recalcitrant workman, who, forgetting to contrast their large earnings of late years, with the scantier workand lower wages of the years before 1879, exaggerated reductions of time, or staff, or pay, and gave the Globe a text from which to preach immediate ruin and decay, with respect to Hamilton's industries generally. It is not denied that there is serious overproduction in cottons, in knitted goods, perhaps in woollens, and the Monetary Times was the first to warn the commercial public that the tendency of a protective tariff was to occasion overproduction. But the declaration of a lock-up of capital in textile mills, and of impending loss of some of it is one thing—wholesale assertions, largely untrue, as to the condition of the iron and allied industries are quite another. The first is a correct statement followed by a legitimate argument; the second is ill-advised, and unworthy of a powerful newspaper.

We may here present some further memoranda obtained by our representative during his tour around Hamilton.' It is no part of our business to defend a high tariff through thick and thin, as some do ; but we will not be persuaded by trades-unionists or politicians to make things out worse than they are.

THEN AND NOW.

Contrasting Hamilton in 1877 with the same city in 1884, some establishments present themselves conspicuously :

The Hamilton Bridge Works, which in 1877, had to shut down, are now busily employed.

The Burlington Glass Works were then closed down and in unsatisfactory shape. They are this year busy.

In 1877-78, the Hamilton Rolling Mills were closed and had not been worked for five years previously. It now gives employment to over 300 hands running night and day.

Seven years ago there was no Nail Factory. To-day the Nail Factory gives regular employment to 80 or 90 hands.

Before 1879, Gartshore's foundry was doing nothing, and Canada imported her water pipes from Britain. Now, all such goods are made by Hamilton & Son, Toronto, and by Gartshore in Hamilton, and the latter concern is actively employed.

What was in 1876 a large marble working place, was closed a year or two after, as unsuccessful. It is at present employing 75 or 80 men, having been converted into one of the largest wheel, hub and spoke works in the Dominion.

The Hat Works were doing, as our informant phrased it, "next to nothing" in 1877, but to-day they have some seventy hands at work.

The Hamilton Canning Works had no existence at that date, but it now employs about two hundred hands.

Six or seven years ago, the clock factory in this city was shut up, it is now at work ; and the Meriden Britannia Works have come into existence within that time.

R. M. Wanzer & Co.'s new wood works are an important concern, opened during the present year. The buildings are 70 by 360 feet in extent, and give employment to seventy men in wood working for sewing machine boxes, covers, &c.

There is a new agricultural works on Hess street, erected this year, and running for the past two or three months. Also, Jamieson, Bowes & Co. have a new foundry, said to employ about eighty men. And there is a worsted mill which had no existence in 1877.

There is an amusing description, by a French author, of an ignorant man, newly made rich, who at once got all sorts of masters to teach him what a gentleman should know. Among them was a teacher of philosophy who undertook to teach the bourgeois gentilhomme "both prose and verse." The astonishment of this rich man, M. Jourdain, was extreme, when he was told by his teacher that he, M. Jourdain, had been talking in prose all his life without knowing it. Similarly, it appears to be the case with the proprietors of the foundries and machines shops of Hamilton, that they are ruined without knowing it. At least, the Globe says as much. But it will require better authority than the person "connected with many of the Trades-Unions in Hamilton," to make its business men generally believe that "things are in a bad state in this manufacturing city."

COBOURG.

BURGLARIES.—A correspondent in Grafton says that on Sunday last as a farmer named Donald Green, residing a little east of that village, was visiting some friends in the neighbourhood, his house was broken into and a new suit of clothes, valued at $20, and $20 in money, besides other articles were stolen. The day previous a little boy working in the fields had his smock stolen. Tramps are suspected, as numbers of them have been seen in the neighbourhood lately.

NEW MACHINERY.—A very large machine, a loom, arrived here last week from the old country, and was placed in the matting factory. The machine is for weaving jute carpeting, and is the only machine of the kind in the country, that will turn out the same width of material. Probably the Globe will notice the beginning of this new industry here, in its special column, as an evidence of the failure of the N. P. The machine alluded to is a very large one, and it took three loads to transport its various pieces from the wharf to the mills.—Sentinel-Star.

ACCIDENT.—James Carry, a river driver, became intoxicated on Friday night and fell into the race way at Cooper's 'grist mill, which is at present dry. He was found at about six o'clock this morning. His injury is serious.

A WAIF.—A two weeks old girl baby was found on Saturday morning, on the door step of Dr. Curlett's residence, Hotel street, Belleville. There is no clue to the identity of child or parents.

THREATENING TO SHOOT.—At the Grand Trunk on Thursday Clark Kelong, a noted ruffian who had just returned from Michigan after a nine-year sojourn there, pulled a revolver on a switchman named Kellar and threatened to shoot him. He fled on the approach of a policeman and made his escape.

"MAY DEW"
The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubboraly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures Greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworms, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness, producing a perfectly healthy, natural, and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Personal.

Thos. Sullivan, M.D., who for the past three years has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Springfield, Minn., is at present paying a visit to his friends in Peterborough.

The Art Exhibition.

The Committee have found it impracticable to provide music as announced; public to note the fact. Everything bids fair to be in readiness for the opening to-norrow evening.

Journalistic.

The latest addition to the journals of Ontario is the Toronto Weekly News, a four-page, thirty-two column paper of solid reading matter. It is published by Mr. E. E. Sheppard, and is independent in politics.

Moonlight Excursion.

A moonlight excursion under the auspices of the "Five Social Friends" to Fancher's Summer Resort will take place on Friday, August 8th. The City Band and Orchestra are engaged.

The Northwest.

A letter received from a former resident of Peterborough, now in the Northwest, who has been travelling over the prairie, says that the prairie is looking beautiful and that the crops in the neighborhood of Brandon and Plum Creek are really magnificient.

An Upset.

While Mr. Harry Drake was driving his hack away from the late Ontario and Quebec train on Monday night the wheels accidently came in coutact with the hack driven by Mr. Frank White. White's hack was upset and damage done to the extent of ten or fifteen dollars.

Fall Driving Gloves in Buck, Antelope and Dogskin, at the Gentlemen's Furnishing Establishment, George Street.

The Exhibition.

The fine art exhibition of behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association will open to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock, and will remain open every afternoon and evening, closing on Saturday afternoon. A splendid collection of paintings, engravings, and many interesting curiosities will be on exhibition. The hours will be, in the afternoons from 2 to 6 o'clock; in the evenings, from 7.30 to 10 o'clock.

Pic-nic on the Civic Holiday.

A pic-nic will be held in Wallis' grove on the Civic Holiday in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral and under the auspices of the ladies of No. 1 Ward. A good programme of sports and games is being prepared and refreshment tables will be furnished on the grounds. A pic-nic of a similar character was held in the same place on the civic holiday last year and was a very pleasant affair, and no doubt this one will be equally successful. The management is in good hands and ample preparations will be made.

Sporting Notes.

The Lacrosse Club have two challenges for the District Championship to dispose of. On Friday the Beaverton club contest with them for the medal, and they will be accompanied by an excursion party. On Thursday, August 21st, an excursion will be run from Orillia to this town, and the Orillia lacrosse club will cross sticks with the Peterboroughs for the championship—provided, of course, it is not carried away in the meantime by the Beavertons.

On the Civic Holiday, Tuesday next, a base ball match will be played on the cricket club grounds between the Silver Stars, of Peterborough, and the Uxbridge club. This is expected to be a fine match, as the visiting clubs is said to be a first-class one.

A team of the cricket club went to Uxbridge this morning to try conclusions with the cricket club of that town.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—South-west to north-west winds; fair weather, not much change in temperature.

Hurrah for Toronto!

On the Civic Holiday, August 12th, an excursion train leaves Peterborough for Toronto at 7 a.m. and will leave the City again at 8 p.m. The return fair is low, only $1.25. Toronto abounds with places of interest well worthy of a visit. You will have about eight hours to do the city by joining this excursion.

Decidedly Cool.

This afternoon a lady reported to the police authorities that a valuable canary had been stolen out of a cage, which she had placed on the verandah of her house a few minutes before missing the songster. The thief after taking the bird out had closed the cage again. The theft was an exceedingly cool one as the house is close to the sidewalk on a much frequented street in the west end of the town.

All True.

The Bobcaygeon Independent gives publicity to the following sensible remarks:—

"The new steamer Maple Leaf arrived from Lindsay on Wednesday. She is a gay little craft and a trifle larger than the old Maple Leaf, with a much more roomy cabin, being the full width of the boat, and fitted with chairs instead of the fixed seats around the sides. The owner, Mr. Davis, of the Nogey's Creek Mills, intends putting her on the lower lake, four days in a week, Mondays, Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. She will probably make a run to Bridgenorth on Monday. There's a good trade to be worked up between this point and Peterborough, if rightly managed. The Peterborough market is always a good one to sell in; its shopping conveniences and advantages are equal to any city; its trades men are all active, lively, energetic men; and commercially and socially, Peterborough is the leading town of the Province. The Maple Leaf will be a great public convenience."

An Able Official.

The following testimony by the Winnipeg Sun to the ability, energy and fairness displayed by Mr. H. H. Smith in his new and important office will be read with pleasure but with no surprise by his friends and acquaintances in Peterborough:—

"The Interior Department has done well in appointing Mr. Walsh and Inspector H. H. Smith as joint Commissioners for adjusting conflicting land claims. Both enjoy the confidence of the settlers. Mr. Walsh has had great experience in dealing with such cases, and although Mr. Smith has only been a few weeks in the service he has manifested a disposition to deal fairly by the settler that has already won for him much respect. Under the old system, it was next too impossible to obtain an authoritative decision within a reasonable time, but the new commissioners will no doubt act promptly as well as carefully in such cases."

Pencil Points.

—Cool weather.

—One prisoner, arrested for drunkenness, in the cells last night.

—A regular meeting of the Board of Education will be held this evening.

—The voters' lists for the Town of Peterborough are in the hands of the printer.

—St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, intend running an excursion to this town about the middle of August.

Capt. Hays of Cobourg, was at the Saved Army meeting last night. She will attend the meeting this evening also.

—A young man asked the Company's agent in charge of the electric light to change a clear glass globe and put on an opaque one. A globe was furnished that reduced the light 30 per cent. and a cast iron will be procured as soon as possible.

The Grand Central Hotel.

Since the Daly Bros. assumed charge of the Grand Central Hotel many improvements have been made in the house. One of the latest was the erection of a new building in the rear, sixty by twenty two feet, which has been fitted up for sample rooms for commercial men. The building is two-story high, and in each story there are four rooms, furnished with folding doors, so that, if required, the four rooms may be used as one large one. From the second story there is an enclosed landing connecting the sample rooms with the main hotel building. The rooms are very convenient and commodious, and commercial men who have used them during the ten days since they were completed commend them highly, as well as the hotel. Mr. Hughes superintended the erection of the building and they have been decorated by Mr. W. M. Green in his best style of painting. The Grand Central will doubtless become popular with commercial men as well as the general travelling public.

"White Bronze" Ornaments.

In Mr. G. W. Morgan's drug store may be seen a statue of "white bronze," manufactured by the St. Thomas White Bronze Company. It is a female figure representing "Faith." The figure is life size and is a beautiful one. The right arm is raised and the index finger is pointing heavenward. The drapery falls about the figure in natural and graceful folds. This is a specimen of the material and work of the White Bronze Company, which manufactures art work for cemeteries, public and private grounds and buildings of this material. It is composed of pure cast zinc, refined especially for their use, never corrodes and is imperishable. Over 16,000 have been erected in the United States and Canada. One agent in Rochester has sold 300 of them, some of which have been erected over eight years, and they retain their clean and neat appearance, and one statute of this material has been standing in the city of Lucca, Italy, for over 300 years without showing any sign of change. Mr. S. Baker Edwards, P. St. D., D. C. L., F. C. S., public analyist, Montreal, made a test of the material and certifies to its purity and durability. The bronze has a beautiful surface finish, produced by a patent sand blast process, and closely resembles granite. The statue of Faith weighs six hundred pounds. The company manufacture over 500 different designs of ornamental work and monuments, to suit every taste and price. Messrs. Stapleton Morgan are the agents for this town and county, and other samples and models may be seen in Mr. Morgan's drug store.

We combine with this virtue low prices—though people are often more impressed with the latter than the former. But our prices are high enough to make sound business! low enough to make business grow! Isn't this logic? and logic applied to business. Logic alone won't sell the goods, so we combine the goods and the prices, and take our customers' orders.

We're selling everything at fully a third off—in some cases one-half off.

Our goods were not bought to sell so, but they're just the same, in material and work, as when they bring more money.

Ready Cleaner

Is the best and most durable preparation for scouring and polishing ever produced in this country. Being entirely free from all the objectionable features of such articles heretofore offered, it becomes a staple wherever introduced. For cleaning PAINTED WOODWORK, PAINTED WALLS, OIL CLOTH, WINDOWS, MIRRORS, MARBLE, BRASS, TIN, COPPER, STEEL and all other metals, COOKING UTENSILS and CROCKERY, it is unequalled in its effects, and being free from alkalies and acids, will give a lasting brilliancy and with little labor. Accompanying each package is a circular with full directions for use.

READY CLEANER has been adopted for all cleaning purposes in the largest Public Buildings in New York and vicinity, and also by Railroad Companies, the Fire Department, Hotels, and other institutions, where economy in labor and time is a consideration. For domestic uses it has been pronounced indespensible in every family. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials to the superiority of this preparation could be adduced, but we prefer, however, that in practical use it shall prove for itself—as we guarantee all that is claimed for it.

The READY CLEANER is put up in strong, square, pasteboard boxes, containing one pound each, and sold retail for 25 Cents.

Business men will please note this fact.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1884.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Piano for Sale.

A fine little piano in good order for sale, price $50, at Hartley's, Hunter street.

Personal.

Thos. Sullivan, M.D., who for the past three years has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Springfield, Minn., is at present paying a visit to his friends in Peterborough.

The Art Exhibition.

The Committee have found it impracticable to provide music as announced; public to note the fact. Everything bids fair to be in readiness for the opening to-morrow evening.

Journalistic.

The latest addition to the journals of Ontario is the Toronto Weekly News, a four-page, thirty-two column paper of solid reading matter. It is published by Mr. E. E. Sheppard, and is independent in politics.

Moonlight Excursion.

A moonlight excursion under the auspices of the "Five Social Friends" to Faucher's Summer Resort will take place on Friday, August 8th. The City Band and Orchestra are engaged.

The Northwest.

A letter received from a former resident of Peterborough, now in the Northwest, who has been travelling over the prairie, says that the prairie is looking beautiful and that the crops in the neighborhood of Brandon and Plum Creek are really magnificient.

An Upset.

While Mr. Harry Drake was driving his hack away from the late Ontario and Quebec train on Monday night the wheels accidently came in contact with the hack driven by Mr. Frank White. White's hack was upset and damage done to the extent of ten or fifteen dollars.

Fall Driving Gloves in Buck, Antelope and Dogskin, at the Gentlemen's Furnishing Establishment, George Street.

The Exhibition.

The fine art exhibition of behalf of the Young Men's Christian Association will open to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock, and will remain open every afternoon and evening, closing on Saturday afternoon, A splendid collection of paintings, engravings, and many interesting curiosities will be on exhibition. The hours will be, in the afternoons from 2 to 6 o'clock; in the evenings, from 7.30 to 10 o'clock.

Pic-nic on the Civic Holiday.

A pic-nic will be held in Wallis' grove on the Civic Holiday in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral and under the auspices of the ladies of No. 1 Ward. A good programme of sports and games is being prepared and refreshment tables will be furnished on the grounds. A pic-nic of a similar character was held in the same place on the civic holiday last year and was a very pleasant affair, and no doubt this one will be equally successful. The management is in good hands and ample preparations will be made.

Sporting Notes.

The Lacrosse Club have two challenges for the District Championship to dispose of. On Friday the Beaverton club contest with them for the medal, and they will be accompanied by an excursion party. On Thursday, August 21st, an excursion will be run from Orillia to this town, and the Orillia lacrosse club will cross sticks with the Peterboroughs for the championship—provided, of course, it is not carried away in the meantime by the Beavertons.

On the Civic Holiday, Tuesday next, a base ball match will be played on the cricket club grounds between the Silver Stars, of Peterborough, and the Uxbridge club. This is expected to be a fine match, as the visiting clubs is said to be a first-class one.

A team of the cricket club went to Uxbridge this morning to try conclusions with the cricket club of that town.

The Probabilities.

The weather probabilities for this district for the twenty-four hours, counting from one o'clock this morning, as reported from the Toronto Observatory, are as follows:—South-west to north-west winds; fair weather, not much change in temperature.

Hurrah for Toronto!

On the Civic Holiday, August 12th, an excursion train leaves Peterborough for Toronto at 7 a.m. and will leave the City again at 8 p.m. The return fair is low, only $1.25. Toronto abounds with places of interest well worthy of a visit. You will have about eight hours to do the city by joining this excursion.

Decidedly Cool.

This afternoon a lady reported to the police authorities that a valuable canary had been stolen out of a cage, which she had placed on the verandah of her house a few minutes before missing the songster. The thief after taking the bird out had closed the cage again. The theft was an exceedingly cool one as the house is close to the sidewalk on a much frequented street in the west end of the town.

All True.

The Bobcaygeon Independent gives publicity to the following sensible remarks:—

"The new steamer Maple Leaf arrived from Lindsay on Wednesday. She is a gay little craft and a trifle larger than the old Maple Leaf, with a much more roomy cabin, being the full width of the boat, and fitted with chairs instead of the fixed seats around the sides. The owner, Mr. Davis, of the Nogey's Creek Mills, intends putting her on the lower lake, four days in a week, Mondays, Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. She will probably make a run to Bridgenorth on Monday. There's a good trade to be worked up between this point and Peterborough, if rightly managed. The Peterborough market is always a good one to sell in; its shopping conveniences and advantages are equal to any city; its trades men are all active, lively, energetic men; and commercially and socially, Peterborough is the leading town of the Province. The Maple Leaf will be a great public convenience."

An Able Official.

The following testimony by the Winnipeg Sun to the ability, energy and fairness displayed by Mr. H. H. Smith in his new and important office will be read with pleasure but with no surprise by his friends and acquaintances in Peterborough:—

"The Interior Department has done well in appointing Mr. Walsh and Inspector H. H. Smith as joint Commissioners for adjusting conflicting land claims. Both enjoy the confidence of the settlers. Mr. Walsh has had great experience in dealing with such cases, and although Mr. Smith has only been a few weeks in the service he has manifested a disposition to deal fairly by the settler that has already won for him much respect. Under the old system, it was next too impossible to obtain an authoritative decision within a reasonable time, but the new commissioners will no doubt act promptly as well as carefully in such cases."

Pencil Points.

—Cool weather.

—One prisoner, arrested for drunkenness, in the cells last night.

—A regular meeting of the Board of Education will be held this evening.

—The voters' lists for the Town of Peterborough are in the hands of the printer.

—St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, intend running an excursion to this town about the middle of August.

Capt. Hays of Cobourg, was at the Saved Army meeting last night. She will attend the meeting this evening also.

—Return tickets at single fare will be issued on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk on Peterborough Civic holiday, August 12th.

—A young man asked the Company's agent in charge of the electric light to change a clear glass globe and put on an opaque one. A globe was furnished that reduced the light 30 per cent. and a cast iron will be procured as soon as possible.

The Grand Central Hotel.

Since the Daly Bros. assumed charge of the Grand Central Hotel many improvements have been made in the house. One of the latest was the erection of a new building in the rear, sixty by twenty two feet, which has been fitted up for sample rooms for commercial men. The building is two-story high, and in each story there are four rooms, furnished with folding doors, so that, if required, the four rooms may be used as one large one. From the second story there is an enclosed landing connecting the sample rooms with the main hotel building. The rooms are very convenient and commodious, and commercial men who have used them during the ten days since they were completed commend them highly, as well as the hotel. Mr. Hughes superintended the erection of the building and they have been decorated by Mr. W. M. Green in his best style of painting. The Grand Central will doubtless become popular with commercial men as well as the general travelling public.

"White Bronze" Ornaments.

In Mr. G. W. Morgan's drug store may be seen a statue of "white bronze," manufactured by the St. Thomas White Bronze Company. It is a female figure representing "Faith." The figure is life size and is a beautiful one. The right arm is raised and the index finger is pointing heavenward. The drapery falls about the figure in natural and graceful folds. This is a specimen of the material and work of the White Bronze Company, which manufactures art work for cemeteries, public and private grounds and buildings of this material. It is composed of pure cast zinc, refined especially for their use, never corrodes and is imperishable. Over 16,000 have been erected in the United States and Canada. One agent in Rochester has sold 300 of them, some of which have been erected over eight years, and they retain their clean and neat appearance, and one statute of this material has been standing in the city of Lucca, Italy, for over 300 years without showing any sign of change. Mr. H. Baker Edwards, P. St. D., D. C. L., F. C. S., public analyist, Montreal, made a test of the material and certifies to its purity and durability. The bronze has a beautiful surface finish, produced by a patent sand blast process, and closely resembles granite. The statue of Faith weighs six hundred pounds. The company manufacture over 500 different designs of ornamental work and monuments, to suit every taste and price. Messrs. Stapleton Morgan are the agents for this town and county, and other samples and models may be seen in Mr. Morgan's drug store.

We combine with this virtue low prices—though people are often more impressed with the latter than the former. But our prices are high enough to make sound business! low enough to make business grow! Isn't this logic? and logic applied to business. Logic alone won't sell the goods, so we combine the goods and the prices, and take our customers' orders.

We're selling everything at fully a third off—in some cases one-half off.

Our goods were not bought to sell so, but they're just the same, in material and work, as when they bring more money.
